[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Jim Farley's penchant for green ink and letter writing has got him and the New Dealers into a fretful predicament which has political circles laughing out loud.

The matter also has its serious aspects, for involved is the question of whether the political impresario of the Roosevelt administration has or has not indorsed Upton Sinclair, Socialist-Democratic candidate for governor of California.

The incident grew out of a letter received by a California lieutenant of Sinclair's, which was written on the stationery of the Democratic national committee, and was signed, in the green ink which has become distinctively Farley's, by "James A. Farley."

Letter Praises Johnson.

The letter, after extoling Hiram Johnson, senatorial candidate for re-election, said that "by electing Upton Sinclair, your popular Democratic candidate for governor, California will have a combination of leaders in Washington and Sacramento who can coöperate in the best interests of the state and of the nation."

A postscript, written in longhand, in Farley's handwriting, also in green ink, stated: "Friends of the administration in Washington will be grateful for all your efforts. J. A. F."

The Sinclair forces, in possession of this letter, set the stage for announcing on Sinclair's behalf the indorsement of the Roosevelt administration. Sinclair first let it be known that he thought a Roosevelt indorsement would cinch his election. It was planned next to spring the letter.

Letter Leaks Out.

But the letter leaked out aforehand, and now the matter has taken the strange turn that Mr. Farley refuses to affirm or deny whether he sent the letter. This morning the incident was made the subject of a heavy conference at the White House between Louis McHenry Howe, chief secretary to the President; Postmaster General Farley, and Emil Hurja, executive secretary of the Democratic national committee.

It was learned that the letter in question was but one of thousands of similar letters sent all over the country to Democratic workers in the various states. Both signature and postscript were stamped on the letters, with a special rubber stamp designed from Farley's handwriting.

This was the system followed by Farley during the presidential campaign in 1932. He sent out nearly a million pieces of "personal" mail, and only a microscopic inspection could detect the fact that the signature had been rubber-stamped.

Notes of Appreciation.

The Farley idea was that the political workers, high and low, who received these letters would be flattered with a personal note of appreciation from the party chairman. This was also the idea in sending out the letters in the present campaign.

But it now appears that Mr. Farley, quite wabbly as to whether the national administration ought or ought not to show active support to a radical such as Sinclair, ordered the California letters to be held back until a decision was made. Somehow the letters slipped out, and now Farley is having quite a time of it.

Hurja, who is in direct charge of sending out the tons of campaign material, said he hasn't seen the letter.

President Roosevelt, asked again today to take a stand in the Sinclair campaign, replied that he could not take part in any state campaign.

Roosevelt Is Reticent.

Despite this reticence on the part of the New Dealers, it is now an open secret that President Roosevelt, Farley, and the rest of the New Dealers, including even those formerly enthusiastic Sinclairians, Relief Administrator Hopkins and Secretary Ickes, are secretly hoping for Sinclair's defeat. After giving tacit approval to the Sinclair experiment, in principle, the

U. S. JUDGE GIVES HUMPHREYS 18 MONTHS IN CELL

Also Fined $5,000 as Tax Dodger.

Murray Humphreys, who for a brief period was Chicago's Public Enemy No. 1 as the successor of Al Capone, and who has been a fugitive for the last 18 months, transacted business in a hurry with the government yesterday. Within four hours after his arrest he had pleaded guilty to income tax evasions, was tried and sentenced to imprisonment for 18 months and fined $5,000.

The capture was by Humphreys' arrangement near Whiting, Ind. The plea of guilty was with his own consent and the advice of his counsel, Edward J. Hess. The sentence was by Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward.

Returns to Take His Medicine.

It took but a short time for the government to present its case against the man who, his counsel said, had returned to take his medicine. Assistant Attorney General E. Riley Campbell gave the court Humphreys' history as follows:

In 1918 he served six months for burglary. In 1927 he was fined $50 for disorderly conduct and was charged with carrying a concealed weapon and with vagrancy. In 1927 and 1928 he was in the restaurant and speakeasy business. In 1929 he became a partner in the Drexel Cleaners and Dyers company, 4722 Cottage Grove avenue. In 1930 he tried to muscle into the bill posters' union.

Then he became associated with Al Capone and became head of the Capone gang when Capone went to prison. His principal business was bootlegging, racketeering, and gambling. Some of the income on which he did not pay taxes, according to the prosecution, was derived from the $50,000 ransom paid for the release of Robert Fitchie, official of the milk wagon drivers' union who was kidnaped.

Indicted on Racket Charge.

He was indicted in the state courts as a racketeer and on June 2, 1933, the government indicted him on charges of income tax evasion, charging that he owes $711 on his income of $20,000 for 1930, $11,850 on an income of $88,712 in 1931, and $10,629 on an income of $60,489 in 1932.

When Prosecutor Campbell finished that summary of Humphreys' career, Defense Attorney Hess made his plea for leniency. He said the defendant, 34 years old, "is still a boy," and deserved some consideration for surrendering. Attorney Hess listed punishments given other income tax evaders and declared:

"Many politicians were given the chance to make a cash settlement with the government. Humphreys is not asking such a settlement. He expects to go to the penitentiary and I think 15 months or a year and a day would fit his case."

"What about that Fitchie kidnaping?" Judge Woodward asked.

"The government has only the word of 94 year old Steve Sumner on that," Hess replied

Denies Part in Kidnaping.

United States Attorney Green stepped up and said part of the government's charge was that Humphreys obtained the $50,000 paid as ransom for Fitchie. Hess said Humphreys denied participating in the kidnaping.

Judge Woodward asked what the prospects were of the government collecting what it alleges Humphreys owes. Hess said Humphreys' sole remaining property is an interest in a cleaning and dyeing plant that has paid him $50 a week. Then for the first time in the proceedings the voice of Humphreys was heard, and he explained the Drexel company had been merged with another concern and he now has a one-sixth interest in the merged company.

The sentence followed. While awaiting transportation to Leavenworth prison Humphreys revealed that he had been hiding in Mexico since his indictment, dividing his time between Mexico City and Lower California. After arranging for the retention of Attorney Hess through his mother, Humphreys said he telephoned Clarence Converse of the United States intelligence bureau and Converse picked him up at the Indiana state line.

Humphreys said he expects to go to California to live after he serves his sentence. He remarked that he was glad to get off with a term of 18 months.

Lynch Negro In Florida as Girl's Slayer

BULLETIN.

Marianna, Fla., Oct. 27 (Saturday).—(AP)—The body of Claude Neal, Negro, mutilated and shot, was brought into Marianna early today by a small crowd of men and strung from a tree on the courthouse lawn. The group of men said the body had been found lying in front of the home of George Cannidy, father of Lola Cannidy, whom the Negro was charged with having ravished and murdered. The body indicated, observers said, that the Negro had been dead since about 10 o'clock. In addition to bullet holes and knife wounds the body was otherwise mutilated.

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

Greenwood, Fla., Oct. 26.—A crowd of several thousand persons, gathered to see the lynching of Claude Neal, 23, Negro, slowly dwindled away tonight to 1,000 of the determined who remained to witness the death of the man accused of raping and slaying Lola Cannidy, 22 year old white girl.

The crowd began gathering at noon when word spread that a mob had entered the Brewton, Ala., jail and was bringing Neal back to the scene of the crime.

The lynching was planned for between 3 p. m. and 9 p. m., central time, first reports said. But when the crowd grew to unexpected size a "committee of six" appeared and said they feared disorder and that Neal would not be killed until the crowd grew smaller.

"Committee of 6" Reports.

The "committee" said they had Neal "down in the woods," a short distance away, and as soon as they believed it safe he would be brought out and killed. They said they feared shooting, as there were numerous armed men in the crowd, and wanted to wait until it was safe.

C. L. Watford, who has the only telephone connecting this village of 400 persons with the outside, estimated that the crowd at first numbered 3,000.

Natives of the county in the crowd when questioned said they recognized no officers and none could be found. Gov. Dave Sholtz had offered to call out troops if needed, but the Jackson county sheriff said he felt he was capable of handling the situation.

The crowd first gathered in front of the farm home of George Cannidy, father of the slain girl, in response to messengers who had said "there will be a lynching" at the Cannidy home. It was made up of men, women, children and babies in arms.

A man who identified himself as a member of the Florida legislature made a humorous address and promised action, but urged his audience to be quiet.

The Cannidy family, father, mother, eight children and aunts and uncles, came from the house and stood before the crowd.

A member of the lynching committee said the Negro first would be brought to the home and the family allowed to do with him as they pleased, then he would be taken to a pigpen a half mile away in the middle of a cotton field and slain. That point was where the girl's body had been found.

Attempts to seize the Negro, which caused authorities quickly to move him out of three jails, met with success early today when a mob of 100 men stormed the Brewton jail. Sheriff G. S. Byrne said the raiders came to the jail in 30 automobiles bearing Florida license plates.

"We'll tear your jail up and let all the prisoners out if you don't turn him over to us," the mob told the jailer, Byrne said he was informed.

Appeal to Governor.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People sent a telegram from New York to the governor of Florida demanding that he send troops to prevent the lynching. Walter White, secretary of the association, said this is the first time since Jan. 26, 1921, a lynching has been announced in advance.

Miss Cannidy's body was found last Friday beneath a mound of pine trees near her home here. A hammer was found beside the body. She had been beaten on the head. Neal was arrested after it was reported tracks led to his home from the scene of the murder and bloodstained clothing was found in his house. After his arrest Neal was taken to Alabama for safekeeping.

Widow Names Advertising CompanyHead

Mrs. Belle Daiches, widow of Eli Daiches, who was shot and killed last March, last evening presented to Judge Benjamin P. Epstein of the Circuit court a petition for an injunction in which she asserted her husband had been murdered "at the instance and upon the direction of the Thomas M. Bowers Advertising agency and its president, Louis J. Weitzman," for the purpose of collecting $287,799 of insurance on the life of Daiches.

Judge Epstein, after reading the petition, immediately ordered an injunction restraining the removal of $100,000 from a bank account of the Thomas M. Bowers company, now in the Continental Illinois National bank.

Writ in Effect at Once.

Mrs. Daiches, who was represented by Attorney Isaac Lipson, furnished a bond of $1,000 and the injunction went into effect. Neither the agency nor its president, said to be in New York, was notified of the hearing.

Louis Weitzman is a brother of Irving Weitzman, head of the Dotty Lee Bakeries and one of three men now under indictment for the murder of Daiches, who was an executive of the Bowers firm. The others indicted are Walter Murphy, alias James Murphy, and Jack London, hoodlums who are alleged to have been hired by Irving Weitzman to accomplish the murder.

Petition Accuses Three.

The petition stated that Daiches had been killed in front of the Sherry hotel by Murphy, London, and one Jerry Pilot, who has since been shot to death. Statements made by Murphy and Arthur Emblen, another hoodlum who claimed to have been hired by Irving Weitzman to do away with Daiches, were included in the petition, which is formally an amendment of a previous one filed by Mrs. Daiches in an effort to obtain title to the assets of the Bowers agency.

Further, the petitioner declared that since insurance companies paid the death claims on the slain executive, Louis J. Weitzman has withdrawn $100,000 personally and has paid $33,000 of this to his brother.

Charges Deal Through Bakery.

Checks for $15,000 and $18,000, she averred, were handed over by Louis Weitzman to the Dotty Lee bakeries last May, although the Weitzman brothers had no business dealings.

These payments were made, Mrs. Daiches stated in the court document, as a result of a conspiracy between Louis and Irving to murder Daiches and get the $287,799 insurance. It was her contention, stated in the petition, that of this amount the agency, dominated by Louis J. Weitzman, has expended $78,000 besides the $100,000 he is alleged to have taken personally, and there is now in the Continental bank $114,994.99. Under the injunction the excess over $100,000 may be used by the agency.

"Weitzman Salary Raised."

It was asserted in the petition that Louis J. Weitzman, although his agency has been operating this year at a loss, has increased his salary from $200 a week to $350 a week.

Mrs. Daiches prayed the court to find that she is the legal heiress to the insurance money and to force Louis J. Weitzman to return the $100,000 he took personally.

Mrs. Daiches was in court, but refused to elaborate on the charges, merely remarking that she hoped the police had solved the murder of her husband.

Link Gun to Second Murder.

It was disclosed yesterday that bullets from the same gun were found in the bodies of Daiches and of Frank Toner, south side bartender who was shot and killed Aug. 15. Thus three murders, those of Daiches, Pilot and Toner, are linked by the state's attorney's office.

Toner was a friend of Pilot and was on his way home from the latter's funeral when he was shot. Both men are believed to have been slain, possibly by Murphy and London, because they knew too much about the Daiches killing.

Irving Weitzman and Murphy are in custody. London is being sought.

2 N. U. Youths Killed, 3 Girls Hurt in Crash

Two Northwestern university students were killed, three others seriously and possibly fatally injured, and a sixth less seriously hurt when the automobile in which they were riding plunged off a five foot embankment on the Deerfield road in Deerfield, Lake county. The dead students were Don Schulte, 22 years old, 1049 Lyon avenue, Hammond, Ind., and Charles Bounds, 22, 6417 Van Buren street, Hammond.

The three critically injured, all of Chicago, are Natalia Rogers, 1219 Greenleaf avenue, a senior in journalism; Mary Jane Graves, 2038 Home avenue, and Virginia Burnham, 6846 Clyde avenue, a sophomore. The driver of the car, Dudley Perrine, 6511 North Leavitt street, was the least severely injured, suffering only a knee contusion and shock. The three girls were badly cut about the face and, according to Dr. Grover Q. Grady at Highland Park hospital where the injured were taken, all may have fractured skulls.

Percy McLaughlin, chief of police in Deerfield, who investigated the accident, said the party was returning to Evanston and lost the way in the fog while hunting for Skokie boulevard. On a sharp curve Perrine lost control of the car and plunged over the embankment. Miss Graves was a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority and the other girl of Kappa Alpha Theta. The boys all were members or pledges of the Wranglers' fraternity.

DAUGHTER OF U. S. SENATOR, MISSING 6 DAYS, IS FOUND

Reno, Nev., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Miss Patricia McCarran, 15 year old daughter of United States Senator Patrick A. McCarran, reported missing by Reno police, has been located, her mother said here tonight.

Mrs. McCarran said her daughter was with Senator McCarran, who, she said, would arrive here tomorrow. Senator McCarran left Miami, Fla., yesterday after attending the American Legion convention.

Police said they were notified Miss McCarran left her home here Monday and that they learned she spent one night in a Reno hotel.

Reports received by officers here were that department of justice agents had intercepted a girl at Pueblo, Colo., who had obtained train or bus transportation from Elko, Nev., to Washington, D. C.

Heads of department of justice units at San Francisco and Salt Lake City said they knew nothing about Miss McCarran's reported disappearance.

Mrs. McCarran declined to comment on the matter other than to say her daughter had been located.

CHARGE INSULL TOOK 'PROFIT' AS COMPANY FAILED

Expert Bares 1931 'Dividend.'

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Harold Huling, special assistant to the attorney general, went on the witness stand in Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson's court yesterday afternoon to weave together for the prosecution the texture of financial evidence in the Insull mail fraud case so that the jury may have a comprehensive tapestry of the government's case against Samuel Insull and his 16 fellow defendants.

Mr. Huling, who is a former expert accountant for the department of justice and the possessor of a master's degree in economics and accounting from Columbia university, has had supervision of 15 accountants and four special agents in the two years' preparation of this case.

Charges Loss—and Dividends.

He gave a preliminary sketch yesterday of the finances of the Corporation Securities company in 1929, showing that dividends that were paid stockholders that year could not have come out of earnings, as there was a book loss, according to his theory of right bookkeeping, of $614,154.

This picture was at once branded as false by the defense and many objections were offered to giving the jury a chart showing such a conclusion. The court took this matter under advisement at adjournment last night. Mr. Huling will be on the stand at this morning's session. He is the last of the major witnesses for the government, which expects to conclude its case in chief early next week.

Shows Heavy Borrowing.

Other testimony of the day dealt with evidence that the company which was to be the pride of the elder Insull's career was in desperate straits in 1931, borrowing money from banks in New York and Chicago, with the banks demanding more and more of the best collateral, the stock of the operating companies. The records of the meetings of the executive committee at this time showed complete domination by Mr. Insull in financial policies. The meetings were merely ratifications of things that he had done.

Mr. Insull and ten of his co-defendants, it was further shown, divided $53,767 among themselves in cash dividends on Nov. 2, 1931, only a few months before bankruptcy descended upon the company.

$10 Mushrooms to $518.

One chart presented by the government was a graphic representation of how the Insull companies "pyramided" the stock dividends in their various companies. It showed a point vigorously disputed by the defense, that a basic $10 dividend under the Insull method became $518.62 with nothing more than the original value behind it.

The defense succeeded in blocking, at least temporarily, an effort to show through the income tax figures given by the Insulls, senior and junior, in the years 1929, 1930, and 1931, the cost of the 152,000 shares of Utility Investment stock which they turned in at the organization of Corporation Securities.

Attorney Floyd E. Thompson argued against this information when the government put on the stand William A. Jarvey, tax expert who had made out the returns.

Hunt Common Law.

The court was in doubt about the common law rules in such a point, and also as to the importance of showing values of a remote period. He said that there might be a difference of hundreds of millions of dollars in the value of Ford company stock, for instance, now and in the early days. Mr. Thompson said that the tax reports were true and the returns were available, but that the cost of stock 50 years ago, "when Samuel Insull came to Chicago and started a little electric light plant in the loop," had nothing to do with the value put on them later.

Special Prosecutor Leslie E. Salter said it was important to show that the Insulls got back more than they put into the company. He previously had shown that they had taken out $429,265. The court deferred ruling and the witness was withdrawn.

Analyzes Insull Circular.

The witness Huling testified he had analyzed a circular put out by the company in which they claimed $80,000,000 in assets in 1929. His tabulation showed:

Net cost of assets	$ 7,613,500
Anticipated cash from public for stock	49,092,300
Write-up of Insull Utility Investment company stock	23,294,200

Q.—Was the income in securities sufficient to pay the cash dividend requirements? A.—The yearly cash dividend requirements were $2,100,000. The income from securities was $452,412.

He testified that the company held 91.3 per cent of their security portfolio in stock of Insull Utility Investment company and Middle West Utilities.

Object to Profit Statement.

When it came to the question of profit or loss for the first year of operation there was objection to his conclusions. The court permitted him to state income and expenses, which he did as follows:

Income	$353,856
Expenses	968,011

He compared the income figures from the Insull books with income figures on their public statement, as follows:

Income computed from books	$353,856
Income on public statement	638,856

There was a discrepancy in expenses here, also, the statement giving only $4,980.

Calls Computation Unfair.

Mr. Thompson said that any schoolboy would know the witness' method of computation was unfair. The witness said that the company had charged expenses against capital and had credited stock dividends as income.

"I did not use that system of bookkeeping," said Huling.

The elder Insull, it has been shown, dictated this policy against the advice of auditors. Such a policy is not now allowable on the New York Stock exchange, according to the prosecutor.

Minutes of executive meetings read to the jury showed that on Aug. 17, 1931, Mr. Insull had borrowed $5,000,000 from the National City Bank of New York, giving stock of his operating companies as collateral.

Insull Protected on Loan.

He himself was to be "forever saved and protected from any damage" as a result of the loan. On Sept. 21, 1931, with market value of securities at $67,967,673 and notes payable $27,641,951, the regular quarterly dividend was declared. On Sept. 28 the committee ratified action in borrowing stock of the operating companies from Middle West Utilities, as the banks were objecting to securities other than these. A letter of Sept. 24, 1931, was read showing that the New Hampshire insurance commissioner had suspended Corporation Securities from business in that state and criticized the company for holding so much stock in the Insull properties. On Oct. 5, 1931, the National City bank called for additional collateral and the directors proceeded to borrow good stock from their other companies. They also borrowed $500,000 from Insull Utilities on a demand note.

Wayne S. Murphy, accountant from the department of justice, was on the stand most of the day. He is the sixth of the prosecution's seven key witnesses called to clarify and summarize the case.

He testified that during the life of Corporation Securities from October, 1929, to April, 1932, it distributed to the public and twelve of the defendants a total of $4,333,314 in dividends on preferred stock.

Insull Gets Lion's Share.

The defendants' shares were $429,265. Of this amount Insull received $252,547 and his son received $39,009. Charles B. Stuart received $50,178. The particular distribution of dividends which the prosecution emphasized was that of $53,767 to the defendants on Nov. 2, 1931, less than six months before the company's collapse. The total distribution on this date was $558,120.

The defendants' shares were: Insull, $31,539; Insull Jr., $4,818; Charles B. Stuart, $5,779; Clarence T. MacNeille, $3,750; Frank K. Schrader, $4,500; Clarence W. Sills, $2,631; Edward J. Doyle, $150; P. J. McEnroe, $150; John F. O'Keefe, $75; Waldo F. Tobey, $300, and Robert W. Waite, $75.

Fred H. Scheel, another defendant, who shared in other dividends, did not participate in this one.

Explains Stock Pyramiding.

To visualize the alleged "pyramiding" of common stock in three Insull companies' dividends during 1930, a chart was placed in view of the jury and was explained by Murphy.

The "pyramiding" was done, he said, by having the company which declared the stock dividend give an arbitrary low value for each share on its books. Then the company which received the stock as dividend would give it the market price in its accounts, Murphy declared. The market price was above the actual value, the government contends. According to Murphy, Middle West gave each share of stock a $10 value while Utility Investments listed the Middle West stock which it received at $33.75.

When Utility Investments issued a dividend in stock it gave it a value of $20. Corporation Securities listed the dividend at $68.62. When the latter declared a dividend it put the stock on its books at $5. Utility Investments, receiving this dividend, listed it at $22.50, Murphy said. These calculations he interpreted to show that the original $10 dividend had skyrocketed to $518.62.

STAVISKY BEAUTY ADMITS KILLING WIDOW FOR GEMS

Gambling Lover Gives Up $13,000 Loot.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 26.—The sinister name of the late Serge [Handsome Alex] Stavisky was linked to one more grisly crime today. The police discovered that Marie Lemoine, 34 years old, former cancan dancer and proprietress of a fashionable vice den, whom they have arrested as the author of one of the most cold blooded murders in French criminal annals, was for two years mistress of the arch swindler.

Mlle. Lemoine, who is known to night life habitues as the "queen of diamonds," according to the police, has confessed it was she who on Wednesday afternoon slit the throat of Mme. Piestre Cormon, wealthy 84 year old widow of the famous French painter. Police charge the dancer escaped with about $13,000 worth of jewels and bank notes.

Denounced by Lover.

The confessed murderess was denounced by her lover, Antoine Nicolai, a Corsican and cashier in a gambling club. He yesterday turned over to the police jewels and money belonging to the murdered woman, saying that Marie had brought them to him immediately after the crime.

Nicolai was arrested following a declaration made by Marie that she had committed the crime at his instigation. Because Nicolai is a professional gambler, the case is strongly reminiscent of Stavisky, who recruited his followers around the green tables, and the police are wondering if the gambler's dancing sweetheart did not have more than a sentimental connection with the dead crook.

The murder of Mme. Cormon seemed to be that rare thing—a perfect crime—and the police had no clews to work on until Nicolai turned up. Marie, who lived in the same apartment building, had cultivated the friendship of the lonely old woman and often dropped in to discuss art with her.

Dancer Slashes Woman's Throat.

On Wednesday afternoon, according to the confession, she visited Mme. Cormon. While the widow was hunting some pictures to show her, the dancer slipped on a pair of rubber gloves she had bought several days before and took out of her a bag a sharp pedicurist's knife—the dancer at one time was a pedicurist. When Mme. Cormon turned around the dancer slashed and killed her.

Then the young woman opened the drawers where she knew the victim kept her valuables, washed the bloodstains off the gloves, disposed of them and the knife in a rest room of a department store, and then took the loot to her lover's apartment.

After leaving Nicolai, Marie returned home—she was living with two respectable old ladies who had offered her shelter because she had no money.

Implicates Her Lover.

In her confession she declared Nicolai had been pressing her for money for a long time and had urged her to rob Mme. Cormon. She added she had gone to the widow's apartment a few days before to murder the woman but had lost her nerve.

While the police are not sure the crime has any direct connection with the Stavisky gang, the public is impressed with the discovery the confessed murderess is a former mistress of the crook.

Marie Lemoine's career throws a light on the glittering and sinister demi-monde world where Stavisky reigned supreme. The dancer started her life as a mannequin by day and a cancan dancer at the old Moulin Rouge by night. Because of her beauty she soon sported flashy gems which won for her the nickname of the "queen of diamonds."

Girl Supported Stavisky.

The dancer fell in love with Stavisky in the days when he was making a lean living as a gigolo. For two years she supported him in a manner to which he was not yet accustomed.

When Stavisky married she became the mistress of a rich Mexican business agent for Prince Hohenlohe and led a gay life in cosmopolitan resorts. Eventually the Mexican married, too, and when the American stock market crash came the income he had provided for her evaporated.

Then she opened a beauty parlor in a smart quarter of Paris—a beauty parlor which actually was an elegant vice resort frequented by politicians, financiers, and fashionable coquettes. The depression finally killed the "beauty parlor" in Paris and Marie lost all her money.

She returned to Paris recently, penniless and exhausted. Her famous beauty was nearly faded. The two old ladies whom she had known as a child took her in. She lived quietly with them until she met Nicolai. Unable to support him by her beauty as she had once supported Stavisky, she turned to crime.

BELIEVE ORGANIZED GANGS HAVE DROPPED KIDNAPING RACKET

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Justice department officials, after adding up the punishments visited upon kidnapers in recent years, tonight held the opinion that organized gangs generally had dropped the idea of ransom profits.

Recent abductions, including the Stoll case in Louisville, the Betty Bloch plot at Wheeling, W. Va.; the Robles case in Arizona, and the Gettle case in California, all have been laid to persons of a psychopathic classification different from that of the organized gangster.

A résumé of the 32 actual kidnapings and plots to kidnap that have confronted the department of justice since the passage of the federal kidnaping statute on June 22, 1932, shows:

Seventy-four persons have been convicted, receiving sentences aggregating 1,186 years, 11 months, and 2 days.

Sixteen received life sentences.

Two were given death sentences.

There were 30 years of suspended sentences and 20 years' probation.

Two individuals were lynched, three committed suicide, and two were murdered.

Seventeen persons are now in custody awaiting trial.

COURT ASKED TO REORGANIZE TWO INSULL CONCERNS

Newark, N. J., Oct. 26.—(AP)—A group of six holders of bonds of two Insull-controled utility companies filed a petition in federal court today for reorganization of the companies under the corporate provisions of the bankruptcy act.

The companies involved were the United Public Utilities company and the United Public Service company, both incorporated in New Jersey, the bondholders, all Chicago residents, stated in their petition they held bonds to the amount of $9,300.

Receivers for the two concerns were named by former Vice Chancellor John J. Fallon on April 21, 1932, and on the next day involuntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed in federal court. At that time, however, Federal Judge William Clark refused to name receivers on the grounds federal receivers already had been named in the Chicago district.

JURY ACQUITS MRS. SANKEY IN KIDNAP CASE

Frees Her in Abduction of Boettcher.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Mrs. Fern Sankey, widow of the late Verne Sankey, gangster, tonight was acquitted by a federal court jury of a charge of conspiracy in the Charles Boettcher II. kidnaping.

The jury, which had received the case at 4:11 p. m., announced it had reached a verdict at 8:55 p. m. Jurors filed into the courtroom at 9:22 p. m., and two minutes later the verdict was read.

Mrs. Sankey smiled as she heard the verdict, and, clasping her hands together, said, "O, good!"

Children Near Her.

Her two children, Echo, 15, and David, 5, had come with their mother when it was announced a verdict had been reached, but were in another room as the acquittal was announced.

Mrs. Sankey was released immediately and planned to spend the night at a hotel here. Mrs. Alvina Kohler, sister of Mrs. Sankey, held in the county jail here and against whom a conspiracy charge also is pending, was released on her own recognizance. George Phillips, federal district attorney, indicated it is probable the charge against her will be quashed.

The widow of the gangster Verne, who ended his life in the state penitentiary here after being arrested in connection with the Boettcher case, indicated she would return to her ranch home at Gann Valley tomorrow. Her daughter, she said, would go to Minneapolis to resume her studies.

First Jury Disagrees.

Last May when Mrs. Sankey and Mrs. Kohler were tried on the same charge the jury was unable to agree.

The charges grew out of the kidnaping Feb. 12, 1933, of Boettcher. Gordon Alcorn pleaded guilty in the kidnaping and is serving a life sentence. Two others, Carl Pearce and Arthur Youngberg, also are serving prison terms for the crime.

HAUPTMANN IN JAIL CRIES AS HE HOLDS HIS BABY

Lindy Kidnap Suspect Also Sees Wife.

Elmington, N. J., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was visited in the Hunterdon county jail today by his wife and 11 months old baby. It was the first time that he had seen his child since he was brought here, and he held the laughing son in his arms and cried.

Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, his wife, delayed her regular visiting time by an hour and a half. Meanwhile, arrangements had been completed to have her stay in the home of Eugene and Mrs. Anna Latourette, who live half a mile from the jail on Main street.

Examine Child's Clothes.

Sheriff John H. Curtiss supervised the arrangements of the visit by the child. The wife of Warden Henry O. McCrea, in charge of the jail, took the child in her arms and held him for a few minutes. During that time an examination of his clothes was made.

Mrs. McCrea then took the child up to the prisoner. Mrs. Hauptmann remained below in the jail. With two constables and two state troopers on guard, the door at the end of the cell row was opened and the baby was passed in to Hauptmann.

"He cried and tried to talk to the baby," Sheriff Curtiss said. "The baby was laughing and did not seem to know that anything was the matter."

Will Be Tried for Murder.

At his law office in Perthamboy Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey made the following statement:

"Bruno Richard Hauptmann has been indicted for murder and will be tried on that charge. The prosecution is not responsible for deductions or themes advanced by newspapers."

Mr. Wilentz made this statement when asked to comment on a published story that New Jersey would try Hauptmann only as an "accomplice" and not as the actual kidnaper and killer of the Lindbergh baby.

U. S. Court Dissolves Anti-Picketing Decree

An injunction granted the Rex Theater corporation of Sheboygan, Wis., by the Wisconsin federal court prohibiting union picketing of the corporation's theater was ordered dissolved by the United States Court of Appeals yesterday in a reversal of the lower court's decision. The opinion was written by Justice Will M. Sparks and concurred in by Justices Samuel Alschuler and Evan A. Evans. The injunction was obtained by the theater company when the union attempted to force eight employés of the theater to become union members and signs were paraded in front of the theater by pickets of the union.

SENIOR ROBINSON FIGHTS REMOVAL FOR KIDNAP TRIAL

Says He Tried to Help Trap His Son.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Resisting removal to Louisville to face trial for the Alice Stoll kidnaping, Thomas H. Robinson Sr., Nashville contractor and father of the former insane asylum inmate, sought as the actual abductor, today proclaimed his innocence at a hearing held before United States Commissioner Julian H. Campbell.

As proof of his good intentions Robinson testified that he sought and obtained the approval of the department of justice to the proposal of a trip to Indianapolis to release Mrs. Stoll and catch the kidnaper in the flat where he had held the Louisville society woman six days until $50,000 ransom was paid.

Says Plan Was Overruled.

The plan, however, was overruled by two members of the Stoll family and for that reason was not carried out, the contractor said. He quoted the Stoll representatives as saying, "It is far better to carry out that ransom note and don't let any mishap occur."

Robinson said he had felt so certain he could locate his son that he, his family attorney, J. G. Lackey, and District Attorney General J. Carlton Loser, had conferred with department of justice agents on the advisability of an attempt to catch the kidnaper in his lair.

"Were you going to take any money?" Robinson's attorney, M. S. Ross, questioned him, apparently referring to ransom.

"No, we didn't need any money," Robinson replied. "We were going up there to get the boy and place him in custody."

The witness revealed long distance telephone conversations he and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frances Robinson, wife of the alleged kidnaper, who is also held for complicity in the crime, had with the man who held Mrs. Stoll.

Tells of Phone Conversations.

Three nights after the kidnaping Mrs. Robinson Jr., then in Nashville, received a call from her husband in Indianapolis, the elder Robinson said. He quoted his son as asking if "that express package has been delivered" and whether or not Mrs. Robinson thought "they are going to deliver it." Federal agents who had tapped the wires heard the conversation, the witness declared.

U. S. WILL NOT O. K. MOVIE PORTRAYAL OF LIFE OF PURVIS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—(AP)—The manhunting activities of Melvin H. Purvis and other justice department men will not be portrayed on the screen with the approval of the department.

Attorney General Cummings said today that the reported plans of a Hollywood motion picture company for a film centered around the careers of Purvis, who tracked down John Dillinger and "Pretty Boy" Floyd, and other federal agents did not meet with the department's approval.

He said that no Hollywood company had asked the department's sanction but that if such plans were submitted they would not be approved.

"Those things are not in accord with our ideas," he said.

STATE DEMANDS INVENTORY FOR MELLON ESTATE

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 26.—(AP)—The commonwealth today demanded in court the immediate filing of an inventory of the estate of the late Richard B. Mellon, brother of Andrew W. Mellon.

Unofficial estimates of the tax the estate will pay Pennsylvania have ranged from $6,000,000 to several times that sum. One state official said he "had seen figures in Harrisburg" placing the value of the Mellon holding as high as $450,000,000.

A spokesman for the family said such a sum was "ridiculously high." He would not give any figure himself.

The petition for an inventory was filed by Register of Wills Joseph M. Mackrell in Orphans' court. Counsel for the estate said the labor involved in preparing the inventory has delayed the filing and pointed out the federal government has allowed a six months' extension.

NEW DEAL MAPS FEDERAL RULE FOR ALL BANKS

Program Would Deprive States of Powers.

BY HOWARD WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—A definite move toward the nationalization of all banks in the United States is contemplated by the administration, it was learned today as the last of the delegates to the American Bankers' association convention were departing for home.

The scheme contemplates the consolidation of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation with the office of the controler of the currency. The controler supervises the operation of all national banks. The Federal Deposit Insurance corporation supervises, after a fashion, all banks belonging to its organization, state and national alike, but its powers are more limited than those of the controler of the currency.

Would Curb State Power.

Consolidation of the two authorities would, for all practical purposes, extend the authority of the national bank examiners over all state banks in the country, and would take from the states the power to run their own state banking institutions.

Although not officially confirmed, the report of this impending development emanates from well informed sources. It is being discussed with much interest in banking circles, especially by officials of state banks. Few in the banking business doubt the eventual consolidation of all banks, state and national, into one nationalized system under the control of Washington. The general expectation is that this will occur during the next three years. The consolidation of the FDIC with the office of the controler would be the first step—and a big one.

Seek Speedy Change.

Legislation would be required to make this merger possible, but in the meantime it is reported that the administration is taking steps to get into a position where the change could be accomplished on short order once congress passes enabling laws.

It is believed that the FDIC is slated to be the dominant unit in the consolidation, taking over the staffs of national bank examiners as the nucleus on which to build a larger examining staff to blanket the nation.

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the FDIC, hinted at expansion of the powers of that organization in a speech at the bankers' convention in which he indicated that congress would be asked to permit the FDIC wider discretion in making rules with which member banks would be required to comply.

J. F. T. O'Connor, present controler, who never has been able to see eye to eye with Crowley, is reported to be going out of the picture. Controler O'Connor today confirmed reports that he had been offered the position of federal reserve agent at San Francisco. He said he still was undecided whether to accept.

Crowley Seen as Top Man.

Crowley is expected to be the top man in supervising the banks, although, at least in the near future, he may not be given a new official title.

Francis Marion Law, retiring president of the American Bankers' association, who has been in close contact with Washington and did much to persuade rebellious groups within his organization to cease their attacks on the Roosevelt administration, may enter the picture in some capacity.

It is common gossip among bankers that Law is to get some kind of Washington recognition in return for his efforts to line the bankers up behind the New Deal program. Law was among the White House callers today.

Mrs. Moffett, Wife of U. S. Aid, Plunges to Her Death in N. Y.

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. Adelaide Taft McMichael Moffett, estranged wife of James A. Moffett, federal housing administrator, was fatally injured today when she jumped or fell from her bedroom window on the eighth floor of an apartment building at 333 East 57th street. She died two hours later in Flower hospital. She was 47 years old.

Mrs. Moffett was found unconscious in a rear courtyard by the superintendent of the building, who heard her fall. Mrs. Esther Seifert, who also lives in the building, was visiting Mrs. Moffett at the time, but had stepped out of the room for a moment. When she returned Mrs. Moffett was missing.

Subject to Fainting Spells.

Mrs. Moffett had been ill for some time, according to police, and was subject to fainting spells. About noon today she telephoned to her cousin, Dr. H. Lyman Hooker, and complained that she was suffering a headache. Dr. Hooker called on her about 2 o'clock and gave her some headache powders.

It is thought she may have suffered a dizzy spell, gone to the window, and fallen out. The window sill is 30 inches from the floor.

Mrs. Moffett's daughter, Adelaide, who made her society debut last fall and has been singing on a matinee radio program for the last two weeks, was at the hospital when her mother died. Besides her, there are two other daughters, Ruth, who is at Farmington school, in Connecticut, and Mrs. Jay F. Carlisle Jr. of Brookville, N. Y., and two sons, Robert A. Moffett, who works for the Corn Products Refining company in Chicago, and Jackson A. Moffett, who is at Princeton.

Moffett Flies to N. Y.

Mr. Moffett, who had been estranged from Mrs. Moffett for ten years, was vice president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey until last July, when he resigned. President Roosevelt selected him to head the Federal Housing administration on June 30. Mr. Moffett, whose father was one of the original partners of John D. Rockefeller Sr., lives at 820 Park avenue. He was in Washington today, but left for New York by airplane at once.

Besides her husband and children, her mother, Mrs. Arkell R. McMichael, survives Mrs. Moffett. Mrs. Moffett was the daughter of the late Arkell R. McMichael of New York City.

FOLK SONGS RING IN JURORS' EARS AT $25,000 TRIAL

With the plaintive strains of "canned" Lithuanian folk songs ringing in their ears, a jury in Judge David's Superior court retired yesterday to deliberate the $25,000 libel suit of Anthony Vanagaitis, composer and musician, against the Lithuanian News Publishing company.

Mr. Vanagaitis, who gives public entertainments, lives at 6812 South Western avenue. He charged the publishers of the Lithuanian Daily News with libeling him in a criticism of his rendition of reversed folk music. During the trial, which began a week ago, Mr. Vanagaitis testified that in 1931 the newspaper's critic called him, among other things, a "zany" and a "harlequin" who "had a screw loose and defrauded the public with his playing."

It was Pius Grigaitis, editor of the newspaper, who was responsible for the playing in court of phonograph records of Mr. Vanagaitis' efforts so that the jurors might find it unnecessary to trust the judgment of the critic.

Judge David instructed the jurors to return a sealed verdict.

2 POLICE KILLERS CONVICTED; GET DEATH IN CHAIR

Jury Decides Fate in 50 Minutes.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Lester Herling, manslaughter, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary; Theodore Jenkot, larceny of an automobile, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge John C. Lowe.

Sam Questi, receiving a stolen automobile, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge Walter P. Steffen.

John Mikus and Stanley Wojtasiak, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary; John Colanni and Paul Genille, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary by Judge Walter J. La Buy.

Ben Cohen, obtaining money by false pretenses, sentenced to 1 to 5 years in the penitentiary; Harry Bolden, murder, sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary by Judge Donald McKinlay.

After only fifty minutes' deliberation, a jury in the Criminal court of Judge Hugo M. Friend last night returned a sentence of death against Walter Dittman, 29 years old, and Herman Boulan, 28 years old, for the murder on Sept. 1 of Policeman Earl Jensen of Oak Park.

Another defendant, Norman Laurence, 19 years old, who was with the others at the time of the murder, was freed by the jury on a directed verdict of not guilty.

Policeman Jensen was shot down on Harrison street, between Kenilworth and Carpenter avenues, in Oak Park while attempting to halt the trio for questioning.

Seize 2 as Car Wrecks.

Two of the men drove their automobile into a tree while trying to elude other policemen and were seized. Laurence was captured later.

Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach, acting for Dittman and Boulan, waived a defense, and, in his final summary, asked the jury to send the men to prison for life, but to spare their lives. The prosecution asked the death penalty.

While Policeman Jensen's widow, Betty, and their 3 year old daughter, Donna Rae, watched, the jurors, grim and solemn, returned with their verdict.

Killers Appear Unconcerned.

As their fate was read out Dittman and Boulan gazed unconcernedly about the crowded courtroom.

"I have no malice," said Mrs. Jensen later, "but I wanted to see justice done and I thank you for seeing that Earl didn't die in vain."

Judge Friend set a hearing on a motion for a new trial for Wednesday morning. Laurence was taken back to Oak Park and booked on a charge of assault with intent to kill. Police say he confessed having fired shots at the pursuing policemen in the chase which took place after Jensen was slain.

NEARBY BLAZE ROUTS PATRONS OF NIGHT CLUB

Costumed entertainers, bartenders and patrons of Kelly's Stables, a night club at 102 East Austin avenue, were driven into the street last night when a four story building at 106-14 East Austin avenue caught fire. A 2-11 alarm was sounded before flames could be checked.

Witnesses said the fire broke out in the space on the second floor occupied by the Latter Print shop, spreading rapidly to the top floors. Damage was estimated at $2,000 by Division Marshal Patrick Pierce.

R. C. Lacey, 117 East Illinois street, a watchman in a parking lot across the street, said he had seen a man moving about in the building before the fire started. An investigation was ordered by Fire Attorney Thomas J. Sheehan.

Policeman Fined, Victim Freed in Suburban Speed Trap Case

Brutality and speed trap operation by the police of Elmwood Park were severely criticized yesterday by Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Criminal court, before whom one of the victims carried an appeal of a $50 fine for reckless driving.

The victim, Charles Machalicky, 21 years old, 5404 West 23d place, Cicero, obtained a reversal of his sentence, imposed by Justice of the Peace Louis Shaw of Elmwood Park. In addition Harold Hotchkiss, policeman who was alleged to have beaten the youth, was sent to jail when he was unable to pay a $100 fine assessed by Judge Sullivan.

Beaten, Kept Without Food.

Machalicky was arrested while driving in Elmwood Park on June 29. He testified that he was taken to the police station, where he was beaten and kept without food for about 18 hours. Taken before Justice of the Peace Shaw and fined, he announced that he would appeal. Shaw ruled that he could not do so until he had paid $7.50 costs. This caused Machalicky some trouble, the youth testified, as $12 that had been in his car when he was seized disappeared.

Later Machalicky, with the assistance of the Chicago Motor club, obtained a warant in Cicero for Hotchkiss. Tried in Cicero, the Elmwood Park policeman was fined $50. He appealed this sentence and both matters came before Judge Sullivan.

After hearing the evidence the chief justice announced that Machalicky was discharged. Then he doubled the fine of Policeman Hotchkiss.

Regrets He Can't Imprison Him.

"My only regret in this matter is that I can't imprison you," he declared. "But the charge of assault and battery can be punished only by a maximum fine of $100."

When counsel for Hotchkiss announced that an appeal would be taken to the Appellate court and requested that the sentence be delayed until today objections were made by Assistant State's Attorneys Frank Donoghue and Francis McCurrie. They pointed out that Machalicky had been given no consideration in Elmwood Park.

"That is true," said Judge Sullivan. "Let Hotchkiss have the same treatment here. If he doesn't pay the fine let him go to jail."

The policeman went.

EMILY FENTRESS STOCKING FILES DIVORCE ACTION

Mrs. Emily Fentress Stocking, 939 Green Bay road, Winnetka, is suing her husband, Robert L. Stocking, 160 Central Park South, New York, for divorce on grounds of desertion. This was revealed yesterday when the case was assigned to Superior Judge Francis B. Allegretti.

The Stockings were married Dec. 27, 1930, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fentress, in Winnetka, where she now lives. She charged Stocking left her in August, 1933. In her bill she asks custody of their two children, Robert, 3 years old, and Richard, 1, and asks alimony and support money.

CREEL ASSAILS SINCLAIR PLAN; DROPS SUPPORT

Attacks Epic Program as 'Unsound, Un-American'

New York, Oct. 26. — (AP) — George Creel, unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of California, in a letter made public today withdrew support from Upton Sinclair, the nominee.

Sinclair, he asserted, had deviated from an agreed modification of his "EPIC" plan.

"'Immediate EPIC,' I am sorry to confess, puts me back exactly where I was in the primary campaign," Creel wrote to Sinclair on Oct. 18, according to the text of a letter published in the World-Telegram.

"In its essence it is the original EPIC plan that I attacked as unsound, unworkable, and un-American, designed to appeal to the credulities of ignorance and despair, and immeasurably hurtful in its effect on true progressivism.

Withdraws Offer to Help.

"It is, therefore, with the very real regret that must always be stirred by lost opportunities that I withdraw my offer to campaign in your behalf."

"Let me say again that I do not question your honesty," the letter said, "but you have a most amazing faculty of making yourself believe the things you want to believe.

"As an example, take your repeated statement that you can and will end poverty in California, and that you won't take more than one or two of your four years to do it. This is an optimism carried to the point of delirium.

"Your dream of creating an 'economic island,' alien and antagonistic to its immediate environment and to the rest of the country as well, is damned by every economist, yet you persist in it.

Bond Issue Scheme.

"Your proposals which I protested were your 300 million dollar bond issue, your scrip scheme for an independent currency system, your farm communes, your state stores, your pension of $50 a month to all 60 and to every blind person and those physically incapacitated from earning a living; your exemption of all homes and ranches where the assessed value was less than $3,000, and the declared intent to substitute a tax on stock transfers for the present sales tax.

"I asked how you expected to market your bonds; also how you expected to evade the constitutional prohibition against the coinage of money, or the emission of bills of credit by any state.

"I pointed out that your pension promises would cost California close to 300 millions dollars a year and argued that we wait on the announcement of President Roosevelt's plans for the care of the old.

"I showed by your own figures that a tax on stock transfers would net less than one million a year and that it was either dishonest or insane to claim that it would take the place of a tax producing $50,000,000 a year.

State Stores Opposed.

"In particular I attacked your land colonies and your state stores, where the products of farms and factories would be sold to the general public at cost, holding that it meant the ruin of private industry and private agriculture if compelled to compete with state owned enterprises.

"Instead of the state grabbing farms and turning them over to the unemployed, many of whom never saw a ranch, I wanted California to accept a first lien for delinquent taxes, spreading amortization over a long term at a low rate of interest.

"At no point did I question your sincerity, but at the same time I made no secret of my belief that harebrained, unworkable schemes of social reform led to disaster no less surely than the programs of the charlatan and the demagogue."

REPORTS $50,000 JEWEL ROBBERY; HUNT 4 BANDITS

The Chicago avenue police last night were searching for four men who obtained unset diamonds valued at $50,000 and $500 in cash after they assaulted and robbed Morris Silberstein, 50 years old, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a partner in the jewelry firm of Fuchs & Co., New York City, on the near north side at noon yesterday.

Silberstein, who has been in Chicago for two days calling on jewelry customers here, left the La Salle hotel with the diamonds concealel in a special lether vest which he wore. He had called at S. Buchsbaum & Co., wholesale jewelers at 242 East Huron street, and was waiting for a bus at Fairbanks court and Huron street when the four men drove up to the curb in a small sedan, he told police.

Two of the men beat the New York jeweler over the head with the butt ends of their revolvers and forced him into their car, he said, later dumping him in an alley.

He was taken to the Henrotin hospital, where he was still being given medical attention last night.

CITIES' LEADERS ASSAIL NRA, BACK FERA AND PWA

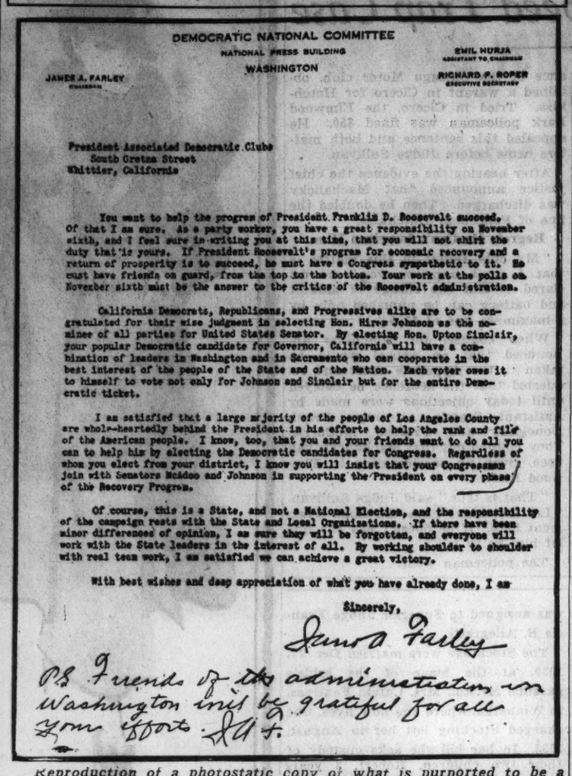
The FERA and the PWA were defended and the NRA was attacked last night by speakers at the annual banquet of the American Municipal association in Judson court at the University of Chicago.

Prof. Charles E. Merriam, head of the department of political science at the university, told his auditors that the federal government will continue to demand coöperation from states and municipalities in the future and will permanently retain such "useful" organizations at the FERA and the PWA.

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee, presumably a Socialist, surprised his audience when he defended private business against the regulation of the NRA, the anti-trust laws, and the interstate commerce commission.

"You will never succeed in regulating the affairs of private business," he said. He added that public utilities and the milk industry are in line for government regulation.

Claim Farley Letter Indorses Sinclair



DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE
NATIONAL PRESS BUILDING
WASHINGTON
JAMES A. FARLEY, CHAIRMAN — EMIL HURJA, ASSISTANT TO CHAIRMAN — RICHARD F. ROPER, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

President Associated Democratic Clubs
South Cretan Street
Whittier, California

You want to help the progress of President Franklin D. Roosevelt succeed. Of that I am sure. As a party worker, you have a great responsibility on November sixth, and I feel sure in writing you at this time, that you will not shirk the duty that is yours. If President Roosevelt's program for economic recovery and a return of prosperity is to succeed, he must have a Congress sympathetic to it. He must have friends on guard, from the top to the bottom. Your work at the polls on November sixth must be the answer to the critics of the Roosevelt administration.

California Democrats, Republicans, and Progressives alike are to be congratulated for their wise judgment in selecting Hon. Hiram Johnson as the nominee of all parties for United States Senator. By electing Hon. Upton Sinclair, your popular Democratic candidate for Governor, California will have a combination of leaders in Washington and in Sacramento who can cooperate in the best interest of the people of the State and of the Nation. Each voter owes it to himself to vote not only for Johnson and Sinclair but for the entire Democratic ticket.

I am satisfied that a large majority of the people of Los Angeles County are whole-heartedly behind the President in his efforts to help the rank and file of the American people. I know, too, that you and your friends want to do all you can to help him by electing the Democratic candidates for Congress. Regardless of whom you elect from your district, I know you will insist that your Congressmen join with Senators McAdoo and Johnson in supporting the President on every phase of the Recovery Program.

Of course, this is a State, and not a National Election, and the responsibility of the campaign rests with the State and Local Organizations. If there have been minor differences of opinion, I am sure they will be forgotten, and everyone will work with the State leaders in the interest of all. By working shoulder to shoulder with real team work, I am satisfied we can achieve a great victory.

With best wishes and deep appreciation of what you have already done, I am

Sincerely,

James A. Farley

P.S. Friends of the administration in Washington will be grateful for all your efforts. J.A.F.

MERRIAM IS LEADING SINCLAIR 5 TO 2 IN POLL IN CALIFORNIA

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Frank H. Merriam, Republican candidate for governor of California, was leading Upton Sinclair, his Democratic opponent, by a still increasing margin today in the Literary Digest's statewide straw ballot. Mr. Merriam had a majority of about 2½ to 1.

Today's tabulations were the first general canvas of the poll. Of the 67,208 votes counted so far out of some 700,000 ballots sent out, Acting Governor Merriam has 62.7 per cent and Mr. Sinclair 25.72 per cent.

In their party primaries two months ago Mr. Merriam got 42.42 per cent of his party's 816,449 votes and Mr. Sinclair got 51.80 per cent of the 840,200 Democratic votes cast.

The first general return of the straw votes shows the following division:

Candidates.	Party.	Votes. For	Pct. For
Sam Darcy	Communist	262	.39
M. C. Dempster	Socialist	50	.07
R. L. Haight	Prog.-Comwth.	7,471	11.12
F. F. Merriam	Republican	42,141	62.70
Upton Sinclair	Democrat	17,284	25.72

Total, 67,208.

CLAIMS FARLEY NOTE INDORSED UPTON SINCLAIR

New Dealers got to examining the EPIC plan, and now they refer to it, sotto voce, as a "crackpot" scheme.

The first definite sign of administration disapproval of Sinclair came today when George Creel, who was the Roosevelt candidate for governor, defeated by Sinclair, issued a statement in New York declaring he could not support the Socialist-Democrat.

Letter "Sent by Mistake."

Santa Barbara, Cal., Oct. 26.—(AP)—The Santa Barbara Daily News today said its publisher had learned from an unimpeachable source in Washington that "the letter signed by Postmaster General James A. Farley, endorsing Upton Sinclair for the California governorship, was sent by mistake, and Mr. Farley, as Democratic national chairman has not endorsed Mr. Sinclair and will not do so."

"These facts," the Daily News says, "were established today in a long distance telephonic conversation between Santa Barbara and Washington, D. C., when Thomas M. Storke, publisher, was called by a man of unimpeachable authority."

MRS. ROOSEVELT CHAMPIONS HER HUSBAND'S 'DEAL'

Supports N. Y. Woman Friend for Congress.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt concluded her upstate "stumping tour" for Mrs. Caroline O'Day tonight with a new defense of the President's policies.

Of the critics who call the New Deal "wasteful," the President's wife said with a smile:

"When you hear those things just remember a little common sense is still left in the government."

Of the farm program that called for destruction of surplus hogs and cattle Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"You hear, sometimes, that several million pigs were thrown into the Mississippi river. It is hard to believe that thinking people think that. It would just be too stupid."

Speaks at Dinner.

Mrs. Roosevelt spoke at a dinner at the De Wit Clinton hotel, attended by about 400 guests. She wore an evening gown of Eleanor blue, with pink roses at the left shoulder. She waved away a microphone connected with a loud speaker and talked in a low voice. Occasionally she fingered the nose glasses she carried at the end of a silver chain.

Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, the Virginian who became head of New York's public works system, introduced her as "America's ablest woman."

The President's wife referred to her friend, Mrs. O'Day, as "my candidate." Her reference to Miss Natalie Couch, Mrs. O'Day's Republican opponent for election as congressman at large, was as "our opponent."

Mrs. Roosevelt remarked that "I had the pleasure of hearing our opponent at Buffalo yesterday."

Spurred to Defense.

It was a meeting of women voters in Buffalo that Miss Couch's criticism of the New Deal spurred Mrs. Roosevelt to a spirited defense of the President.

Referring to the destruction of surplus cattle, Mrs. Roosevelt observed that such meat had been canned for distribution to the needy.

"Our opponent [Miss Couch] did not know that a car of such meat a few weeks ago went into Westchester county, just across the river from her home."

Miss Couch lives at Nyack, Rockland county.

HOLD TWO SERVICE DISCHARGES.

Honorable discharge certificates for William H. Patzke and Royal J. McMillan have been turned over to the American Legion here in the hope that the two men may be located in Chicago, according to L. B. Benston, department service officer of the Legion at 127 North Dearborn street. Identification is required before the certificates can be turned over, Mr. Benston said.

NATION WATCHES CONGRESS RACES IN COOK COUNTY

Democrats Center Fight on Britten, De Priest.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

With the general issue of whether congress shall be a "rubber stamp" for the Brain Trust experiments, Cook county's congressional contests have engendered some of the most intense battles in years.

They have evoked a national interest, for in Chicago are running for reelection Congressman Fred A. Britten, one of the four Republican deans of the house with 22 years of service, Congressman Oscar De Priest, Republican, the sole Negro member of congress, and Congressman Adolph J. Sabath, whose 14 terms make him the oldest member of the house in point of service.

Battle Britten and De Priest.

Most furious of the struggles are those in the Britten district, the 9th, on the near north side, and the De Priest district, the 1st, on the south side.

In the ten districts in Cook county the Republicans now have four seats, the Democrats six. Besides striving to hold what they have, the Republicans are seeking to upset three Democratic congressmen, Edward A. Kelly [3d], Thomas J. O'Brien [6th], and Leonard W. Schuetz [7th].

The Democrats, while working to keep what they have, are concentrating on an effort to capture seats held by three Republicans: Congressmen Britten, De Priest, and Patrick H. Moynihan of the South Chicago district, the 2d. In the last 30 years and more the De Priest and Moynihan districts never have elected a Democrat to congress, while the Britten district in that period has elected a Democrat only once, in 1910.

No upsets are considered remotely probable in the other four districts, now held by three Democrats and one Republican.

Charges Link Underworld.

The Ninth, where the Gold Coast and the lodging house areas "south of the avenue" meet, is the seat of a lurid struggle in which national issues are mixed with charges that Democrats are using shakedowns of the underworld and the relief rolls as political instruments.

Congressman Britten is opposed by James McAndrews, secretary of the state liquor commission, who served six terms in congress from west side districts. Britten beat McAndrews two years ago despite the Roosevelt landslide by 3,657 votes.

Republican speakers in the district are shouting that pressure is being put on recipients of relief to vote Democratic on threats that otherwise they may be struck from the rolls, that saloons and dives are being farmed for Democratic campaign funds, that Republican workers are being threatened by toughs.

42d Ward Storm Center.

The 42d ward, north of the river, is the storm center and the Republican bombardment is concentrated upon William J. Connors, Democratic ward committeeman and candidate for state senator.

The Democratic county organization for weeks has indicated its chief aim in the congressional battle is to take Britten, and has declared that this time the Democrat workers in the district are working for the Democratic nominee.

Congressman Britten, hitting right and left, has been declaring he is being fought by gambling, vice, racketeering, night life, license peddling, and patronage groups in the district. His supporters are relying on the vote in the Republican wards to the north and on the residential vote.

Negro Democrat Faces De Priest.

Oscar De Priest is in a stiff battle in the First. One issue is how far the distribution of doles by the New Deal may influence the Negro vote, in the this ancient Republican stronghold. In Arthur W. Mitchell, Democrat, De Priest meets his first Negro opponent in a congressional election.

Mitchell was placed on the ticket after the death of Harry Baker, the white man who won in the Democratic primaries. Baker had been beaten by De Priest in three other elections, and was kept in the field by Michael Kenna, "boss" of the First ward. Mitchell attended Tuskegee institute and Harvard and Columbia universities. This time, the Democratic managers declare Mike Kenna has promised to send Mitchell out of the First ward with a big vote. On this they rest claims of the district, while the Republicans forecast that De Priest will win, although with a reduced plurality.

Confident Over Moynihan.

Republicans hold that Congressman Moynihan will retain his seat in the Second district, the Hyde Park Republican stronghold which never has elected a Democrat to congress since the present districts were formed more than 30 years ago. The Democrats are relying on the effect of the federal doles, especially in the mill areas of South Chicago. In the primaries this year the Democrats polled 9,000 more votes than the Republicans. On this they are banking. Raymond S. McKeough is the Democratic candidate.

Two years ago, despite the Roosevelt landslide, Moynihan won by 11,000. The struggle in this district is intense, and involved in it are charges from Republicans that the "Democratic Tammany" is using federal doles and all resources of possible patronage in the campaign. Moynihan has brought to the front as issues experimentalism of the New Deal in drilling industry in the goose step.

Winner in Landslide.

In the Third district [Englewood], Frank M. Fulton, Republican, is seeking to unseat Congressman Edward A. Kelly, Democrat. This is normally a Republican district. Kelly won in 1930 in the Democratic landslide that elected Senator James Hamilton Lewis, and in 1932 in the Roosevelt landslide [by 24,811]. The Republicans say it depends upon how far the doles enter into politics; while the Democrats place the district in their column. In the primaries this year the Democrats cast 20,000 more votes than the Republicans.

On the west side, the 6th district finds Congressman Thomas J. O'Brien, Democrat, being given a harder fight than usual by Arnold L. Lund, Republican.

Hurls "Rubber Stamp" Charge.

Lund, a Berwyn lawyer, is accusing O'Brien of being a "rubber stamp." In response, O'Brien's friends point out O'Brien voted against at least three brain trust measures, including the national economy act, which repealed many benefits for world and Spanish war veterans.

The 6th is normally a Democratic district. Since 1910, it has elected Democrats to congress in ten elections and Republicans in only two, these being in the 1920 and 1924 Republican landslide years. O'Brien won in 1932 by a plurality of 68,550, and with all this background the Democrats regard it in the bag.

Seventh District Changeable.

The Seventh district is the largest in the United States, with a population of 889,349 [1930]. Here Congressman Leonard W. Schuetz, Democrat, is opposed by Raymond Peacock, Republican, a publisher. It was a Republican district, then a Democratic, then Republican.

Since 1916, it has elected Republican congressmen seven times and Mr. Schuetz twice, in 1930 and 1932. He won in the Roosevelt landslide two years ago by 55,645. In the April primaries this year the Democrats polled 28,000 more votes than the Republicans and they hold this will tell the story on Nov. 6.

Denounces the New Deal.

Peacock is denouncing the radicalism and regimentation of the New Deal, while the Democrats are sticking to their slogan, "Roosevelt."

In the other four districts, the battling is not so hot. Congressmen Henry P. Beam [4th], A. J. Sabath [5th], Leo Kocialkowski [8th] are Democrats in strong Democratic districts, while in the Tenth, which includes the north shore suburbs and Lake county, the Democrats see little chance of overturning the usual Republican trend. Ralph E. Church, Republican, is opposed by David B. Maloney, Democrat.

HELD TO JURY IN ROBBERY.

Luke Ward, 45 years old, 2249 Campbell Park, was held to the grand jury in $5,000 bond by Judge Matthew D. Hartigan of the Felony court yesterday on charges of robbing Edward Hinckley, 511 South Ashland avenue, of $20 on Aug. 18.

CHICAGO EXECUTIVES SEE AND HEAR PHONE TALK WITH LONDON

A telephone conversation in Chicago between Dr. J. O. Perrine of New York City, associate editor of the Bell System Technical Journal, and Dr. M. King of the London Telephone company, was made visible on a screen yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Executives' club in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman.

Dr. Perrine demonstrated how various tones were reproduced in light and reflected on a screen. He then called Dr. King in London on a telephone connection in the room and by a system of relays the conversation between him and the London technician was thrown on the screen. Amplifiers carried the conversation of both to every part of the room.

More than 500 members of the club attended the luncheon.

CAROLINA HOMESPUN—
A new arrival with an all American background

To reach the source of these homespuns, whose strength and good looks have become legendary, we have to go back generations—direct to the looms of hardy Carolina mountaineers who knew just what it took to make a homespun able to take a rough-and-tumble backwoods life. Then, as now, only the finest virgin wools went into them—the result is a year-around suiting; one that it's next to impossible to wear to a shine; one that drapes very nearly as freely and softly as fine flannel. That's a rare accomplishment for a hard finished suiting, but another thing homespun is liked for and why it appears this fall as the gentleman among the rough suitings.

BAR ORGANIZES IN SUPPORT OF U. S. TRADITIONS

Committees Appointed to Teach Citizenship.

Members of the Illinois Bar association yesterday pledged themselves to the active support of American ideals, institutions, business methods, and the constitution, upon which, they affirmed, all these are based.

This action was taken by the Americanization section of the association, meeting at the Palmer house. At the same time the attorneys approved establishment of six committees whose work will be the dissemination of knowledge, particularly of the constitution, American social science, and citizenship. A seventh committee will inquire into efforts of "communists or other groups" whose purpose is to overthrow the government.

Shows Attitude to New Deal.

Although the lawyers announced that politics was to play no part in their movement, the wording of the pledge was considered indicative of the attitude which a majority of the association's members take toward New Deal policies threatening constitutional provisions.

The platform adopted yesterday provides that the association shall: "Consider matters that have a bearing on development of love of country and devotion to American institutions and laws; promote sound, right, and considerate administration of American institutions and laws as the best means for increasing devotion to them; and inspire our people with a proper appreciation of the privileges as well as the duties of American citizenship."

To accomplish these plans the section, called together by Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman, agreed to subdivide into working committees on each of which representatives from the state's seven Supreme court districts will be placed. The committees are to "interest schools, colleges, universities, foreign groups, labor organizations, and other patriotic societies and clubs in carrying on an intensified program of American citizenship throughout the state."

Chairmen of Committees Named.

The committees chosen yesterday were: Naturalization, public meetings and speakers, inquiry and investigation, civic teaching in schools, foreign relations and liaison, publicity, and policy. The duties of all were definitely fixed and chairmen were chosen.

Action of the section is to be presented by Gen. Clinnin to the board of managers of the association for final approval within the next few days. The work of the group will begin soon afterward, the general explained.

Six other sections of the association were in session yesterday in the hotel. Each section deals with a legal problem which the members seek to solve.

LOESCH PLEADS FOR AN HONEST 42D WARD VOTE

Attacks Democratic Rule in District.

Residents "east of Clark street" in the Forty-second ward flocked to the Drake hotel last night to hear Frank J. Loesch, veteran campaigner for good government, and Republican candidates attack the Democratic political régime—nationally as well as locally.

The affair, which brought a number of prominent people out in evening clothes, was a combination musical and political rally. Speeches were interspersed with musical selections throughout the program.

Mr. Loesch launched a blistering attack on conditions in the Forty-second ward and also in the state legislature. Attempts will be made, he warned, to steal the impending election through ballot stuffing, bribery, violence, and other illegal methods. He pleaded for a large turnout of honest voters to thwart this move.

Demands Honesty at Polls.

"We must have honest watchers at the polls," he asserted. "We must prevent the stuffing of ballot boxes which will surely be attempted in an effort to steal the election from the people. All fraudulent votes must be carefully checked if this is to be accomplished."

Democratic leaders now in power in the ward, he declared, bolster their political machine with financial collections from gambling houses, saloons, and brothels.

"That's the kind of men who govern you," he asserted. "The ghosts of the Capone régime still occupy seats in the state legislature and control local governmental offices."

He also declared that many fraudulent names were entered on poll books during the last registration and urged that a strict lookout be kept for the floaters. They will "fade into thin air," he asserted, when challenged by vigilant watchers.

Citing Municipal Judge Samuel Heller's recount victory over Erwin J. Hasten last Dec. 1 as a typical illustration of vote fraud, Mr. Loesch asserted he "can no longer support County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki." Judge Heller is the Republican candidate for county judge

Congressman Blames Radicals.

Other speakers were Congressman Fred A. Britten, who is just completing his eleventh term in congress, and State Representative Robert M. Woodward, candidate for the state senate in the 28th senatorial district, which includes the 42d and 43d wards and a portion of the 9th congressional district.

Britten charged that the National Recovery act has failed utterly to accomplish its purpose and declared that other countries are forging ahead on the fundamentals of supply and demand while the United States experiments with dangerous legislation.

"The President is surrounded by the greatest group of radicals ever gathered outside of Russia," he declared. "This crew constantly has his ear. He is not to blame for this mass legislation. No individual could interpret it."

Woodward, who asked that he be elected to the state senate on the strength of his record in the house, declared that a conspiracy exists in the 42d ward to steal the election from him.

MAYOR RETURNS, 'DISGUSTED' WITH G. O. P. ATTACKS

Foes Busy During His Miami Trip, He Finds.

Upon his return from the American Legion convention in Miami, to which he was invited as a representative of Chicago, Mayor Kelly yesterday tackled some matters that had accumulated during his absence. He also expressed his "disgust" that since he left here on Monday the Republican county organization had kept up a constant fire of criticism of Democratic officials and leaders—an attack which he said injured the good name of Chicago.

He characterized as "typically silly and ridiculous" a new Republican charge that he had made a tender of $25,000 toward reducing the Democratic national committee deficit.

Not a Dollar Asked, He Says.

The local organization's quota in the deficit raising drive, he said, was paid before Mayor Cermak's death. Since that time, he added, not a dollar has been asked from the local organization or offered by him or any other representative of the organization.

"The people of Chicago," he said in his statement, "were signally honored by the Legion convention, where, because I represented Chicago, I received a tremendous ovation.

"A medallion was awarded to Chicago and delivered to me as its mayor. This was a token of the appreciation of the Legion for the fine treatment accorded its members by the citizens of Chicago when they held their convention here last year."

Asks Rebuke to "False Leaders."

As to the political attacks on the local Democratic administration, the mayor said:

"I shall devote myself until election day, and continually thereafter, to resist the efforts of these irresponsible character assassins.

"I urge on the civic minded people of our city that they increase their efforts so that these false leaders may be permanently rebuked so that we may continue to say to the world on Nov. 7 that again we have been successful in our fight to keep Chicago ahead and maintain the peace and happiness of the people of this community."

INCORPORATE NO PROFIT INDUSTRY IN CALIFORNIA

Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Organized to produce food, clothing, and shelter for members, the New Era Industries, with headquarters at Los Angeles, filed articles of incorporation today.

Describing the purpose of the organization, the articles said a social, industrial, benevolent, and altruistic society was planned to provide means through which members would produce by their own efforts a good share, if not all, of their food, shelter, and clothing.

The enterprise was described as a nonprofit venture.

REPUBLICANS ASK ICKES TO GET OUT AND REMAIN OUT

Harold Snell's Attack Brings County Action.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes was the target of a blast from the Cook county Republican central committee yesterday. In effect it was a cordial invitation for him and all of his clan to get out of the party and stay out.

The outburst of long restrained emotion was brought about by a letter to the committee from Harold W. Snell, Ickes' chief political lieutenant in the Ickes home territory along the north shore. Mr. Snell, with an attack that reminded readers strongly of the recent one from former State's Attorney Crowe, tendered his resignation as a member of the county committee.

Suggest Son Resign, Too.

The reply accepted the withdrawal with joy and suggested that, as Mr. Ickes had ordered this as well as the retirement of his wife, Mrs. Anna Wilmarth Ickes, from political life, he should also effect the resignation of his son, Wilmarth Ickes, from his post as a Republican precinct committeeman.

The answer pointed out that Mr. Snell, in addition to being a political follower of Mr. Ickes, also is the beneficiary of one of the juiciest plums at the secretary's disposal, that of agent for the Alaska railroad.

Text of Letter.

The letter to Mr. Snell read as follows:

"Sir:

"Thank you for your letter of Oct. 25, 1934, tendering your resignation as a member of this committee. That resignation is accepted with pleasure, to take effect immediately.

"But let us point out that you are in error in resigning from the committee as district committeeman. The statutes have not created and do not recognize such a position. The title has been used merely as a convenience in party councils, but you must remember there has been no meeting of the precinct committeemen of the Third district for the selection of such a spokesman since action has been delayed because of the committee's intention to change the boundaries of the districts, a fact that no doubt had something to do with your resignation, since the plan contemplated releasing you from responsibility and duties in the Third district.

Plan Speed on Successor.

"Therefore, the resignation accepted is your resignation from your statutory position as precinct committeeman of the Sixth precinct of New Trier township. Our selection of your successor will be announced with the least possible loss of time.

"We are informed that before you wrote your resignation you said that before transmitting it you would consult with Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior, who appointed you to your present position in connection with the governmentally owned Alaska railroad, a position that not only carries with it a high salary and light duties but also valuable perquisites.

"Since you consulted with Secretary Ickes about your resignation and acted in accordance with his orders, will you please advise him that it is highly desirable for the welfare of the Republican organization that he also order the resignation of another precinct committeeman who is your neighbor. We refer to Wilmarth Ickes, who, despite his father's Democratic pay roll connections, persuaded his neighbors last April to elect him committeeman from the Eighth precinct of New Trier.

Ask Son's Withdrawal.

"We understand that prior to Mr. Ickes' instructions to withdraw from the party he brought about the retirement of his wife, Mrs. Anna Wilmarth Ickes, as a Republican member of the Illinois general assembly. We are urging now that he complete the job and withdraw his son from the party.

"We do this with the same thought with which we welcome your own resignation. As you suggest in your letter, we have promised to purge the party of objectionable elements, and all of these are steps in that direction. We welcome the removal of all the Ickes influence from our organization with relief, because its presence in our ranks up to this time has been a constant source of embarrassment and a crippling of our work in your territory.

"We do not consider Mr. Ickes, any member of his family, or any of his political subordinates a member of the Republican party. Public records establish the fact that he used money from the late George E. Brennan to tear down Republican nominees under the guise of nonpartisanship as long ago as 1923, and that he has been hostile to the party as far back as 1912, when he sought to help a futile move to destroy it. When you talk to him, ask him to name a single Republican nominee in Chicago, Cook county, or Illinois—except Mr. Ickes—whom he has supported wholeheartedly.

"Thanking you again.

"WILLIAM H. WEBER,
"Cook County Republican Central Committee Chairman."

Snell Attacks Weber.

Snell's letter to the committee was devoted chiefly to an attack on Chairman William H. Weber and County Commissioner William Busse, leaders of the country town organization, who have been urging that leaving the Wilmette-Winnetka-Glencoe territory in the hands of Ickes' chief lieutenant was equivalent to giving the Democratic workers a free field there.

"There are some fine men, sincere and unselfish in their efforts for the common good on the committee," wrote Mr. Snell, "and for their association I am grateful; but, as such, the county committee on parade inspires neither respect nor confidence and I believe there is nothing to be hoped for from the leadership it furnishes."

Efforts to communicate with Mr. Snell and ask him whether he had gone all the way Democratic, or only part way, were unsuccessful. Telephone calls to the handsome offices of the Alaska railroad on the third floor front of 33 North Michigan avenue met with replies that he was "out."

DRUG STORE ROBBED OF $25.

Austin police were searching yesterday for three gunmen who held up Mrs. Taubie Zaub, manager of the Kedzie and Division Drug company, 1160 North Kedzie avenue, in the store Thursday night and escaped with $25.

Candidates on Nov. 6 Ballot

Brief biographies are presented below of the Democratic candidates at the Nov. 6 election for the board of tax appeals:

Fred W. Brummel was born in Chicago 62 years ago, and is a graduate of Quincy college, Quincy, Ill. Upon his graduation in 1895 he entered the insurance business with his father, and later founded the firm of Brummel Brothers, insurance underwriters and managers. In 1913 he established the Fred W. Brummel company, realtors, of which he is president. In 1927 he was appointed a member of the forest preserve advisory board, of which he is still a member. He was appointed to the board of appeals when the old board of review was abolished. Mr. Brummel is a member of the Chicago Real Estate board, the Chicago Association of Commerce, and the German club. He lives at 5349 Sheridan road.

Emmett Whealan is president of the Cook county board of commissioners, succeeding A. J. Cermak when the late mayor went to the city hall. He was a member of the board for twelve years prior to his election as president, the last four as chairman of the finance committee. Before he was elected to the county board he was Democratic committeeman of the old 29th, now the 15th ward. Mr. Whealan was a linotype operator before he entered politics, working on several newspapers. He is married, has one son, and lives at 1847 West Garfield boulevard. He is 54 years old.

DAUGHTER OF CHICAGO SALESMAN KIDNAPED; POLICE HUNT FATHER

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Nine year old Patricia Henry, a pupil at St. Joseph's parochial school, was kidnaped near the school this afternoon, according to a teletype alarm sent by Connecticut police through New York and Massachusetts.

From the reticence of the little girl's grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Corbett, tonight, and remarks by her lawyer, Francis P. Pallotti, it seemed likely the child's disappearance is the climax of a quarrel between her father, Wales Henry, a jewelry salesman of Chicago and Buffalo, and her mother, Mrs. Lenore Henry of Albany, N. Y.

The police asked that a car containing four men and bearing a New York license be stopped and held for advices. The license number was traced to Nellie Mahoney of Buffalo. The Hartford police believe the child's father, Wales Henry, can explain her sudden disappearance.

Witnesses who saw the car stop, said they heard one of the occupants say, "Come along, your father wants to see you," at the same time forcing the girl into a blue Nash sedan. The little girl did not scream but "she looked scared stiff," according to a chauffeur.

BRITAIN EQUIPS PLANES WITH GUN TURRETS

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Gunners, hitherto exposed and handicapped in some of the larger types of British planes, are to be equipped with a mechanically operated gun turret working similarly to the turret on a battleship. It is described by the royal air force as the greatest development in air gunnery since the synchronizing device, discovered during the world war, enabled pilots to fire through whirling propellers.

The air ministry still holds secret the mechanical detail of the gun turret, which is being fitted to bombing planes, but it is known the gunner will be wholly protected from the stream of fast moving air and may swing the gun through an arc of 270 degrees without physical effort. Even in the fastest dive the gunner can easily keep his sights on the target, whereas previously he was often pinned to the mechanism of enormous air pressures.

The air ministry considers the device of such tactical value that it has forbidden its sale and export outside the British empire.

WOMAN BEATEN IN HOME.

When Mrs. Stella Oziminski, 46 years old, 2419 North Washtenaw avenue, was beaten about the head and body with a revolver by a man who forced his way into her home, she reported to police yesterday. Her screams eventually frightened the man away.

Annulment Suit Delayed Until Justice Can Testify

OPEN CAMPAIGN TO RID CITY OF SLOT MACHINES

20 Seized After Order by Mayor and Allman.

Mayor Kelly and Police Commissioner Allman launched a campaign against slot machines and other gambling devices yesterday. Reports that gayly painted "get-rich-quick" machines under innocuous titles were popping up like mushrooms throughout the city prompted the action.

The police commissioner ordered Capt. Martin Mullen, in charge of the drive on gambling, to "clean the machines out of the city."

Proprietors Face Penalty.

"We are going to wage war on the machines that kick back the nickels, dimes and quarters when the players are lucky," said Commissioner Allman. "When the machines are only amusement devices, but are used for gambling purposes, then the proprietors will be considered in the same class as those who operate the outright gaming equipment."

The commissioner explained that various amusement equipment manufacturers had obtained injunctions to restrain the police from interference on the grounds that their machines were "for amusement only" and not for gambling.

20 Machines Seized by Police.

Capt. Mullen reported that 20 machines had been seized and that the three squads under his direction had been ordered to be on the lookout for others. Warants will be obtained in several days, the captain said.

The municipal code provides that no person shall keep, own, or operate "any clock, 'joker,' tape or slot machine" through which money is staked or hazarded or into which money is paid or played upon chance. Violation of the law provides a minimum fine of $25 and a maximum fine of $200. Each day the machine is operated is deemed a separate offense.

Sentence 2 for Taking $300 in Relief While Employed

Leonard Baulia, 51 years old, 2732 Chicago avenue, and his son, Frank, 21, were given Bridewell sentences by Judge Joseph H. McGarry in the Racine avenue court yesterday for accepting $300 from the Illinois emergency relief commission while they were employed. The elder Baulia was given a six month sentence and his son was sentenced to 60 days.

JARECKI REFUSES TO SWAP WORDS WITH OPPONENT

Leaves Women's Meeting, Then Assails Heller.

County Judge Jarecki refused to exchange words with his Republican opponent, Muncipal Judge Samuel Heller, yesterday when they both appeared by invitation before the Woman's City club, but later he made public a letter written on Oct. 15 making charges against Judge Heller.

As the incumbent, Judge Jarecki was called on to speak first before the women's organization. He talked about the duties of his office, of the impossibility of completely wiping out election fraud in a city like Chicago, and of his intention to continue employing his best ability in that direction. Then he left the platform and the meeting.

Dishonest Elections Charged.

Judge Heller then repeated the charges that he has made repeatedly since the opening of his primary campaign, alleging that fraudulent registration and voting, the employment of disqualified judges and clerks of election, and other forms of election dishonesty are widespread.

Following this renewal of the attack on him Judge Jarecki issued a typewritten statement covering the Heller charges and using some strong terms such as "wild expression of the imagination" and "deliberate untruth."

He also displayed a copy of a letter he wrote ten days earlier to the Rev. Robert Clements, president of the Chicago Church federation, protesting against the activity of a committee of that organization in behalf of Judge Heller.

Jarecki Charges Frauds.

In it he said that the famous recount case won by Judge Heller last year disclosed extensive fraud in the home territory of Judge Heller, the 39th ward.

"In the 39th ward," he wrote, "there had been no fraud until the appearance of Judge Heller and then only in the precinct he lived in at that time and in the one in which he now resides.

"In the 11th precinct Judge Heller was the direct beneficiary of 22 fraudulent votes. In the 13th precinct he was the beneficiary of 64 votes to which he was not entitled and a total of 826 ballots had been tampered with. Judge Heller's brother was present in this precinct polling place during the entire voting period and was present most of the time during the counting of the ballots."

German Dueling Corps Saved from Extinction

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—Germany's ancient dueling corps, which keep alive the romantic Heidelberg student tradition, were rescued from extinction today by an order of the ministry of culture. The order permits old German fraternities to carry on in their own traditions and to refrain from becoming Nazi comradeship houses if they wish.

Bulgaria Jails Ex-Minister for His Political Activities

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 26.—(AP)—M. Gitschev, former minister of commerce, was taken into custody today and charged with violating the government's ban on all political parties. He was alleged to have attempted to revive the old Peasant party. It was reported two other former cabinet members had been interned.

SHE CASHES IN

HAZEL FORBES.
[Acme Photo.]

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Hazel Forbes, star of Ziegfeld's "Whoopee" in 1929, who in 1932 eloped with a rich tooth paste and cocoanut oil magnate who died later that year, cashed her inheritance today for $2,208,000.

That, it was learned, was what Miss Forbes netted through the sale of her stock in R. L. Watkins & Co. to Sterling Products, Inc. The Watkins company makes Lyons' tooth powder and mulsified cocoanut oil.

Recent events in Miss Forbes' professional career include appearance in the picture "Down to Their Last Yacht," during production of which she asserted she'd received letters demanding "$5,000 or your life."

Miss Forbes inherited the tooth powder millions from Paul Owen Richmond of Prospect, O.

ADMITS ROBBING DAUGHTER OF LAKE CO. SHERIF

Richard Hohmann, 20 years old, Zion, arrested on suspicion in Waukegan Sunday, in a confession yesterday admitted that he launched into a series of robberies and burglaries last July 17, the day after his release from Pontiac reformatory.

He made his confession to Chief of Police William Blaylock of Waukegan. Among the crimes he enumerated was a robbery Sept. 14 in which he terrorized Rosemary Tiffany, 16 year old daughter of Sherif Lester Tiffany of Lake county, and five companions, and drove away in Miss Tiffany's car. The automobile was recovered a few minutes later after it was pursued by a sherif's squad. Hohmann escaped on foot.

Hohmann also confessed he had stolen the automobile of Mrs. Howard Simms of Waukegan on Oct. 6. It was not until he had driven several blocks, Hohmann said, that he discovered Mrs. Simms' infant daughter in the rear seat and handed the child over to a woman pedestrain.

GERMAN BISHOP'S AID RESIGNS IN CHURCH CONFLICT

Leaves Mueller to Hold Lines Against Foes.

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller's hardfisted second in command, Dr. August Jaeger, quit today, leaving Mueller to hold the lines against the many bitter foes of his church program.

A letter Jaeger sent Mueller conveyed his resignation as Nazi commissioner for Protestant churches in Prussia, and proposed that Mueller call "an inner council of bishops to assist you in this reconstruction work, with prospect of true pacification."

It was the second stiff blow at Mueller, dictatorial overlord of the reich's churches, in two days.

Snubbed by Hitler.

Yesterday his fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, decided at the last minute not to receive Mueller and the twenty-four Nazi bishops he had appointed to take an oath of loyalty from them, after the most minute preparations for the ceremony had been made.

Save for the single word "pacification," there was no hint in Jaeger's letter of the storms of hostility that have swirled about him since he was named Prussian Protestantism's commissioner in June, 1933.

"After having in principle accomplished the task set for me—to give the German Evangelical church organized form—I now, as I have intimated to you previously [I would do], return my church-political function into your hands," he wrote.

Urges "Active Coöperation."

"It is my conviction that the process of reconstructing the church, which has now commenced with the employment of all forces, can only be based on the active coöperation of the country.

"Therefore, I propose to you to call an inner council of bishops to assist you in this reconstruction work, with prospect of true pacification."

Informed circles tonight believed Jaeger's resignation might help clear the air and serve as one step toward peace between Mueller and his adversaries, who resent his announced purpose of forcing all Germany's Protestant churches into one national church.

A council of bishops, as Jaeger's letter suggested, subsequently was called to deal with church and political questions, the bishop's office announced tonight.

4-11 JUNK YARD BLAZE CAUSES $5,000 DAMAGE

A stubborn blaze in a large rag and junk yard at the rear of 1010 South Kedzie avenue early today necessitated the sounding of a 4-11 alarm before enough fire fighting apparatus could be gathered to curb the fire. Damage to the yard and a one story building was estimated at $5,000.

The flames had enveloped an area of nearly a quarter of a city block when the first box alarm had sounded. Fearing that adjoining buildings might be ignited, Fire Marshal Michael J. Corrigan ordered additional equipment.

The junk yard, which is in back of the office of Atzel Brothers Coal company, is operated by Israel and David Starkman. In an adjoining building were kept trucks of the None-Better Ice Cream company, but these were all pulled to safety.

DIES OF STAB WOUNDS.

Gust Pearson, 66 years old, 6410 South Richmond street, died yesterday at the county hospital as the result of stab wounds suffered Oct. 12 when he resisted a colored robber at 67th street and Kostner avenue.

M'CORMACK TO SING AT WOMEN'S CHARITY PROGRAM TOMORROW

Irish ballads, sung as only John McCormack can sing them, will be heard by music lovers tomorrow afternoon when the noted tenor will be presented in the Chicago Stadium. The proceeds of the concert will be the means of providing food, lodging, and jobs for hundreds of unemployed and homeless women.

Through the sale of the concert tickets the Council of Catholic Women hopes the future of the home at 2501 West Monroe street, established last April, may not only be assured, but that two new homes, one on the north side and the other on the west side, may be opened.

No charge is made in the Monroe street home. The only requirement is that young women who receive aid must be unemployed and without a home. Between 40 and 50 are helped there daily and since April 20,000 meals have been served. More than 500 girls have been placed in domestic positions or other jobs. Other charitable and educational activities of the council will be financed if the concert proves a success.

Mr. McCormack, arriving yesterday at the La Salle street station, remarked that it was just 25 years ago that he first sang to a Chicago audience and tomorrow's concert will be in the nature of a silver jubilee.

He was met by a group of close friends, including Father James C. Curry, executive director of the council; County Clerk Robert Sweitzer and Dr. Deno F. O'Connor.

TIPSY DRIVER GETS TEN DAYS AND $100 FINE

Found guilty of driving while intoxicated yesterday, Dorance Hopper, 49 years old, 4613 North Damen avenue, a driver for the Chicago Motor Coach company, was fined $100 and sentenced to ten days in the Bridewell by Judge Harold P. O'Connell in the Safety court. He served notice of appeal and bond was set at $1,000. Hopper was arrested a week ago after his automobile crashed into a safety island at Western and Wilson avenues. The arresting policemen testified that in their opinion he was under the influence of liquor at the time. Hopper denied it.

AGITATION GROWS IN AUSTRIA; FEAR NEW CIVIL WAR

Catholics Fight Fascist Grab for Power.

VIENNA, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Political tensity throughout Austria, bringing dire forecasts of new civil strife, increased tonight as the government proclaimed new legislation regulating taxation rights of the federal, provincial, and municipal governments.

Facing renewed activity by Socialists, communists, and Nazis and anxious over conflict between Austria's two "private" armies, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's cabinet nevertheless stirred up an old hornets' nest by taking from the provinces and municipalities their right to share in taxes collected in Vienna.

Fascists Oppose Catholics.

Veteran political observers, declaring tensity greater than that of July when Nazi rebels assassinated Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, pointed to conflict between the Heimwehr [Fascist home guard], headed by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, and Schuschnigg's Catholic Storm Troops as particularly ominous.

The trouble between the Heimwehr and the storm troops reached the point of open clashes today at Innsbruck and Graz. In the former city police were called out.

Fascists Seek More Power.

The Heimwehr leaders are demanding that the nation's corporate parliament be composed entirely of representatives of the auxiliary armed forces. Chancellor Schuschnigg and other Catholic leaders are bitterly opposed to this.

The financial situation has further complicated matters. There is a budget deficit of $14,000,000 for the first half of the year.

FALLS OFF TRAIN; MAY LOSE LEG.

Michael Moran, 22 years old, of Syracuse, N. Y., "stealing" a ride with several companions, was brushed off a freight train of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad yesterday and flung beneath the wheels near 64th and Wallace streets. He was removed to the county hospital, where it was said his left leg may have to be amputated.

THE STORE FOR MEN

To Prepare for the Two Great Months Ahead We Bring You a Smashing

End of Month CLEARANCE!

Hallowe'en means Christmas is only eight weeks off. And during November and December The Store for Men will continue to scoop the town with authentic styles and outstanding values. But before we begin to bring you a November and December series of sensational announcements—we must clear our stocks that have been broken during the last 30 days. So we've hammered prices down to a minimum in this Month-End clearance that features full Field quality merchandise at prices that will save you money. COAL INDUSTRY TO OPEN WAR ON DAM PROJECTS

Declares New Deal Plans Will Swell Jobless.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—[Special]—The bituminous coal industry of the United States, engaged in a struggle for its own existence and the jobs of 500,000 miners, today prepared for war upon the New Deal's "billion dollar" hydro-electric power program.

The mine operators, attending the fifteenth annual convention of the National Coal association, centered their main attack upon the Tennessee Valley authority, whose chairman, Dr. E. Morgan, made a speech which astonished and bewildered his hearers.

Dr. Morgan, appearing before a sectional meeting of the Bituminous Coal Research, Inc., alluded to the relationship between the Third Internationale and the soviet government in urging coöperation between the industry and what TVA proposes to do in the way of finding new uses for coal.

Calls It "Communist Speech."

"I don't know what he had in mind, but his suggestion was most extraordinary, to say the least," said John C. Cosgrove, chairman of the meeting. Several other members expressed amazement as they emerged from the hall and one coal man said it was "the best communist speech I ever heard."

George Leahy of Chicago, chairman of the association's national job saving bureau, addressed the main convention and cited figures to show that New Deal hydro-electric projects, including those under construction and those contemplated, would produce enough electric energy to dispense entirely with the use of coal in such production and would throw 150,000 miners and 31,000 railway men out of work.

Mr. Leahy said the private utilities used 110 million tons of coal and screenings in the generation of electric power in 1933, and that the average output per miner was between 700 and 800 tons. Thus the electric companies provided employment for between 150,000 and 160,000 miners.

Tells of Railway Revenue.

The railroads, he said, received $85,000,000 in revenue for hauling this coal and a total of 56 per cent of their operating income went for labor.

Since the average earnings per man for railway employés was $1,490, according to department of labor figures, the electrical utilities provided employment for 31,000 railway men, Mr. Leahy concluded.

"We tried to carry on our work with Secretary Ickes, the Public Works administrator," the speaker continued. "We merely wanted an opportunity to be heard. But he finally asked us in writing if we wouldn't conserve our own time and his, and now we are carrying our fight directly to the people."

Speakers on the program not only referred to the coal miners directly afforded employment by the private utilities, but declared that the hydro-electric power program threatened the life of the entire industry, with all its employés, because oil, gas, and other competing fuels already have cut great inroads in production and employment.

Hits Projects as Wasteful.

Charles O'Neill of Pittsburgh, chairman of the association's government relations committee, assailed the federal power projects as "uneconomical and wasteful" drains upon the taxpayers. He cited the association's booklet setting forth that the installed capacity of the Tennessee Valley is already twice as great as the demand for electricity and declared that the administration was planning similar "authorities" in other parts of the country.

Forney Johnston, eloquent Birmingham attorney and counsel for the Alabama coal operators, called the TVA a "wedge to take the entire power market in the United States for proprietary service by the federal government." He said that no industry had the right to protest against federal expenditures for relief, or for public works not proprietary in character, but that when "the government crosses the line of governmental functions and becomes a tradesman, it lays aside its sovereignty and violates the law."

Dr. Morgan, the TVA chairman, appeared before the bituminous research council to explain an allotment he has made of $100,000 to study methods of increasing the uses of coal.

Point to Surveys.

The coal men fairly hooted at this gesture, pointing out that the United States bureau of mines for a quarter of a century has been spending a quarter of a million dollars a year in coal research and maintains a million dollar coal laboratory in Pittsburgh. They also replied that the Carnegie Institute of Technology and the Illinois geological survey have been spending $100,000 a year each in the same field of research.

C. E. Lesher, research expert of the Pittsburgh Coal company, asked Dr. Morgan whether his $100,000 came out of the public treasury, and when told that it had replied:

"I think this is a sort of Alice in Wonderland proposition. We have had coal research in this country for many years out of the public treasury, but now we are faced with the proposition that—in order to save on the ordinary budget—we are going to withdraw support from the bureau of mines and geological survey, dispopulate their laboratories, throw their trained experts on relief, and let the Tennessee Valley authority handle the job."

Refers to Third Internationale.

Dr. Morgan's reference to the Third Internationale came when he was appealing to the coal men to cooperate "with dignity and honesty and straightforwardness, even though the industry feels that it needs to protect itself from intrusion."

Chairman Cosgrove replied that the coal industry could "cooperate in the spirit of science and the public welfare even though you have your hand in the government money bag."

"As to that," said Dr. Morgan, "I don't know your organization. Over across the ocean there are two organizations that are entirely independent. There is the Third Internationale and the Russian government, entirely independent, and yet—this bituminous coal research is entirely independent and we don't know what the organization is."

In Alimony Battle

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Temporary alimony for Mrs. Anna Findeisen, 68 years old, 946 North Mapleton avenue, Oak Park, was denied yesterday by Superior Judge Rudolph F. Desort. She asked the payments pending settlement of the divorce suit of her husband, Emil, 69 years old, 4639 Monroe street, a retired contractor.

Mrs. Findeisen charged yesterday that her husband promised at the time of their marriage last April 18 to "take good care" of her, but had failed to keep his promise. Findeisen retorted that they had lived together only two months, during which she had kissed him only twice.

"She talked civilly to me for only three weeks," he said, "and then only when money was the topic. When I stopped talking about money to her, she stopped talking to me altogether."

He charged her misrepresentations as to his wealth had lured to his home many confidence men, two of whom fleeced him of $400.

MOCK WARFARE TO FEATURE NAVY DAY AT THE FAIR

Fireworks, Aerial Battle to Be Presented.

Navy day will be observed at the World's Fair today. By proclamation of Mayor Kelly all of Chicago has been urged to honor this branch of the nation's defensive force, and, where possible, to fly the American colors.

The first part of the day's program at the Fair will consist of a luncheon in the trustees' lounge, where speeches will be made by Rear Admiral Wat T. Cluverius and Mayor Kelly. A hundred distinguished Chicagoans have been invited.

Naval Warfare to Be Shown.

The spectacular events on the program will unfold in the afternoon and evening. Naval warfare, fireworks, and a demonstration of bombing and air fighting will be presented.

The mock battle will center around the North Lagoon and the Federal building on Northerly island. The attack is set for 3:15 p. m. with landing forces starting from the Lagoon Theater. Opening hostilities will be a barrage from a battery of three pounders along the Avenue of Flags, supported by a bombing detail flying overhead.

One pounders are mounted on the cutters carrying the landing force and the defending troops will depend on machine guns. The attack on the Federal building will come from three sides, two landing parties approaching from the north and the south, and a third centering directly from the lagoon fleet.

Troops to Be Reviewed.

Concluding the battle all the armed forces will combine in a military review with a parade past the commanding officers of this area, and city and Fair officials. The forces, from Camp F. D. Roosevelt at the Fair, include sailors, soldiers, and marines.

During the afternoon and evening much of the attention of visitors will center around the navy exhibit in the Federal building. Here are models of every unit used in naval warfare. Motion picture machines will show naval warfare and aerial maneuvers.

In the evening there will be a fireworks show depicting some of the famous naval engagements in history. Planes of the 108th observation squadron of the Illinois National Guard will lay a smoke screen and do fire power dives as the concluding event in the celebration.

At midnight last night attendance at the Fair was 88,046.

RULING EXEMPTS RENT FEES FROM OCCUPATION TAX

Hotel and rooming house operators whose revenues consists solely of rental fees are exempt from paying the retailers' occupation tax under a ruling announced yesterday by the Illinois department of finance.

According to J. M. Braude, associate director of the department, the regulation relieves such persons of the requirement to file returns for rentals received. Where operators sell meals, candies, or other tangibles, however, they are liable to the tax.

The department also ruled that persons selling school books at retail are liable for the tax on their sales. No liability is incurred by retailers who sell to school boards or teachers, except when the books are to be used for rental, free distribution, or library purposes, Mr. Braude said.

Accuses Peer of Divorce Plot

THE FORMER LADY SHOLTO DOUGLAS.
[Acme Photo.]

EX-WIFE ACCUSES BRITISH PEER OF DIVORCE PLOT

Lord Sholto Douglas Sues for $1,300.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Lord Sholto George Douglas, son of the eighth marquess of Queensberry, and his former wife, who is now married to a Mr. Beresford, her fifth husband, figured in a lawsuit today.

Lord Sholto Douglas claims $1,300 from his former wife under a deed dated in April, 1924. According to Mrs. Beresford, the deed was founded on and arose out of a collusive agreement to provide evidence of misconduct by Lord Sholto Douglas so Mrs. Beresford, then his wife, could obtain a divorce. Mrs. Beresford is the daughter of a Dutch oil magnate. Her maiden name was Georgina Leonora Mosselmans.

Marriages Are Listed.

It was mentioned during the proceeding that Mrs. Beresford, who was born in Holland, first married an English army man, Capt. Barnard, who divorced her, and that she next married Lord Sholto Douglas, who is an uncle of the present marquess of Queensberry. Her third marriage was to Prince Burhan Eddine, a son of Abdul Hamid, the "red sultan" of Turkey. This marriage was annulled after three months. Her fourth marriage was with Count Bertier de Sauvigny of France. She divorced him on grounds that he was a dope fiend. On her fifth marriage she became Mrs. Beresford.

E. W. Cave, counsel for Mrs. Beresford, pointed out that Lord Sholto was without any means or occupation, "unless the marrying of wealthy women could be said to be an occupation." Cave further said that after his marriage Lord Sholto Douglas lived in his wife's home and that she supplied him with pocket money. Soon after the marriage he was made bankrupt, the counsel claimed.

The peer also had undesirable friends, it was asserted, one of whom was sentenced to prison for fraud.

Tells of Losing Money.

Mrs. Beresford took the witness stand and said that when she married Lord Sholto Douglas he had no employment, but said he would find an important post. But he did not find a job, she testified, and all his friends seemed to be bad. Through investing money with his friends, she said, she lost much money.

After hearing evidence concerning a hotel bill and the efforts to provide evidence for a divorce, the hearing was adjourned until Monday.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES

An exhibition of photographic studies by Clarence Buckingham Mitchell of Chicago will be displayed Monday and Tuesday in the auditorium of the Illinois Host House.

The St. Mary Training school band of Des Plaines will give a concert in the Court of States at 4 p. m. today. St. Mary's band was the winner of first place in the adult band and adult drum and bugle corps contest in THE TRIBUNE'S Chicagoland Music Festival last August.

A $200 scholarship for the best essay on "Plays of Shakespeare at the old Globe theater," will be awarded to Olga Verin of the Lake View High school at noon today on the village green of Merrie England by G. T. Schless, general manager of the village. Three other scholarships of $100 will be given to Charles Kaplan of the Kelvyn Park High school, Blanche Hatfield of the Evanston Township High school and Ruth Carol Peterson of the Mercy High school. Miss Verin will also be given an Elizabethan stage costume by Marc T. Nielsen, president of the Globe theater.

The management of Merrie England announced last night that of 14,000 votes in a three day poll to determine the public's sentiment toward retaining the village as a permanent attraction, 80 per cent were cast by Chicagoans and nearly all favored retention.

Because of the large turnout for the Fair amateur wrestling championship contest, matches will be held on Sunday evening. The contest was scheduled to be finished by tonight.

Holders of souvenir tickets to the Fair were urged yesterday either to use them or to give them to unfortunate persons who have been unable to attend. M. M. Tveter, controler, said that of the original issue of 5,612,309 tickets more than four hundred thousand are still in the hands of the public.

The Pennsylvania railroad has arranged a one-half cent a mile excursion from Richmond, Ind., to Chicago today, and expects to bring more than three thousand passengers to the Fair from all points in the Hoosier state. Fifty cars have been chartered.

The garden department of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs held a flower show in the Illinois Host House yesterday. The program consisted of an official welcoming by Rufus C. Dawes and Mrs. Carter Harrison, as representatives of the Fair. The show was under the management of Mrs. Wallace B. Combs.

The residents of the Morgan Park home for dependent children, 107th street and Prospect avenue, will be the guests of Frank M. Fulton in a tour of A Century of Progress today.

Of the fifteen million visitors to the Fair more than three million, or 20 per cent, passed through the Haeger potteries exhibit, according to Irwin Blietz, manager of the exhibit.

N. U. Professor to Speak on Economic Situation

Prof. Ernest H. Hahne of Northwestern university, will speak on the economic situation at the opening meeting of the school of foreign affairs of the Cook County League of Women Voters in the Palmer house tomorrow afternoon. Other economists and political scientists will speak at future meetings. Any one may attend by paying a small admission fee.

Mount Prospect Festival —Features Home Produce

A fall festival display of home grown garden produce, cooking, canning, and baking is being exhibited in the lobby of the Mount Prospect State bank under the auspices of the Mount Prospect Lions club. The prize specimens of canning and cookery came from homes in the village, while the vegetables are typical of the fall harvest gardeners are reaping. The exhibits will be open until 9 o'clock tonight.

SEE RAILROADS TURNING TO NEW STREAM TRAINS

Industry Projecting Own Recovery Program.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Economists of this world's financial center foresee a national recovery program by private industry in the replacement of railroad rolling stock with modern equipment such as the streamlined and aluminum M-10001 which arrived here yesterday with short and long distance train speed records acquired on a run from Los Angeles.

It isn't expected that the railroads of America will promptly discard their 30,000 coaches and 9,500 Pullmans. But the normal life of these cars has been foreshortened by this week's demonstration of the performance and the economy of lightweight, aerodynamic, Diesel powered passenger carriers.

Building Two in Chicago.

Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific, with two trains similar to the M-10001 nearing completion in the Chicago shops of the Pullman Car and Manufacturing company, is already talking of the imminent prospects of a fleet of such vehicles to save a business day in the trip from Chicago to Los Angeles, San Francisco and to Portland, Ore. The Chicago to Los Angeles service will start next February.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad has a streamlined, stainless steel, Diesel powered train, the Zephyr, which will open a fast schedule between Kansas City, Mo., Omaha, Neb. and Lincoln, Neb., next month. It has been on exhibit at a Century of Progress.

The Boston and Maine railroad before the first of the year will receive delivery of a streamlined, stainless steel train of three articulated coaches. It is to be placed in service between Boston, Mass., and Bangor, Me., via Portland. It will make the run in 4 hours and 25 minutes, cutting an hour and 55 minutes from the present schedule.

Make Coaches in Philadelphia.

The coaches for this New England speedster are being made by the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing company of Philadelphia, which also produced the Zephyr. The engine will come from the Winton Engine corporation of Cleveland, a General Motors subsidiary. It is a 660 horse power Diesel with a guaranteed top speed of 115 miles an hour. The M-10001, which this week established a world's record of two miles in 1 minute, was guaranteed to do 110 miles an hour.

The Winton company is also manufacturing two 800 horse power Diesels for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. An Associated Press dispatch from Baltimore, Md., this week said that these were for a streamliner. This was an error, according to H. L. Hamilton, president of Winton. He said that the engines will be used in locomotives similar to the conventional electric locomotives except that they'll receive their power from the Diesels and generators rather than from a charged wire or rail. They'll pull conventional cars.

Speed Held Big Asset.

The performance of these streamliners is perhaps the most important reason for their rapid replacement or convention equipment. The public in its purchase of automobiles has demonstrated that it wants speed. Fast trains, making desirable trips that are not now possible, will stimulate travel. Speed will retrieve for the railroads passenger business that has been lost to the airplanes, buses, and private automobiles.

The low cost of operating this new era equipment also will expedite the obsolescence of heavy and awkward steam locomotives and standard coaches for passenger service. For example, the M-10001 burned but $80 worth of fuel for power in its 3,334 miles here from Los Angeles.

Operating costs, including wages and maintenance, are about half of the expense of steam equipment for the same service, according to W. M. Jeffers, executive vice president of the U. P.

High speeds will also probably hasten the construction of grade separations, although the M-10001, as an example of its modern type, has safety features which more than compensate for its extra speed on present rails. At 90 miles an hour it can stop in 2,745 feet, according to Union Pacific engineers, whereas a conventional train at 60 miles an hour requires 3,000 feet to halt.

The center of gravity is twenty inches lower than on a conventional train, and automobile owners know what that means. Should there be a collision Mr. Adams pointed out that the impact would be less because of the streamliner's low weight. Yet the M-10001, with its power plant in the nose, has more weight on its front wheels than has a steam locomotive, reducing the possibility of derailment.

FARMERS' CASH INCOME RISES 81 MILLION IN MONTH

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Cash income of farmers from all sources during September was reported today by the bureau of agricultural economics to have totaled $662,000,000, an increase of $81,000,000 over August and $108,000,000 over September, 1933.

September income was divided as follows: $586,000,000 from the sale of farm products and $76,000,00 from AAA benefit payments and government purchases of cattle and sheep in drouth areas.

Farm income for the first nine months of the year was reported to have totaled $4,313,000,000 compared with $3,479,000,000 during the corresponding period last year, an increase of $834,000,000.

PRINTING TRADE FACING $156,336 IN CODE TRIBUTE

Chicago Area's Levy ¼ of U. S. Total.

Code tribute of $156,336 is to be exacted of the commercial relief printing industry in Cook county alone for the year which began Oct. 1, it was learned yesterday from a proposed schedule of budgets and assessments sent to printers. Of this total, to be raised by assessments of $8 upon each $1,000 of annual mechanical pay rolls, $97,710 is for the county administrative agency and $58,626 would go toward the support of the national code authority.

Thus the printers in and around Chicago would be called upon to pay more than one-quarter of the $208,650 expenditures estimated for the national body, which has all 48 states in its jurisdiction. To this end, it is proposed that Cook county members of the industry pay $3 for each $1,000 of annual mechanical pay roll.

Rate Is $5 on $1,000.

The tentative rate of assessment fixed at Washington for the support of the Cook county agency is $5 on each $1,000 of pay roll annually. This would produce an amount, if collections could be made, which would be $26,650 in excess of the budget set up by the local code group—$71,660.

S. F. Beatty, code director for Cook county, whose salary is $12,000 a year, said that this difference would be wiped out by a reduction in the $5 assessment rate. Five dollars is the basis of code tribute now, but this, he asserted, was the "lowest in the country." Some other zones levy as much as $30 on each $1,000 of pay roll for their local code expenses, he said.

His Salary Biggest Single Item.

Mr. Beatty's salary is the largest single item in the budget. Some of the other items are: Assistant code director [Jack Tarrant], $6,500; second assistant director, $2,600; three field adjusters, whose pay totals $10,400; legal adviser, $3,600; director of accounting, $5,200; field accountant, $2,340; ten office employés, $11,912; additional help not yet employed, $4,420, and traveling expense, $2,000.

Code Director Beatty a month ago sent to all printers a warning "they automatically turn over their cases for alleged code violations to the United States government for handling, when and if they send communications from the code authority to newspapers for possible news purposes."

Those hardier spirits who disregarded this threat have thus far escaped any disastrous results.

CLOSE HEARINGS ON FEEDER BUS PROPOSAL NOV. 13

The Illinois commerce commission will terminate its hearing on the proposed installation of Chicago Surface lines feeder buses to serve the 25,000 residents of the outskirts of the city in the vicinity of Higgins road and the Northwest highway, on Nov. 13, Examiner H. L. Brody announced yesterday. The proposal calls for a city-wide single fare and through transfer privilege.

The final order of the commission is expected by the last week in December. The Surface lines were cited six months ago by the regulatory body to show cause why the service should not be instituted. Meantime the car riders in the outlying territory must continue to pay two fares in order to get into the city, one to the United Motor Coach company which operates to Jefferson park from northwest suburbs, and another fare to the street car company.

Yesterday Lee A. Freedman, assistant counsel for the commission, questioned Leonard E. Manuel, manager of the Motor Coach company. Mr. Manuel testified that the feeder bus service would be financially unfair to his firm. It would mean, he said, an impairment of the service to the suburbs which include Park Ridge and Des Plaines.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

Does a pimply face embarrass you? Get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the bowels with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

Thousands who take Olive Tablets are never cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, dull complexion caused by constipation.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound; known by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with constipation and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two at bedtime for a week. See how much beeter you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

DAIRY FARMING TO BE NEXT STEP OF MRS. RAINEY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—(AP)—From secretarial files to dairy farming will be the next step for Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, for thirty years "right hand helper" to her husband, late speaker of the house.

She's here in Washington now, assembling his historic personal papers to write a book about him; making tentative plans for his portrait in the pose that means most to her; preparing to sell valuable antiques which, she says, have "lost their meaning" now that he is gone.

But these more pretentious plans must wait on that fine herd of thoroughbred cows on the outskirts of Carrollton, Ill., which were Henry T. Rainey's pride and joy.

"I'm going to rest for a year first of all—that is, if you can call running a dairy farm a rest," Mrs. Rainey said. "My husband was proud of producing pure, clean milk, in his big dairy, with its modern refrigeration plant, and I must carry on."

NO FRAUD PROOF, SAYS COURT AT OHIO BANK TRIAL

Cleveland, O., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Federal Judge Paul Jones ruled today that the government had failed to show that Joseph R. Nutt, former board chairman of the Union Trust company, and Wilbur M. Baldwin, former president, had intended to defraud the 250,000 depositors of the bank in a $10,000,000 "window dressing" bond deal.

The motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on six counts charging the former bankers with that offense was granted by the judge.

The court held, however, that the jury of eight men and four women must decide the guilt or innocence of the defendants on six other counts charging them with intent to deceive the federal reserve bank examiners in the bond transaction.

Court was adjourned until Monday, when final arguments will be offered to the jury.

ASSERTS PERSONS DEAD HALF HOUR CAN BE REVIVED

Normal Mentality Is Held Possible.

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 26.—(AP)—The restoration of life and normal mentality to persons who have been clinically dead for as long as 30 minutes is held to be possible, under certain circumstances, by Dr. Robert E. Cornish, revivification experimenter.

The young Berkeley scientist, whose experiments with dogs have been widely noted, expressed this belief today in commenting on the statement of Dr. Velyien E. Henderson, University of Toronto pharmacologist, that the restoration of life to persons dead of certain causes was remarkable only in case the patient did not become an idiot.

"Sometimes when a person is exposed to a low concentration of carbon monoxide for an extended period the brain is subjected to slow asphyxia and insanity results even while heart and breathing have not stopped at all," Dr. Cornish said.

Cites Monoxide Cases.

"On the other hand, exposure for a short time to a large amount of carbon monoxide may stop breathing, but if proper treatment is quickly available, complete recovery is possible.

"Theories of Dr. Yandell Henderson of Yale have resulted in wide use of a mixture of carbon dioxide and oxygen injected into the blood to displace the carbon monoxide before permanent cell damage occurs."

Dr. Cornish agreed with Toronto's Dr. Henderson that restoration of life is not unknown.

"Nearly every doctor at one time or another has started heart action by hand," Cornish said.

"A lethal gas execution case," he added, "would be ideal for a test of my theory."

Asks Convict Subjects.

Dr. Cornish recently asked the governors of Arizona, Colorado, and Nevada for permission to experiment on the bodies of men put to death in the gas chambers of those states, but received no favorable response.

In the case of a dog, the death interval could not be longer than 15 minutes, he estimated. With a mouse, three minutes would be the limit, and with a canary, two minutes.

He described his method as revolving around the use of artificial respiration and injection into the heart arteries under suitable pressure of a fluid, such as blood or a mineral salt solution, containing oxygen. The chief difficulty, he explained, has been inability to obtain an injection pressure equal to a column of 15 to 20 inches of water.

To Resume Dog Experiments.

Either tomorrow or Monday he will start lessons on his fifth dog subject to teach the animal to walk again. Experiments on a sixth dog probably will be started in a week or two, Dr. Cornish said.

Dr. Henderson of Toronto said subjects killed by carbon monoxide gas poisoning had been revived, and subsequently became idiots—"the brain cells rapidly degenerate."

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farm By Bob Becker

Pigs Enjoy Harvest

October 26, 1934.

ABOUT 175 spring pigs certainly are enjoying the result of the harvest here on the farm. Clarence Thurow, farm manager, is having a load of new corn cut for the pigs every day. Getting this load of corn from the fields, husking it, and then tossing it to the young porkers is the daily task of one of the boys here on the farm. The pigs now weigh around 120 pounds. Clarence is not "crowding" them, as he calls it, by feeding them a lot right now. The idea is to bring them along slowly.

Cutting corn, putting up the last of the soy beans, a little fall plowing when time permits—these are fall jobs being carried on every day now. This week the boys have been shocking a field of white corn that was planted on June 12. Clarence is pleased with this field because it has matured well and produced a good crop, although it was late in getting started.

But corn, soy beans, and everything else were forgotten yesterday when Buster, the little fox terrier belonging to Louis Thurow's children, was found. Buster disappeared several days ago, much to the grief of the children. Everybody hunted for this friendly, intelligent terrier, but not a trace of him could be found. Yesterday Louis' family drove to Plano. While they were rolling along in the car not far from town they looked out along the concrete, and there was Buster trotting along as if he were on the way home. The children leaped from the car and quickly recovered their lost pet.

Charley Sleezer, Clarence, and Louis were in the barnyard this morning when a flock of pigeons and four mallard ducks put on a queer kind of flying circus. Of course the pigeons are usually around the big red barn most of the day, but they usually fly without any company. This morning the boys happened to look up and there, circling around with the flock, were the four mallards. The mallards, flying over the farm, must have seen the fun going on around the barn, for down they swooped to join in the party. Four times the ducks and pigeons circled around the big white silo just as if it were some kind of game. Then the ducks cut away, headed down river, and disappeared, while the pigeons dropped down to the roof of the barn as if it had been a rehersal.

The squirrels on the auxiliary farm are still reveling in the corn crop. Their daily raids have meant the loss of quite a few ears of corn. Last night I walked along the rail fence next to the corn field and counted 37 different locations where the animals are feeding on corn. In one place there were fourteen corn cobs beneath the fence. Walking along in the woods about 30 or 40 feet from the fence, I discovered evidence of more thievery by the squirrels. Many of them have been hauling ears of corn to the oak trees before feeding on the kernels. Around the base of one big tree I counted no less than 29 corn cobs. And this "harvest" is still going on!

He eats enough, doctor, but he acts about HALF ALIVE

ALWAYS THE FIRST ONE TIRED

My husband is a very enthusiastic, happy and energetic man. I wanted our little boy to be just like him . . . and for several years he was. Then something happened.

I didn't worry so much at first . . . thought perhaps he was playing too hard. But he wasn't playing at all, I found. He'd tire in a few minutes, then just lie around and watch the others.

Worst of all, he wasn't gaining a bit of weight. After a few weeks of this, I decided something had to be done.

CERTAINLY ATE AND SLEPT ENOUGH

I suspected something was wrong with his diet. And there was, my doctor said. I was surprised to find that a boy who ate as much and slept as much as mine could still be starved for energy. My doctor suggested good bread as an excellent energy food, and Mrs. Wilson, next door, told me that Wonder Bread was by far the best.

MADE EXPERIMENT FRIEND SUGGESTED

"Give him plenty," she said, "both at mealtime and between meals, especially right after school." I took her advice, and I'm glad I did. Wonder Bread is tender and delicious, because it's slo-baked. This slo-baking, I learned, makes it easy to digest—makes every slice of Wonder Bread a quick source of energy. I'll never serve any other bread—not after what slo-baked Wonder Bread has done for my boy.

HAPPY AND BUSY EVERY MINUTE

Wonder Bread will help make any youngster look alive and be alive. It's one natural energy food that everyone can enjoy eating—young and old alike. Slo-baking develops the full flavor, perfects the tender texture, seals in the freshness, makes Wonder Bread easy to digest. Remember the name Wonder. Look for the famous red, yellow and blue balloon wrapper. At your grocer's.

RECALLS GLORIES THAT ONCE WERE IN ALDINE SQUARE

Resident Tells of Area for Housing Project.

A nearby resident of 68 years standing yesterday recalled memories of Aldine square as it was in the eighties. Aldine square is included in the 35 acre territory bounded by 37th street, South Park way, Pershing road, Langley avenue, 38th street and Cottage Grove avenue, which is slated to be the site of a proposed $7,000,000 federal housing project.

The little square, surrounding a park and containing 42 now weather beaten houses which still retain marks of their one-time elegance, may be entered from Vincennes avenue between 37th and 38th streets, or from Eden avenue. It once housed many of Chicago's élite.

Old Resident Recalls Old Days.

The oldest resident of the neighborhood located yesterday was Andrew Witt, 70 years old, a hardware dealer, who occupies the newly painted gray clapboard house with flower filled yard surrounded by a picket fence at 3806 Vincennes avenue. His father, the late Peter H. Witt, formerly postmaster in the old Cottage Grove postoffice, now Station M, built the house and Mr. Witt has lived in it for 68 years.

"When we moved here from a house which still stands on 38th street [then Pier street] west of the Illinois Central tracks," said Mr. Witt, "this street was a beautiful sand road. After the great fire it was paved with cedar blocks, the same kind used when Aldine square was paved.

"At that time Aldine square was not built. This was all prairie country. At Grand boulevard there was a clay pipe factory, and at 37th street and Vincennes avenue there was a house, and one at 39th and Vincennes."

Aldine square was built by U. P. Smith, Mr. Witt recalled, after the Chicago fire. For years it was considered second to none as fashionable neighborhoods went, reaching its peak in the eighties.

Remembers the Old Carriages.

"It was a prize place," Mr. Witt said. 'Every one who lived there was looked up to and respected. In those days women dressed more elegantly, and they were vain as peacocks as they stepped into their fine carriages in Aldine square."

Among the prominent Chicagoans who lived in Aldine square was the late William G. Jerrems. Alex N. Jerrems, merchant tailor of 5459 Cornell avenue, spent his childhood there. Another old family there in the '90s was that of Frank A. Helmer, leading wyer.

The impressive stone fronts of the houses in the square still overlook the now scrawny trees of the park which was once the city's pride in the matter of gardening. All the residents now are Negroes. Near the Eden street entrance is a dump ground over which a sign reads, "No dumping here."

"I hate to move from here," said Mr. Witt, who lives less than a block away. "I don't mind the neighborhood, and I'm used to the house."

CARNEGIE FUND AWARDS PENSIONS AND 39 MEDALS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Awards of a silver medal, 38 bronze medals and a number of pensions or cash payments were announced today by the Carnegie hero fund commission in recognizing 39 acts of heroism in the United States and Canada.

In eight of the cases the heroes lost their lives, and dependents of two were given monthly pensions.

The silver medal went to Dr. Miley B. Wesson of the Olympic club, San Francisco for an unusual act of heroism in saving an X-ray technician from death by electric shock.

The technician, Gertrude Quinn, while in an operating room touched a wire carrying 30,000 volts. She was hurled unconscious to the floor, still grasping the wire. Realizing the wire was highly charged and that if it came in contact with metal an explosion of chemicals in the room would occur, the surgeon reached for the wire.

The shock threw him against the wall but he broke the contact. Dr. Wesson suffered a fractured vertebra and other injuries from which he recovered. Miss Quinn was slightly burned.

A pension of $30 a month was awarded Mrs. Harry H. Perkins of Bethlehem, Pa., widow of Harry Perkins, 38, who died last June 22 in saving Joseph Dunn, an oiler, from suffocation.

Dunn was overcome by gas while cleaning a pit. Perkins went down and helped the unconscious man out, but collapsed and died.

The widow of Arthur Hilberg of Vancouver, Wash., also was given a $20 a month pension. Hilberg died trying to save John R. Delaney from drowning at Battle Ground, Wash., March 10, 1933.

Seize Fugitive Adjuster as Arson Ring Suspect

Abe Satrin, public insurance adjuster named in five indictments in connection with activities of the so-called "million dollar arson ring," was arrested in New York yesterday posing as "U. Kutina," the state's attorney's office announced. Satrin was traced by police who followed his wife into a downtown hotel here and arrested her after she had written her husband a letter. Satrin was said to have admitted his identity and waived extradition. He will be returned here for trial.

Three Building Cleaners Hurt in Two Story Fall

John Lattyak, 52 years old, 4800 South Winchester avenue, and his sons, John Jr., 26, and Anthony, 23, were seriously injured yesterday when the platform from which they were cleaning a building at 1943 West 48th street gave way and sent them hurtling two stories to the street. At the Southtown hospital it was found John Jr. had suffered fractures of both ankles and a wrist, while the other two had incurred internal injuries and possible skull fractures.

KILLED BY FALL

MRS. JOHN P. BECKER.

Mrs. John P. Becker, mother of Arthur C. Becker, dean of music at De Paul university, was fatally injured yesterday when, after her clothing had become ignited, she jumped from a fourth floor window of her son's apartment at 27 East Bellevue place. She sustained fractures of both legs, burns on face and arms and possible internal injuries and died last night at the Henrotin hospital.

According to Miss Agnes Stevens, maid in the apartment, Mrs. Becker was cleaning the kitchen stove with a combustible fluid when the tragedy occurred. She apparently had forgotten the danger of the pilot light which evidently ignited the fluid.

Instantly the stove was a mass of flames. Mrs. Becker, her clothing burning, ran to a window and jumped before the maid could go to her rescue. A fire department ambulance rushed the injured woman to the hospital.

Dean Becker was in his classroom when notified of the accident. Mrs. Becker, who is 63 years old, came to Chicago two weeks ago from Louisville, Ky., to visit her son and see the World's Fair.

GANDHI WON BACK TO CONGRESS BY HIS OWN WEAPON

Indian Delegates Lie on Ground 30 Hours.

BOMBAY, India, Oct. 26.—(AP)—The Mahatma Gandhi returned to the Indian congress assembly today, forced out of retirement by the weapon he himself invented—passive resistance. Cheers greeted the leader as he arrived for the initial gathering of the party pledged to independence for India.

Gandhi's determination to withdraw from party activity, which he announced definitly recently, was broken down by seven congress delegates, including two women, who lay stretched at full length on the ground near Gandhi's quarters for 30 hours, despite night chill and midday heat.

The champion of India's "untouchables" had split with other leaders of the congress over the rôle which the spinning wheel—regarded by Gandhi as the symbol of Indian independence—should play in the congress movement.

30,000 Visitors.

Thirty thousand visitors watched the opening proceedings of the congress. An attempt by communists to invade the congress was repulsed by police, who were forced to use their lathis (sticks). Ten were injured in the course of another communist demonstration near the camp.

In the presidential address Babu Rajendra strongly attacked the present policy of India, a measure of partial self-government with safeguards, as laid down in the governmental white paper to be discussed in parliament in London shortly.

Economic Policy Attacked.

The economic policy of the government of India and the communal awards figuring in the white paper were attacked along with the whole aim of the policy, that of maintaining control over defense and similar matters in British hands.

"God is with us in this epic struggle," said Rajendra Prasad. "We are an unarmed people fighting with the weapons of satyagraha [passive resistance], of truth and of nonviolence against a government equipped with the latest engines of destruction."

Today's was the first open meeting of the congress since 1931, indicating in itself, observers said, the great improvement in the Indian situation effected under Viscount Willingdon, the viceroy. During the government's vigorous crushing of all forms of subversive activities in recent years the congress was blocked and unable to meet in 1932 and 1933.

ROBINSONS PLAN NEXT TRIP SANS APPENDIX PERIL

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Most persons are willing to wait until their appendixes become troublesome before having them subtracted from their interior mechanism, but not so Florence, youthful society wife of William A. Robinson, wealthy Cambridge explorer. She is the former Florence Crane of Chicago.

Although Mrs. Robinson's appendix is as healthy as any one could desire, she has decided to have it out now and conveniently, and not risk the experience of her husband last spring. While cruising in the South Seas in their ketch, Svaap, Robinson was stricken with appendicitis and the appendix burst before a naval vessel with a surgeon aboard, reached him. Miraculously, Robinson lived.

The Robinsons soon will set out upon another distant voyage, in the South Pacific, and Mrs. Robinson's appendix will not be included in the equipment.

Thrown Out of Store, He Charges; Sues for $25,000

Mauro Garofalo, a food wholesaler, filed a $25,000 damage suit in the Circuit court yesterday against Emil and James Caliendo. The bill charges the Caliendo brothers threw Garofalo bodily from their store last Jan. 10, when he went there to collect a $40 bill.

LADY FURNESS OPENS ATTACK ON MRS. WHITNEY

Assails Her Stand in the Vanderbilt Case.

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Lady Furness, former wife of Lord Furness, the British shipping magnate, made a bitter oral attack on Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney after testifying today before Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew in the suit brought by her sister, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, to regain custody of her 10 year old child, Gloria.

What Lady Furness said in court was not known, since Justice Carew continued his ban on the press and public, despite Mrs. Vanderbilt's desire for an open hearing, but in the corridor she gave vent to rhetorical questions which left no doubt regarding the vehemence of her testimony in defense of her twin sister.

Assails Mrs. Whitney.

"Why should people in glass houses sling mud?" Lady Furness demanded. "That woman always has had what she wants."

By "that woman" she referred to Mrs. Whitney, Gloria's maternal aunt, with whom the child has been living for the past two years and with whom, according to counsel for Mrs. Whitney, she prefers to go on living.

Mrs. Whitney, noted society sculptor, has maintained that Mrs. Vanderbilt is unfit to rear Gloria, and her counsel has produced witnesses, among them former servants of Mrs. Vanderbilt, to support the allegation.

"Why should she want to adopt this child when the asylums are full of lovely children who would appreciate being adopted?" Lady Furness continued. "Why should she want to adopt my sister's only child?

"If she [Mrs. Vanderbilt] had four or five children, I could understand her trying to do this because she was fascinated by the child. But why is she trying to do this when my sister has only one child?"

Asked if she had seen her mother, Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, who has testified that she did not believe her daughter, Mrs. Vanderbilt, is a proper person to rear Gloria, Lady Furness replied dryly that she had not. She has been here two weeks, having come from England to help her twin.

Lady Furness spent the entire session yesterday and most of this morning testifying in her sister's behalf. She was the second witness called by Nathan Burkan, Mrs. Vanderbilt's attorney. Herbert C. Smyth, Mrs. Whitney's attorney, cross-examined her fifteen minutes.

The next witness called by Burkan was Mrs. Olga Wright, wife of Harry Wright, Mrs. Vanderbilt's former butler, who testified last week in behalf of the child's mother.

Tells of Household.

Mrs. Wright, who was Mrs. Vanderbilt's personal maid prior to the employment of Marie Caillot, was understood to have testified concerning the Vanderbilt household at Biarritz, Cannes, and New York.

Burkan apparently put Mrs. Wright on the stand to attempt to refute the testimony of Miss Caillot, who appeared as a witness for Mrs. Whitney and gave damaging testimony. It was Miss Caillot's story, linking the names of Mrs. Vanderbilt and the marchioness of Milford Haven, which led Justice Carew to bar press and public from the courtroom.

Although Burkan promised that Mrs. Vanderbilt would be in court today if she had to be borne on a litter and attended by fourteen physicians, she was not present when he continued his direct examination of Lady Furness at 10:28 a. m. Mrs. Vanderbilt looked very pale yesterday and walked very slowly. She was attended by a trained nurse at the morning session, but did not return in the afternoon.

Bishop Stewart to Get $1,000 for Church Fund

Presentation of a fund of $1,000 to Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago will be a feature of the annual Chicago cathedral service at Grace church in Oak Park at 4 p. m. Sunday. The money will go into the general fund for the erection of an Episcopal cathedral, Bishop Stewart will deliver his annual message to members of Gamma Kappa Delta at the service. A dinner and entertainment will follow the service.

500 MUNDELEIN SILVER MEDALS SENT TO CHICAGO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Oct. 26.—Five hundred silver medals designed by the Roman sculptor, Silvio Silva, and struck off here in honor of Cardinal Mundelein's jubilee year were packed today in a large case and dispatched to Naples by courier to be shipped Tuesday to Chicago on the liner Rex.

The medals will be received at Chicago in time for the celebration of Cardinal Mundelein's 25th anniversary of his consecration as bishop, at which time they will be distributed to archbishops, bishops, and other high dignitaries who attend the ceremonies.

On one side of the medals is the cardinal's profile and on the other is a facsimile of the chair he used here during the commemorative mass at St. Peter's.

RECEIVER FEES WAR TO FLARE IN COURT MONDAY

Law Firm Withdraws in Questioned Case.

After the law firm of Wilhartz, Hirsch & Schanfarber withdrew Thursday from the receivership litigation involving the Park Shore apartments, 1755 East 55th street, William Reichert, an architect, announced yesterday he would proceed as a petitioner without an attorney in the hearing Monday before Federal Judge John P. Barnes.

Reichert was associated with the firm of Wollenberger & Co. in the construction of the Park Shore apartments and the Flamingo hotel, companion properties at 55th street and South Shore drive, and in the sale of bonds. He acted as one of the petitioning creditors when the federal court was asked to effect a reorganization under section 77B of the amended bankruptcy act, which permits a scaling down of debts with the consent of two-thirds of the creditors.

Lawyers Allowed to Withdraw.

Reichert had employed the law firm to act for him but yesterday the lawyers informed Judge Barnes that there had been misrepresentation in the case and they were permitted to withdraw at their request. Their objection to the proceedings involved a dispute over $20,000 said to be owed to creditors by Robert and Herman Wollenberger, brothers, Attorney Julian H. Levi of the law firm explained.

That matter is to come up before Judge Barnes, according to other attorneys interested in the proceedings, and a fight will be made on the retention of Chester A. Willoughby as temporary trustee of the property under appointment by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley of Danville. Attorney Joseph Z. Willner, representing bondholders' committees for the Flamingo and Park Shore properties, said Monday will be the beginning of a series of court battles involving the transfer of jurisdiction from the state courts to the federal courts.

Charge Mismanagement.

Harry S. O'Neal, receiver appointed for the Flamingo and Park Shore properties by Judge Harry A. Lewis of the Superior court, who was succeeded in jurisdiction in the case by Judge Lindley, and Frank Walker, formerly manager of the Flamingo, charged that from Aug. 10 to Sept. 12 Joseph B. Barnhart, Danville politician who was appointed trustee by Judge Lindley, gave "complimentary" rooms to his friends for which $106 rent should have been paid. Many other Danville residents were given $10 a day suites for $1.50, O'Neal and Walker are reported to have informed Judge Lewis.

"We're going to take over sixty hotels in Chicago," Barnhart said, according to O'Neal's report, "and we'll need a good manager. I don't know anything about running a hotel."

Barnhart yesterday denied the statement and the "complimenting" of his fellow townsmen. Judge Lindley said he had been informed Barnhart spoke of taking over forty-five hotels but added that he did not know who Barnhart meant by his use of the inclusive "we."

Barnhart Makes Denial.

"Only thirty-six petitions have been filed in Danville," said Barnhart yesterday in denying his reported expectations that Danville citizens were going into the wholesale operation of Chicago hotels as trustees under section 77B.

"Mr. Reichert better get a lawyer," Attorney Willner said after the architect had stated his position yesterday. "There are going to be fireworks soon."

A perusal of the court record showed that at least seven law firms have an interest of some sort in the Park Shore case, not including Architect Reichert.

VENDETTA CLEW IN SLAYING OF TAVERN OWNER

A vendetta was believed by the Sheffield avenue police last night to be the underlying cause for the slaying of James Canzonieri, 38 years old, tavern owner, who was shot and killed by three men early yesterday behind his home at 852 Fletcher street.

The tavern owner came to Chicago about ten years ago from Palermo, Sicily, about the same time that Philip Scaletto and Anthony Canzonieri left Palermo to settle here. The three are said to have aligned themselves with the bootlegging industry. Last April two men strode into a tavern at 1142 Belmont avenue and shot Anthony Canzonieri to death. James was questioned but disclaimed any knowledge of the shooting. The Canzonieris were not related but posed as cousins.

Two months later the body of Scaletto was found in a ditch near Cicero. James Canzonieri again was questioned. Capt. Thomes Duffy yesterday questioned the widow of James and other relatives but could learn nothing except that Canzonieri received a telephone call Thursday afternoon after which he appeared to be excited. He was slain after he left his tavern.

Four Australians Plan Canada-Australia Flight

HONOLULU, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Leon Skilling, navigator for the famous Australian flyer, Charles Ulm, announced on arrival here today from Australia that he, Ulm, George M. Littlejohn, and another Australian airman would attempt a flight from Canada to Australia in November, with landings at Honolulu, Fiji islands and Auckland, N. Z. Ulm and Littlejohn, he said, are in England testing a plane for the flight.

France Plans 2½ Day Air Route to Buenos Aires

PARIS, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Gen. Victor Denain, minister of aviation, told the chamber of deputies' air committee today that a weekly all air service from Paris to Buenos Aires would begin in January. He said the schedule would be two and a half days westward and three days eastward, compared to the present operating schedule of seven days and seven and a half days, respectively.

Wed in Waukegan

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Frances Allen Smith, who on May 22 obtained a divorce and a property settlement said to be in the neighborhood of $50,000 from Mauran [Bud] Smith, grandson of the late Frances Wells, one of the founders of the Wells-Fargo Express company, was married in Waukegan last night to Charles F. Clyne, 900 North Michigan avenue.

Mrs. Smith, who is 26 years old and who met her first husband in 1927 while she was a nurse at a local hospital, lives at the Ambassador West hotel.

The couple's decision to marry followed a gay party at the Key club and several automobile loads of celebrants followed the pair to Waukegan. A license was obtained from County Clerk Lew Hendee and the ceremony was performed by Justice of the Peace Michael Haney. Clyne is an employé of E. A. Pierce & Co., brokers.

SERBIAN PREMIER PLEDGES TO HUNT DOWN ASSASSINS

Praises King in Talk to Parliament.

BELGRADE, Oct. 26. — (AP) — Premier Uzonovich today promised Jugo-Slavia his government will never rest until the assassins of the late King Alexander have been brought here.

In the new government's first declaration before parliament he pledged unceasing efforts to root out Jugo-Slav terrorists refuged in neighboring states.

The premier had high praise for the child King Peter's dignity and courage in carrying out the first sad duties of his reign, and thanked the many illustrious foreign delegates to Alexander's funeral.

Sees Prestige Raised.

"Their presence," he said, "proved to us the high level to which the late king had succeeded in raising Jugo-Slavia's prestige abroad."

Expressing gratitude to the Jugo-Slav people for their bravery in King Alexander's death, Uzonovich said they had shown the world that Jugo-Slavia's enemies, who had hoped by Alexander's slaying to disrupt the country, had not succeeded.

To the cheers and acclamations of the house the cabinet chieftain said his government would carry out Alexander's last testament to the letter and defend Jugo-Slavia to the uttermost.

"Supported by the whole united people and our well armed, powerful army, which is ever ready to preserve inviolate our national frontiers, we need have no fears for the future," he said.

Hungary to Curb Croats.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 26. — (AP) — All Croat political refugees in Hungary will be placed under permanent police control, authorities announced today. The step was taken, it was explained, to counteract possible future charges of negligence on the part of this government in connection with political émigrés living in Hungary.

Turks Nab Suspect.

ISTANBUL, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Acting on information supplied by the French police, Turkish authorities today arrested a man suspected of complicity in the assassinations of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France. The police declined to reveal the man's name or place of arrest.

KING OF SIAM GIVES UP THRONE, SINGAPORE HEARS

Singapore, Oct. 27 (Saturday).—(AP)—It was reported here today that King Prajadhipok of Siam has abdicated his throne at Bangkok.

Leaving his kingdom last January to seek medical treatment in Europe, newly re-formed government.

In June, 1932, he gave his country a constitution after a sudden revolt at Bangkok. Under the terms of the new governmental setup he ceased being an absolute monarch.

Slight and somewhat frail, the king, who has spent much of his time seeking relief from an eye affliction, before the revolution was held in semi-divine reverence as a descendant of the Buddha.

Former Bridesmaids File Joint Divorce Actions

Two women who were bridesmaids at each other's weddings, through Attorney Victor Frohlich, filed suit for divorce in the Superior court yesterday. Each charged her husband with cruelty. Mrs. Rose E. Weiler, 3723 Wallace street, sued John J. Weiler Jr., and Mrs. Bertha Garess, 4250 South Rockwell street, sued Wilbert Garess. One of the acts of cruelty charged was that the two husbands, on the Weilers' third anniversary, June 20, took their spouses to the World's Fair but confined their gaiety to the free exhibits.

HELD IN WOMAN'S DEATH.

Albert Annan, 49 years old, was recommended held to the grand jury by a coroner's jury yesterday at an inquest into the death of Mrs. Othella Griffin, 45 years old, 1048 West 79th street, who died of a beating.

JAPAN ACCUSED OF SEEKING TO WRECK TREATIES

See Naval Parley Tactics as 'Building Up Case.'

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The conviction grew among members of the American and British naval delegations here today that Japan is determined to smash both the Washington and London naval treaties and that the Japanese delegation to the preliminary negotiations now proceeding here is patiently building up the Japanese case to justify Japan's action before the world, as it did in the invasion of Manchuria and the attack on Shanghai.

This conviction was expressed following the second meeting between the British and Japanese delegates at 10 Downing street, at which Rear Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto for more than an hour expounded the Japanese thesis, but still confined himself to generalities and refused to submit documents or detailed figures.

Insists Upon "Equality."

The burden of Yamamoto's argument was that Japan needs naval equality to preserve its position in the far east, and is determined to get it. He did not, however, define just what equality means, but talked of a "common maximum limit" to which any nation could build and argued for global limitation without categories.

All this was trite to the British delegates, and in an effort to obtain further elucidation a subcommittee meeting on technical questions was held this afternoon at the admiralty. This meeting was attended by Admiral Sir Ernle M. Chatfield, first sea lord; Vice Admiral Charles J. C. Little, and Robert L. Craigie, diplomatic counselor for the British, and by Yamamoto and two other naval experts for the Japanese.

The utmost secrecy was preserved about what transpired there, but it is believed Yamamoto developed his thesis of "offensive" and "defensive" ships which so far he has not been able to make clear to the Americans or the British. One of the American naval technicians is reported to have said that the torpedo, which Yamamoto says is defensive, depends upon which end of it you are at.

Japs to Meet Americans Next.

The next move will be a meeting be-meeting between the British and tween the British and Americans next Monday.

The conviction that the Japanese are determined to wreck the existing naval treaties is strengthened by the determination of the two western powers to stand together against Japan's claim for equality. In no circumstances, it is said, will either agree to equality and if the Japanese insist on breaking the treaties they may have to face a building race against two nations, each of which is infinitely more rich and powerful than Japan.

Both the Americans and British, however, are determined to go through with what has been described as the "long and sticky business" of giving the Japanese no excuse to walk out before the matters at issue have been fully discussed.

JAPAN REBUFFS U. S. PROTEST ON OIL MONOPOLY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Oct. 26.—Replying to the American protest against the proposed Manchukuo oil monopoly which would drive foreign oil interests in that state out of business, the Japanese foreign office spokesman today denied that Japan is violating the nine power treaty guaranteeing an "open door" and equal trading opportunities in Asia.

He said, however, that, since the United States and other nations regard Manchukuo as an integral part of China, it is up to them to file protests with China. Japan can not receive a protest in behalf of Manchukuo, which is an independent nation she said.

The spokesman asserted that Japan is not under any treaty obligation in respect to an open door in Manchukuo, since, under the Japanese interpretation, the nine power pact applies to China and Manchukuo is not considered a part of China.

No reference was made by the spokesman to protests against restrictions placed recently on foreign oil interests in Japan proper.

GERMANY JAILS U. S. CITIZEN ON TREASON CHARGE

MUNICH, Germany, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Richard Roiderer, a naturalized American, was held here today on a charge of high treason. He was arrested at Linau June 22, suspected of attempting to smuggle gold over the border, but this charge was dropped when notes of a political nature were discovered on his person.

The American consulate does not know whether any military secrets are involved in the charge.

It has not been decided whether the case will be tried before an investigation of the central secret police bureau in Berlin. He has been visited by the American consul. Roiderer came here to live with his aged mother in 1922. He taught languages in a business college. He once was a resident of Cleveland, O.

Church-State Clash Kills 15, Mexican Deputies Told

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 26.—(AP)—The chamber of deputies was informed tonight that 15 persons were ambushed and killed in a fight between militant Catholic elements and local officers near Tanhuato, Michoacaan. It was reported that seven soldiers, an army officer, a municipal councilman and six civilians were killed in the encounter. News of the fighting was communicated by Deputy Luis Mora Tovar, a member from Michoacaan and president of the National Revolutionary party bloc.

HUNT KIN OF DEATH VICTIM.

Relatives of Charles Williams, 60 years old, who fell dead Wednesday night in a rooming house at 1360 West Madison street, were sought yesterday by police.

FLYERS RACE FOR ENGLAND ON HOP FROM AUSTRALIA

Seek to Break Air Derby Record.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 27 [Saturday] —(AP)—Cathcart Jones and K. W. Waller, racing back to England after placing fourth in the London to Melbourne air Derby, completed the first lap of the return flight by landing at Charleville at 10:50 a. m. [6:50 p. m. Friday, C. S. T.].

Taking off from Melbourne at dawn the Englishmen sped over the 737 miles to Charleville at a rate of more than 200 miles an hour.

After a 40 minute stop they took off for Port Darwin on the north coast of Australia and 1,389 miles away.

After Two New Records.

The English pair, who believe their green [De Haviland] Comet was the fastest ship in the race, hoped to better the record smashing 70 hours 59 minutes 50 seconds the Derby winners, C. W. A. Scott and Campbell Black, took to come down. They also wanted to set a mark for the round trip that would give other airmen something to shoot at.

As Jones and Waller set out four-fifths of the 20 planes that left Mildenhall airdrome last Saturday still had not reached Melbourne. John H. Wright and John Polando of the United States, who were delayed by their arrest in Persia, planned to continue the flight from Karachi, India. They were earlier reported to have abandoned an attempt to continue to Australia.

Squadron Leader Malcolm MacGregor, New Zealand flyer for whom anxiety had been felt for some time, finally landed at Cloncurry, about 800 miles from Port Darwin, Australia, on the direct route to the semi-final control point at Charleville. He had previously made a forced landing at Brunette Downs.

New Zealanders at Heels.

Hard on the heels of MacGregor and Walker came another pair of New Zealanders, J. D. Hewett and C. E. Kay. They took off from Port Darwin for Charleville only a few minutes after MacGregor's landing at Cloncurry.

The seventh arrival on the Australian continent was expected to be C. J. Melrose, a native of South Australia, who hopped off from Batavia, Java, early today.

Squadron Leader D. E. Stodart and K. G. Stodart of England were unreported after leaving Batavia.

Back in Singapore the lone Danish entry, Lieut. M. Hansen, was awaiting the arrival of baggage he had left behind at Alor Star, the previous checking point in the Malay states.

The Dutch plane of D. L. Asjes and G. J. Geysendorfer was destroyed by fire at Allahabad, India, when it collided with an automobile on the airfield. No one was injured. The plane was damaged in landing there Sunday. It had been repaired and the flyers were about to take off for Melbourne again when the accident occurred.

MALOY ROBBERS GOT ONLY $3,000, DECLARES WIFE

Mrs. Thomas Maloy, whose summer home at Long Beach, Ind., was entered by robbers Wednesday night, yesterday denied the original report that the gang had taken $50,000.

"They really got nothing but jewelry valued at about $3,000 and between $800 and $1,000 in cash," said Mrs. Maloy. "I am sure I don't know where the $50,000 report originated."

The Chicago police received the report from the police at Michigan City, who declared it came to them from Earl Platt and Thurman Rairden, town marshals at Long Beach. Rairden, who was seized by the bandits and taken into the Maloy home, and Platt both asserted they had not mentioned $50,000.

Following the robbery it was reported that United States internal revenue agents might investigate the case in the interest of the income tax division.

Mrs. Maloy, who is at her home, 6806 Chappel avenue, had not previously questioned the correctness of the original report. Her husband, she said, is in New York attending a labor conference, but is expected home today.

LINK GAMBLING CZAR'S SHOOTING TO KIDNAP CASE

While William C. [Cully] Flanagan, Gary gambling overlord, lay critically wounded in the Mercy hospital there yesterday, police of the Indiana city continued their search for his intended slayers. Flanagan was shot Thursday night by two gunmen in an auto while he and three companions were walking near 5th avenue and Broadway, the center of Gary's business section.

Chief of Police Stanley Bucklind of Gary, who questioned Flanagan yesterday, said he believed the gunmen were the same who kidnaped Flanagan in August, 1931, and held him for five days. Chief Bucklind's theory was that the men feared Flanagan was "turning them up" to federal investigators. Flannagan was reported to have paid $50,000 for his release in 1931.

Nazis Decree Prison Camp for Those Refusing Work

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—"Voluntarily unemployed" persons are given the choice between work and the notorious Dachau concentration camp under a decree issued today by the Bavarian authorities. The new regulations provide that the camp shall be prepared to receive tramps, beggars, and any one else who refuses work when it is offered him. Sentences to the camp shall be for a minimum of three months. Any one who attempts to escape caring for his legal dependents will also be sent to Dachau.

Lloyd George Attacks Field Marshal Haig

Fourth Volume of Memoirs Is Published.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—(AP)—An attack on the late Field Marshal Earl Haig, commander in chief of the British forces in the later stages of the war, especially for the conduct of the operations at Passchendaele in late 1917, is contained in the fourth volume of David Lloyd George's war memoirs published today.

Passchendaele has peculiar significance to Canada, for Canadian troops were thrown into the breach there and Passchendaele was finally taken, but with heavy losses.

Lloyd George declares 400,000 British lives were "squandered" in the Passchendaele quagmire in order to satisfy the "vanity and insane egotism" of Haig who, according to the wartime British leader, willfully and skilfully misled the war cabinet, withholding facts which would have prevented the futile destruction.

After promising there would be no heavy losses Haig gambled on the chance that the Germans would break rather than confess his failure to the politicians who had deposed Sir John French for a less stupendous error of judgment at Loos, says Lloyd George.

At Loos in 1915 no ground was gained but the British suffered heavy losses.

Lloyd George says that Haig should have been relieved of the general command early in 1918 because he was inadequate for his gigantic task.

He said, however, there were no more efficient substitutes available, but that since the war he has been told by men whose judgment he values that the only soldier on the British side possessing the necessary qualities was a dominion general, whom he does not identify except to say he was a civilian soldier at the outbreak of the war.

This led to considerable speculation today when it was recalled that Gen. Jan Smuts of South Africa, as brilliant a soldier as a statesman, was a civilian soldier in 1914; so was Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, commander of the Canadian corps, who died recently.

Meetings and Lectures

This morning at 11 o'clock in the book section of Marshall Field & Co. Georgene Faulkner will discuss "Realistic Stories."

Jesse Hugo Feldman will lecture on "Jean Christophe," by Romain Rolland at the Jewish People's institute tomorrow evening at 8:15.

On Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at the Fortnightly, Dr. Horace J. Bridges will discuss "'Holly Deadlock' by A. P. Herbert and a Certain Superstition About Divorce." On the same day in the afternoon in the Red Lacquer room of the Palmer house Stephen Leacock will lecture on "How Soon Can We Start the Next War?"

ROBBERS FIGHT OVER VICTIM'S CASH; SHOOT HIM

Two bandits, arguing which should search their victim's pockets, last night accidentally shot, probably fatally, Oliver Casebier, 27 years old, 1338 South Tripp street, during an attempted holdup in Douglas park.

Casebier was being driven through the park by Mrs. Marie Cole, 24 years old, 1342 South Keeler avenue, a relative. At the point where the central drive crosses the east drive Mrs. Cole decided to change seats with Casebier.

She stopped the car and got out. As she was behind the car two men approached and one of them pointed a revolver at Casebier. They fell into an argument as to who would search Casebier. The girl screamed and the pistol was fired.

At St. Anthony hospital Casebier was found to have been shot through both lungs. Doctors said he would not live.

Diphtheria Epidemic Hits German City; 30 Are Dead

KOENIGSBERG, Germany, Oct. 26. —(AP)—Thirty persons have died of diphtheria here in one week and today more than 1,000 suffering from the disease were in hospitals. It was also reported that there were 239 cases of scarlet fever. It was feared diphtheria may be spreading throughout East Prussia, and schools in several of the smaller towns have been closed.

Wife of Auto Plant Manager Kills Herself

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 26.—[Special.] —Mrs. Amelia Devlieg, 49, wife of Ray Devlieg, works manager of the Reo Motor Car company, committed suicide today by inhaling carbon monoxide gas while sitting in an automobile in the locked garage of their suburban home. She had long been ill.

Mystery of the Week
BY MORTIMER QUICK

"The Power to Kill" [Doubleday, Doran], is not another "Paradine Case," but in it Robert Hichens has embodied that sweep to inevitable tragedy that imparts to a book a certain dignity and importance. A shot taken by a woman in a French railway station at her reluctant lover starts the story. From there the story goes on to a haunting and terrible conclusion. Lives are disrupted by the determination of a willful woman to get her man, not this time with a gun but as a thoroughly subjugated husband.

A disinterested friend who is drawn into the midst of things tells the story and exacts from it every ounce of significance. Throughout no actual murder is committed nor is it really a mystery story but an account of the struggle between two women for Clarence van Brinen whom each inordinately loves. As in all Mr. Hichens' books, his people move through an authentic, three dismensional world and have themselves vivid reality. You read with absorbed but reluctant interest because from the first word you know that everything must come out very badly in the end. But don't let that keep you from reading it.

No step could be longer than that from the elegant if troubled world of Robert Hichens to the cluttered room of Nero Wolfe. It happens that I have never before encountered this incredible fat man and his Archie whom he sends out to do the dirty work but in "Fer-de-Lance" [Farrar & Rinehart], Rex Stout makes him interesting if unbelievable. It's a story of tough guys with hearts of gold and people too respectable to get murdered. But they do and through devious ways the tough guys trail the murderer. Nero Wolfe is really something rather new. He specializes in orchids and criminals, moving only from his greenhouse on the roof to his office on the ground floor. There he sits and gets ideas and no matter how smart you are and how ingenious in your killing methods, he just can't be fooled. His man Archie tells this story, in a racy rapid way and a lot of people are going to like it. It's hardboiled but slick and very nicely constructed.

As a college president is murdered in "Fer-de-Lance," so an innocuous professor meets his death in "Murder In the Stacks" [Lothrop], by Marion Boyd. The library in a midwestern college becomes a pretty fearsome place. The book keeps you interested and guessing and on the whole is above the average.

Prof. Smith Offers Study of Conscience in Sparkling Style

"Beyond Conscience" [Whittlesey House], by T. V. Smith, is a serious, impressive contribution to philosophic reasoning, "not intended to nourish conscience," the author says in his preface, "but to facilitate understanding of its nature and its rôle in civilization."

But even from such esoteric material Prof. Smith is unable to keep something of the sparkle of his pen, as witness this paragraph from "A Private Preface," which precedes "A Public Preface."

He writes: "Scholarly efforts, like other aberrant events, have both real and good reasons for existing. The real reasons are not always so high sounding as the good ones, but they are seldom less revealing. Among the good reasons I have for writing this book there stand out these: the importance of the problem, my constant desire to get at the truth, my unwillingness not to share with others the fruits of my efforts, etc. Among the real reasons are these: my sensitiveness at having it said that I am not working at my job; my rebellion at having others think, and sometime unfortunately say, that I haven't it in me to write scholarly books; my desire to show myself that I can write a book if not as large then almost as dry as can other philosophers; but, most real of all, the real reason is a sustained discomfort of which this is, perhaps, the abortive child."

And that, we submit, is one of the most engaging prefaces that ever marched ahead of a large, if not wholly dry, treatise.

Wells Reveals Planned World as Key to Life

Autobiography Is Story of Mental Affairs.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Experiment in Autobiography," by H. G. Wells. [Macmillan.] Published yesterday. November choice of the Book of the Month club.

H. G. WELLS subtitles his autobiography [which has been awaited with more eagerness by more readers than any autobiography of our day] "Discoveries and Conclusions of a Very Ordinary Brain [since 1866]." That subtitle is immediately illuminative of the autobiography, for it is concerned wholly with [as Mr. Wells characteristically sums up on page 424 the previous and forecasts on the following pages] "the development, the steady progressive growth of a modern vision of the world," and is, as he reiterates "a mental autobiography."

Throughout its pages Mr. Wells sees himself with a "flexible but second rate" brain, rising from the morass of the semi-slums to a position where "most of the people in the world in key positions are more or less accessible to me," through not only poverty, but tuberculosis and a crushed kidney, to himself always an example of what man MAY do, what man COULD do in the strangely yeasty transition from Victorianism to modernity.

In his mind there were ferments, he declares, if perhaps a little more documented, not one iota less active than in the minds of thousands of his fellow men. He constitutes himself their spokesman because he is in essence themselves, he declares.

"The Idea of a Planned World" is the sum and goal of his years of living and thinking. What that planned world is, Mr. Wells has stated in his novels [in the later more pamphleteering ones] and he restates succinctly in his autobiography. How little planned the present world is, he also states, succinctly and frankly.

There have been rumors of the devastating frankness of Mr. Wells' confessions. The reader who expects self-revelation of activities which are wont to shock him—the amorous—will find a simple statement of Mr. Wells' marital difficulties, a discussion of his ideas of monogamy and free love and no case histories whatever. The autobiography is frank in a new, vivid and tense fashion. It tells the sharp, even the bitter truth about the author's mind, which is an intimacy rare in literature.

The autobiography is a long, discursive book which falls into exact proportions . . . the record of Wells' early life and struggles for knowledge and a start in life, the tale of his literary progress and the statement of his conclusions as to the reason for life in its pursuit of liberty and happiness.

The reader will find, according to his own interests, one or the other or all of the sections of the autobiography fascinating. To me, the first two parts surpass the latter. The story of the small boy, apprenticed to a draper who would not allow himself to read a novel or play a game because both were distractions from his pursuit of an education [self-deducted], the record of the young man literally sick with ambition, swatting away at his teaching while always the terror of the acrid taste of blood in his mouth hung over him, laid low, time and time again, has the poignancy of great literature. [The autobiography is a vital human record but not really great literature . . . Mr. Wells is not, and never was, a great stylist, and in this book almost less than in anything he has written does he make any attempt at fine writing.] But the hero of the first part of H. G. Wells' autobiography is one of the great literary creations.

In another section, which interests me terrifically, Mr. Wells dissects the business of writing, lets a good deal of the gas out of the balloon and frankly states his own final having done with the novel form. "Who would read a novel if we were permitted to write biography—all out?" he asks, and declares that he regrets the shortness of the years which are left to him, more because there are biographies that he wants to write than anything else.

"I am disposed to question whether the novel will have any great importance in the intellectual life of the future," he writes, "because I believe we are moving toward a greater freedom of truthful comment upon individuals" and continues, "It seems . . . probable to me that it will dwindle and die altogether and be replaced by more searching and outspoken biography and autobiography."

Of his own books he says [in various portions of the autobiography], "In many ways I think 'The Undying Fire' one of the best pieces of work I ever did. I set great store by it still," and "Next to 'Tono-Bungay,' 'Mr. Britling Sees It Through,' and 'Joan and Peter' come as near to being full dress novels as anything I have written," and of "The Research Magnificent." "I may complain that 'The Research Magnificent' is a book deserving to be remembered and yet seems to be largely forgotten. I liked it when I re-read it and I find it remarkably up to date with my present opinions."

But it is his "outlines" which give him the most satisfaction as their creator, "The Outline of History," "The Work Wealth and Happiness of Mankind," and "The Science of Life." He declares, "These three works taken together do, I believe, still give a clearer, fuller, and compacter summary of what the normal citizen of the modern state should know than any other group of books in existence.

Education and politics to him are exemplified by the small and inflexible brained teachers producing "only a sort of systematic softening of the brain," and politicians, masquerading as statesmen [with three well known English ones named], who are "by education and force of uncritical acceptance, infantile defectives who ought to be either referred back to a study of the elements of human ecology or certified and secluded as damaged minds incapable of managing public affairs."

In all matters of the mind and its education Mr. Wells speaks out with the fiery force of one who has nothing to fear from God or man, having lived enough of his days that the end of them holds no menace and having spent most of them battling man's inhumanity to himself and mankind.

"Experiment in Autobiography" is one of the important human documents of our day.

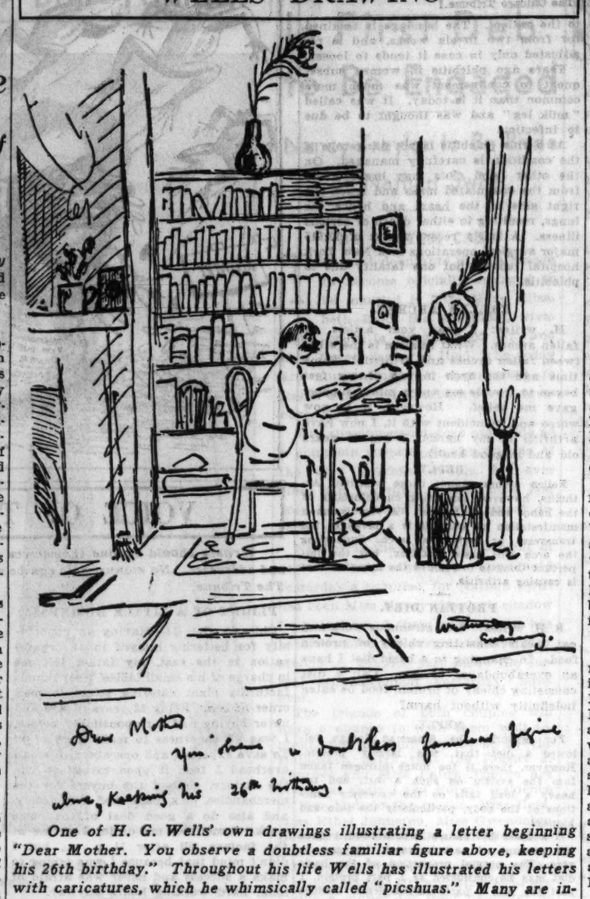
Gilpatric Adds to Merry Tales in 'Mr. Glencannon'

"Mr. Glencannon" [Dodd-Mead], Guy Gilpatric's third volume of the hilarious happenings of the walrus mustached Scotch chief engineer of the rusty old Inchcliffe Castle, like its predecessors—"Scotch and Water" and "Half Seas Over"—is a rollicking collection of sea adventure, well lubricated with Duggan's Dew o' Kirkintilloch. The ten tales in this jovial journal of a Scotsman are packed with chuckles and lively with incident.

WELLS DRAWING



One of H. G. Wells' own drawings illustrating a letter beginning "Dear Mother. You observe a doubtless familiar figure above, keeping his 26th birthday." Throughout his life Wells has illustrated his letters with caricatures, which he whimsically called "picshuas." Many are included in the autobiography.

London Mercury Will Be Edited by Scott-James

Scope of English Magazine to Be Broadened.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—It will seem strange to have a London Mercury which does not bear the name of J. C. Squire as editor; but a change has occurred, and in future the London Mercury will be edited by R. A. Scott-James. Its scope will be broadened so as to include matters hitherto disregarded in concentration upon the arts; and new contributors will be Hilaire Belloc, G. K. Chesterton, E. M. Forster, R. H. Mottram, Wyndham Lewis, Sylvia Townsend Warner, and others.

Mr. Scott-James was the editor before the war of an ambitious and excellent weekly paper called the New Weekly, and he has recently been assisting the editor of the Spectator. He has many friends among the youngest writers of all, and under his control the London Mercury will be a real meeting ground for the different generations.

I think it will be a very live periodical, not iconoclastic but enterprising. It is an interesting fact that Mr. Scott-James' previous paper, the New Weekly, contained twenty years ago contributions [written when the writers were very young] from almost all the men and women who have since become leading figures in English literary life. If the Mercury does as much for the new generation, and at the same time keeps in touch with such men and women as I have named above, it will be a magazine which all must read. [14 Burleigh street, London.]

Dean Inge's "Vale" [published this week in New York by Longmans Green] is a very brief autobiography of the deepest interest. This great churchman, who has so unfortunately been labeled "the gloomy dean," has written a little survey of his own life, and the progress of his ideas, which he wishes to be all that anybody should know of his life. That he will succeed in preventing more elaborate biographies from being written in the future is improbable; but the book is very sincere and very attractive.

Following upon the liberation of "Ulysses" in America, a strong effort is being made in England to secure the publication of an English edition. This is not only a rumor; it is a fact. I do not know whether the attempt will be successful. It is, at any rate, being actively backed by all who believe in the liberty of the author.

Lovat Dickson, the London publisher, is enlarging the range of his magazine, Lovat Dickson's Magazine, which he edits himself. It has hitherto contained short stories only; now it is to print biographical and autobiographical articles.

Mr. Dickson has had a remarkable career. He is still very young, but he has been assistant professor at Toronto university, a lecturer in the United States, acting editor of the Fortnightly Review, and a publisher—all within the space of a few years.

His energy is terrific, and I am assured that he is destined to go far in the world of books. So far his greatest success has been "Dew on the Grass," that delightful study of childhood, which has been a favorite with all, written by Eiluned Lewis, with a prefatory letter from Charles Morgan. Other successes are promised.

Chemistry, as well as religion, is opposed to the Wallace-Tugwell-Ezekiel theories of destruction and defeatism. We believe our farmers should be allowed to produce to the full in God's providence and that it is the job of science to find uses for all surpluses.

"The Newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."—Chicago Tribune.

PROF. TUGWELL FINDS HIS SPIRITUAL HOME.

The learned Prof. Tugwell has been conveniently out of the country during the electoral campaign. After he had eluded the process servers who wanted to subpena him in an AAA case he all but vanished. Now he has bobbed up in Rome, precisely as might have been expected.

Prof. Tugwell, principal exponent of the planned economy, quite naturally gravitated to the land where his ideas have been most thoroughly exploited. He would want to see how a nation is regimented and how it is kept regimented. He would aim to see how the game of Fascism is played in the big leagues. To Prof. Tugwell, Sig. Mussolini is Babe Ruth and the Dean boys.

Prof. Tugwell's nominal excuse for going to Rome, it now appears, was to attend the sessions of the International Institute of Agriculture. This is essentially a statistical organization and Mr. Farley might have been justified in thinking that Prof. Tugwell would remain well hidden behind curves of trend and pie charts. It didn't work out that way. The wine of Fascism went to the professor's head. He kicked the statistics into a pile, climbed on top and burst forth in a war whoop.

The delights of the planned economy, it appears, are not to be limited to those who want them. The planned economy is not to be restricted to Russia, Germany, and Italy. The whole of international trade is to be planned. The professor foresaw a "process of pragmatic and willful selection" by which nations would exchange their products.

It is, of course, impossible to plan international trade without planning domestic production and distribution for each country as well. If, for example, America's cotton production is to be planned downward, somebody will have to plan the redistribution of the south's population and plan new occupations for the millions of field hands who will be thrown out of work. And, it should be added, the men and women who formerly made their livings in cotton will be given no choice in the decision. They will do what they are told to do, or else——. That has already happened in Italy and Russia, with a resultant impoverishment of the people, and Prof. Tugwell wants it to happen everywhere.

Prof. Tugwell has small use for American traditions. He would destroy freedom of action in our domestic economy and he would, at the same time, ignore Washington's warning against entangling alliances. The planned world economy which the professor envisages would be expressed in a series of international trade treaties, somewhat resembling the treaties signed by the units of the British empire at Ottawa a few years ago. The consequence would be the creation of at least two and possibly more rival groupings of nations, each group more or less self-contained but not quite equally endowed with natural resources. Inevitably, if the world were so organized, the United States would become a principal member of one or another group and as such could not avoid joining its wars of aggression and defense. Prof. Tugwell would create a new and more formidable rivalry of alliances than any yet seen; and in such a world the United States could not maintain a policy of aloofness. We would be in up to the neck. The menace of international wars for economic aggrandizement would be immediately increased and the possibility of our becoming involved would become a certainty.

"A process of pragmatic and willful selection" is a highbrow phrase which sounds harmless. In the connection in which Prof. Tugwell used it it means war for the United States of America. Mussolini understood this. He starts the military training of Italian boys at the age of 8.

PEDESTRIAN'S PROTEST.

The language permitted a family newspaper is inadequate to express a pedestrian's feeling regarding the new Michigan avenue traffic light system.

From the standpoint of its control of vehicular traffic alone, the new system seems admirable. To the principle of progressive lighting, operated effectively for some years in the loop, has been added a new and logical treatment of the opposing streams of traffic as occupying two distinct thoroughfares. Traffic flow on the two sides of a street is rarely uniform, and its handling on Michigan avenue seems to have been expedited by permitting that on one side of the boulevard to go ahead while the flow in the opposite direction is halted.

This system has the inherent and fundamental weakness, however, of forcing pedestrians crossing the avenue to halt midway until the vehicles in the far lane stop and permit them to complete their trip. Even with the ideal driving conditions since the system was put into operation this is highly annoying, to say the least. When the pavement is wet or icy it will become positively dangerous.

Up to the present the motorist has at least had to catch his pedestrians on the fly, somewhat in the sporting fashion of the American hunting field. The new system herds the victims up to the bumpers of the cars as grouse are beaten up to the shooting stand on a Scottish moor.

NAVY DAY.

The meeting in London of representatives of the Japanese, British, and American governments for preliminary parley upon naval agreements ought to give a special emphasis to Navy day, celebrated throughout the land today. It is unhappily true that these official discussions will be much more earnestly followed by the people of Japan and the British empire than by the people of the United States. If Navy day can help to waken our people to their vital interest in adequate naval defense the efforts of the American citizens who have planned and will take part in the ceremonies of the day will be a patriotic service of first rate importance.

There are certain aspects of the discussions now going on in London which seem to us to deserve special attention from our people. Americans are encouraged in their indifference to naval affairs by a congenital optimism and by an ingenuous faith in words, in treaties, and agreements. This and our sincere dislike of war incline us to embrace every scheme for its abolition and in the teeth of experience to rely upon any formula or device that offers us excuse to ignore the disappointments and failures of international agreement. It is wise, therefore, while the London discussions proceed, to consider the pessimism which exists in informed quarters abroad, if not at home. There will be a skilful diplomatic fencing for points and for such advantages as can be won by it. But the American people owe it to themselves to realize that there is little hope of substantial results in the reduction of naval forces or expenditures. On the contrary, as we remarked the other day, the conference is very likely to create or intensify friction and even to prepare the way to a more general and intense competition in naval expansion.

The American people cannot afford to ignore this possibility, or even probability. They cannot afford to ignore the fact that the elaborate experiments for the avoidance of war embarked upon in recent years have on momentous occasions failed to work. They cannot afford to ignore the fact that in the governments and among the nations of Europe there is grave concern for the maintenance of peace and a widespread fear that another great conflict is imminent and unavoidable.

We ought also to understand that even though we ourselves may be able to avoid direct participation in a combat of arms, there is no possible chance of our avoiding consequences to our trade and to our international rights and interests, consequences of a serious and far-reaching character. We may not be belligerents, but our foreign commerce and our political relations will certainly be involved.

In other words, our need of adequate naval defense is not conditioned merely by the prospect of our taking part as a belligerent in any expectable war but upon our interest in the protection of our overseas trade and our lawful communications with the outside world. The importance to all our people of this protection ought to be clearer than usual at this time, for the world depression has resulted in a reduction of trade and heavy losses to the whole nation. War also accomplishes reduction in some measure, and even if we are not belligerents the measure will be in proportion to our ability to protect and enforce our rights and interests.

The navy is one of the chief and, indeed, one of the indispensable means of this protection. If it is strong in proportion to the responsibilities it must meet, our hopes of avoiding conflict ourselves or of escaping the consequences of other nations' conflict may justifiably be strong. Weakness invites the infringement of rights and interests. This is not mere theory. It is the truth of human experience.

BUTTERING THE BANKERS.

[New York Herald Tribune.]

It is something—and we have no wish to minimize the importance of the event—for the President to speak civilly to the bankers of the nation. This Mr. Roosevelt did Wednesday in 1,400 amiable words, rich in butter fat. One would never have guessed that less than two years ago the same orator was describing "the money changers" as having "fled from the high seats in the temple of civilization" and that only a few weeks ago he went out of his way to slur American bankers in comparison with the English.

But truth compels us to add that aside from civility there was precious little in the speech to satisfy a banker or any other American anxious to know what the President thought or planned to do. There were pleasant nothings about the profit system and a vague assurance that some day the RFC would be mustered out. As to economy, as to balancing the budget, as to inflation, as to keeping politics out of the banks, there was not a syllable. Instead there was the old plea for confidence in the American people as borrowers, as if every one did not know that credit was going begging because there were no borrowers—no business men with enough confidence in the administration to take a chance.

In return for these smiles the bankers gave the President all that he, as a skilful politician in the midst of an election, could possibly have desired. That is to say, they abandoned their outstanding opportunity to speak up for their fundamental principles and demand of the President what they believed to be necessary for the welfare of the country; and through their spokesman, Mr. Jackson Reynolds, they shifted attention to three straw men dear to the President's heart. We mean the idea that somebody is in favor of letting people starve, that somebody is seriously demanding an immediate balancing of the budget and that somebody wants this country to stabilize its currency without regard to the world situation.

It is easy to understand and symphathize with the bankers' desire to meet the President half way. Plainly they owe every duty not only to be courteous but to coöperate in every fair request. But to give the appearance of accepting the President's vague nothings as a sufficient basis for confidence goes far beyond courtesy or coöperation or fair play to the country. It is unconditional surrender and, as such, utterly misleading to the general public. If the President were a naughty boy who had to be wheedled into good behavior the action of the bankers might be defensible. He is, instead, a very astute politician who knows how to get what he wants politically, regardless of fundamentals or promises.

It is because we believe those fundamentals in which the bankers are concerned are gravely threatened and need the strongest possible defense that we regret what happened at Washington. For a few fair words that will butter very few promises once the election is over the bankers surrendered a real opportunity to stand up for what they believe.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

JUST WHEN WE THINK that man is after all the most wonderful creature ever made because an Italian ace drove his airplane at four hundred miles an hour and that new streamlined train raced from California to New York in fifty-six hours, we read of a new nebula discovered up in the sky that is traveling twenty-four thousand and four hundred miles every second. Tsk! tsk! tsk! And is our face red!

IN THE MAIL YESTERDAY came a questionnaire which asked: "Do you admire a girl who drinks?" "Do you favor a girl who pets?" and a lot more questions. Well, I'll answer 'em one at a time. I certainly admire a girl who drinks if she does not tell the bartender to put some pineapple in her Martini cocktail, and a little brandy and some crême de menthe and some curacao and a little benedictine and Bacardi rum and gin and vermouth and maraschino and raspberry sirup and a few cherries and strawberries and pistachio nuts. If I were a bartender I would keep some of it handy and when a girl commenced to tell what she wanted to go into her cocktail I'd reach around to the back of the bar and cut a slice and put it on a plate and shove it at the customer and say politely: "Here's a piece of English plum pudding, lady; that's as close as I can get to your order."

LAMENT

Of the Amateur Collector.

Desire for your crust
(Steigel, I think)
Will drive me at length
To virulent drink.

Your hobnail glass pitcher
With arc-au-ceil lights
And a certain lamp base
Drive sleep from my nights.
Your celery glass turning
A sweet amethyst
Interferes with my search
For real sandwich pressed.
You guess you won't sell any 'Cause you're afraid
Some day you'll need something
To serve lemonade.
Or vinegar
Or celery.
Vain is luere,
Woe is me.
My eyes have green
And greedy sparks
Since I've cut my thumb
On pontil marks.

My days are wan,
For I'm afraid
You'll chip one
Serving lemonade
In quantity
And eke a spree
Of vinegar
And celery.

LILA TERRY.

"AREN'T YOU ASHAMED to be asking people to give you money?" I said severely to a man on the Boul Mich who asked me for a dime yesterday. "Why aren't you on the dole and getting your groceries from the government?" "Well," said the man, "don't blame me, mister. I lost my basket." And so I gave him ten cents to buy a basket.

A MAN IS FINED two bucks for exercising an unmuzzled leopard in New York. I don't mind a leopard as much as a police dog. One chased me to the top of a fence yesterday and I waved my cane at him and the lady keeper of the police hound said if I struck that dog she would have the law on me. Of course I wouldn't have hit him even if he got me by the throat, because I wouldn't hit a dog, not even a police dog. But if it had been a leopard I would have had a right to kick the spots off him. "When the leopard changes his spots," says the Scriptures, and if he chases me to the top of a fence that is a fine time for him to change his spots. And if he won't do it voluntarily then I'm perfectly willing to change 'em for him. Which impels me to ask why is it that a great, big, strong man is always seen taking a Scottie or a Pomeranian or a French poodle out on a leash, while a small colored maid servant escorts a great hyena looking police dog up and down the street without leash or muzzle or anything?

WHICH REMINDS ME of the favorite joke that Frank, the elevator man, and I have. Whenever I see Frank he says: "Oh, by the way, I'm starting a menagerie." And then I say: "Oh, are you?" And Frank answers: "Yes, and I've got most of my animals." And then I say: "Fine! Have you got a leopard?" And Frank says: "No, not yet, but I've got one spotted." Oh, not hilariously amusing, no, but Frank and I enjoy it very much.

"OPTOMETRIST ASSERTS Fifteen Per Cent of Automobile Drivers Have Defective Vision."—Headline. I'm not an optometrist, but I would say offhand that the number is much larger than that. And defective vision is too mild a term. Why, I have seen any number of drivers go roaring forty and fifty miles an hour right past a crossroads sign six feet in diameter which said "STOP" in letters a foot high. But they were unable to see it. The eyesight of so many car drivers is so terribly defective they can't even see a red light and go hustling right through it. Something ought to be done for these people. Ordinary spectacles are of no help to them at all; maybe cars should be fitted with telescopes. Anyhow, something should be done about it right away.

"A NEW VANDERBILT RIFT is reported," said the afternoon papers. And, as I've often said before, just take out your watch and look it straight in the face and realize that every time it ticks off a second another Vanderbilt is getting a divorce.

PHLEBITIS.

PHLEBITIS can scarcely be considered a definite disease. It is a symptom of inflammation of a vein and is usually followed by the clotting of blood within a portion of the vein.

Originally the condition was thought to be a separate disease, but through the work of a great German pathologist, Rudolph Virchow, it was discovered that many factors might enter into the formation of blood clots within veins. Among the conditions that are now accepted as definitly causative factors may be mentioned slowing of the blood flow, changes in the wall of the vein itself, and changes in the character of the blood; for example, an increased tendency to coagulate.

Until recently it was considered bad practice to permit newly operated cases to move even a finger. Usually the patient desires to be let alone and to remain perfectly quiet, as movement may cause pain. It is now recognized that prolonged quiet tends to slow the return flow of blood from the extremities to the heart. For this reason many surgeons instruct their patients to begin exercises within the first 24 to 48 hours following important surgical procedures. The exercises prescribed are, of course, not strenuous, and consist of twisting the leg, moving the knee, and moving the thigh. If the arms are free they may be exercised.

Some writers have advocated the use of light massage in lieu of asking the patient to perform the exercise himself. The objection to the massage treatment is that most patients, subsequent to surgical procedures, suffer some pain, and massage may be annoying.

Others believe that marked slowing of the general metabolism of the body is an important factor, as it is conducive to a lower blood pressure and a slower blood flow. In order to combat this situation the suggestion is made that prompt measures be taken to raise the metabolic level well above normal by feeding thyroid extract. This is begun within 24 hours after the operation and continued until the tenth day. As a result of this procedure only one death from phlebitis occurred in a reported series of 4,500 cases.

How much infection has to do with phlebitis seems to be questionable. It is clear that if bacteria are present in the blood stream, veins injured by previous illnesses may serve as favorable culture beds. Normal blood in a normal vein does not clot, hence whenever clots form the trouble must lie in the vein itself or in the blood. It would seem that in the presence of infection, such as gangrenous appendix, exercise of even the lightest character should be prohibited for a much longer period than is indicated in the preceding paragraphs.

Phlebitis is usually quickly recognized because of the resulting swelling of the part affected, the clot in the vein preventing the normal return flow of blood. Once phlebitis has developed and been recognized the leg should be placed completely at rest. Certain authorities advocate the use of a tight bandage to prevent the upward extension of the clot. This procedure usually gives great relief to the patient. The bandage is retained for from two to six weeks, and is readjusted only in case it tends to loosen.

Years ago phlebitis in women subsequent to confinement was much more common than it is today. It was called "milk leg" and was thought to be due to infection.

As a rule phlebitis is not dangerous if the condition is carefully managed. On the other hand clots may break away from the coagulated mass and reach the right side of the heart and hence the lungs, resulting in either death or serious illness. A fairly recent report of 12,615 major surgical operations in a New York hospital records but one fatality due to phlebitis.

FALLEN ARCHES.

H. writes: I read your article on fallen arches. What relation is there between fallen arches and arthritis? Some time ago the arch in one of my feet began to trouble me and a minor support gave me relief. However, it is now worse and, coincident with it, I now have arthritis in my hands. I am 60 years old and in good health.

REPLY.

Fallen arches cannot cause arthritis. Arthritis, however, can bring on deformity of the hands and of the feet. A very common manifestation of arthritis is a break in the transverse or metatarsal arch. Supporting the arch will assist walking, but the important thing is to remove the infection that is causing arthritis.

PROTEIN DIET.

S. H. writes: I do strenuous work and eat meals consisting chiefly of protein food. In changing to a basic diet I have an overabundance of gas. Can a diet consisting chiefly of protein food be eaten indefinitly without harm?

REPLY.

For centuries the American Indian followed a diet that was largely protein. However, there is too much nitrogen taken into the system on such a diet, and too heavy a load falls on the excretory functions of the body, particularly the skin and kidneys.

If a basic diet causes fermentation, reduce the amount of carbohydrates, but not to zero. The normal proportion of the basic diet may be considered as 1 part protein, 1 part fat, and 4 parts carbohydrate. Reduce the carbohydrate intake to 2 or even to 1 part, increasing the protein and fat to make up the total calories needed. As your digestive processes become accustomed to carbohydrate, increase the amount gradually.

SIGNS OF PREGNANCY.

Mrs. E. S. writes: Please print a list of the signs of pregnancy.

REPLY.

Cessation of menstruation, enlargement of the breasts, nipples, frequency of urination, sometimes morning sickness, and gradual enlargement of the lower abdomen.

CUT DOWN PROTEINS.

H. J. S. writes: Will you print a dietary for a person whose urinalyses repeatedly show excessive acid?

REPLY.

Acid in the urine is commonly from two sources—protein and phosphates. All that may be needed is to reduce the amount of protein food by half.

PROBATE.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is it necessary to probate a will when a man's wife is not living and there is only one child who is named as the sole beneficiary in the will? 2. What is the cost of probating a will in Chicago, and [3] where and by whom should it be taken? G. E. J.

1. Depends on the nature of the assets, on the attitude of parties in possession of assets, and other facts not before us. In general, probate is necessary in order to produce a merchantable title to real estate.

2. Depends on the size of the estate, on the attorney whom you employ, and on other facts.

3. Employ an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ILLEGAL INTEREST.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like some information concerning the [1] rate of interest a pawnbroker is permitted to charge. I secured a loan of $7 on a portable typewriter. The interest charged is 10 per cent per month. I owe them eight months' interest now. 2. Must I pay them so much to redeem the article? If not [3] what can I do about it? H. W.

1. Three per cent per month.

2. No.

3. If you wish to force matters you could employ an attorney to sue on the theory that the entire interest charge was void for usury, but it seems probable that the amount involved is not enough to make this course worth while. If the amount of the loan is small we suggest that you try asking a policeman to accompany you while you make a tender of the principal and legal interest.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LEGAL OBLIGATIONS.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. A sells a house to B. A is holding first mortgage. Who should pay the fire insurance on this property, A or B? A man 70 years of age signs real estate bonds as security. 2. Can he be held liable? 3. Is there any limit as to age, regarding signing legal papers?

R. P.

1. It seems probable that the trust deed expressly provides that the debtor must keep the property insured.

2. Yes, as far as the facts stated are concerned.

3. No, but upon proof that the person lacked mental capacity he might evade liability. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNPAID TAXES.

Walkerton, Ind., Oct. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I own two small homes in Illinois which I rent out. This year I haven't paid my taxes on same. 1. If I don't pay, when can place be sold for taxes, and [2] do I lose title if I don't, and when? 3. When it is sold, can I still collect rent? E. B.

1. As soon as the taxes are due and unpaid.

2. No. Two years are allowed for redemption. At the end of that time a tax deed will issue which will be a serious cloud on your title, but it does not mean that you have entirely lost the property.

3. Yes. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SHOULD FILE CLAIM.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a law in Illinois which provides a daughter's allowance? My parents recently died and left no will. In the meantime I have cared for them in their declining years and received no compensation. My brothers object to allowing anything for this. M. P.

Your technical right to the allowance depends on the understanding at the time the services were rendered, but it seems likely that a court will sympathize with you. If substantial amount is involved you should employ an attorney to file a claim in your behalf. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

Growing is not painful, and nature has not made the body so that children and young people suffer just because their bones are lengthening and their muscles are growing. So-called "growing pains" are usually due to physical disorders, such as rheumatic infection, and should be treated by a competent doctor. They are due to disease, not to growing.

PLIGHT OF A LITTLE BUSINESS.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—Having an opportunity for bettering himself in an organization in the east, my father left me in charge of his small ladies' wear manufacturing plant catering solely to mail order houses. Being 22 years of age and never having had a responsibility before, I was all eagerness to make a go of it. To save expenses and operate with small overhead I took it upon myself to run the factory, contact the buyers for the merchandise, pick, pack, and ship orders, and also do a good deal of the office work. Sometimes my duties kept me at the factory till after 11 p. m., but I didn't mind that because I was trying to make a success and never was afraid of long, hard working hours anyway.

And it might have been a success if it were not for the NRA. It appears as if they would rather put a small outfit [36 machines] out of business and throw about 40 employés out of jobs than to mete out justice. A few of the girls that do not get along with the others and are born trouble makers claim they have been underpaid, a statement absolutely erroneous and disproved by our accurate records. Large manufacturers with the political "in" get away with all violations, but NRA unjustly attacks us because we are not one of those fortunate enough to afford to fight back.

The point I wish to bring out is the sooner we get government out of private business the sooner America will go forward, and more power to your paper.

BRAW MEN, BUT—

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 20.—Isn't it too bad that Sir Thomas Lipton did not have the assistance of MacCartie in selecting just such Swede crews as sailed the cup defender to victory for his long line of unfortunate Shamrocks?

His Irish crews were braw men, no doubt, but there are lines of activity for which they were better suited than pulling on the halyards in a cup race. It takes real seamen for that—just such 100 per cent Swedes as have sailed the cup defenders to victory for the last generation. OLE OLSON.

QUESTION IN FARM ECONOMICS.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—I am a Texas farmer visiting your city and have just read your most informative Sunday editorial depicting the plight of Russian collective farmers. As you state, the picture you present should be an object lesson for American farmers, particularly those of California, Minnesota, Louisiana and a few of Texas. You might bring this lesson home even a little more pointedly. Let's have another editorial setting forth the estimated number of American farmers who have more than 34 per cent of their gross income for themselves, after paying taxes, installments on machinery, utility bills, interest, and other expenses incident to their operations. JOHN L. BINTER JR.

GOING BACK TO BRITAIN.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—My wife and I arrived in Chicago from England on All Fools' day in 1926. For the last eighteen months I have been unemployed and altogether have been out of work for two years.

We are not getting relief, have been swindled out of two bank deposits and have been living sparingly on the proceeds of an insurance policy which we were forced to surrender. Our first papers were taken out in January, 1927. Had things gone along satisfactorily our citizenship papers would have been applied for in 1932. About that time the concern I was working for was in poor shape and in April of 1933 went into liquidation.

Your correspondent, Mr. Mitchell, refers to the number of aliens who are working contentedly—who have no intentions of ever becoming citizens. Perhaps it would surprise him to know how many aliens are also out of work, not to mention the thousands who have, or are, returning to their home lands.

My wife and I, who had every intention of becoming good U. S. citizens, are compelled to sell our home in an effort to obtain the price of the transportation back to the British Isles.

And now, Mr. Mitchell, as Mae West would say, "Come up and see me some time"—but make it snappy!.

EX-GRENADIER.

DUNES PARK.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—"Jumpy," the Kangaroosevelt, has been and is now playing at the Indiana Dunes State park. He has been there for about one and a half years.

In 1925, the department of conservation report says, "A state park, no matter what other ends it serves, is primarily a region set aside for the preservation of native scenery. . . . It demands that some of the primitive American land be left forever in its original state, undisturbed and unmarred by man-made improvements. . . . A region like the dunes cannot possibly be improved upon."

What do we find today under the present administration? Destruction of native scenery and vegetation throughout the park. Placid streams converted into open ditches, hundreds of trees cut down along once shaded footpaths, and tenderfoot rangers rutting the trails, blowouts, and beach with their trucks.

To climax it all, a tourist camp, probably the largest in this region, has been about completed and the fact emblazoned on signs facing Dunes highway so that tourists will be diverted from private camps. AMOR PATRIAE.

FOR AN ANNUAL FAIR.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—I think it is a shame that the Fair should close forever the end of this month.

We have visitors from Canada every year and more the last two years on account of the Fair. They said it is the most wonderful thing they ever saw and they could not begin to describe it to the friends back home.

Why not keep it going each summer and call it the Chicago National exhibition? G. E. GOURLEY.

Expert Picks Some Special Buys for Day

BY RHEA SEEGER.

The eternal triangle—in wool scarfs in some of the best trafic stopping color combinations of the year. Try the canary yellow, red and black square pattern finished with fringe, the gold and navy, the Scotch plaids and the outsize checks in every dizzy color combine.

All the best buys are of thin soft wool with fringe in varying lengths. They are grand tricks to tie around the collar of a black or dark colored frock and tuck down the chest of your suede jackets and sports clothes.

Just when you decide that there isn't anything different about umbrellas, along comes an enterprising designer with some stunning new handle ideas, huge prystal circles at least seven inches in diameter that form the loop handle on navy, black and brown silk affairs that are made with borders in lighter color. These out sized handles will allow you to keep your pet umbrella anchored securely over the biggest cuff in your wardrobe.

Fabric gloves for street suits and sports clothes have reached an all-time record of smartness this week. Stunning rich brown, mixed grays and all street shades come in slip-ons and with flared cuffs and are available at prices that will please.

Velvet evening gloves fit better this year and the new colors are knockout. Cedar, scarlet, peacock blue, and a lot of lovely pastels are ready.

It's cellophane that glitters so seductively in the new velvet. The black especially will make some interesting evening gowns. And speaking of rustling evening materials, some of the heavy moire taffetas are here in grand bright colors, a bright blue, vivid green, old gold, mahogany red, and of course black and navy.

This is the stuff they use for the wide skirted picture gowns; it's heavy or stiff enough to stand alone, and the moire patterns are exceptionally effective.

Infant Welfare

Mrs. William L. Underwood is one of Highland Park's many young matrons who will dance tonight at the Potpourri ball at the Evanston Country club for the benefit of the Alice H. Wood infant welfare station at 19th and Halsted streets. The first Potpourri party sponsored by the Highland Park-Ravinia centers of the Infant Welfare society proved so popular last year that Mrs. Elwood Low, president of the center, and her board decided to repeat it again this year.

Margaret Pullman McIlvaine Will Be Bride in East Today

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. Margaret Pullman McIlvaine of Lake Forest, Ill., and Frederick V. Burgess of Burlington, Vt., will be married here tomorrow at All Souls church. The couple's wedding plans were disclosed when they obtained a marriage license today.

Mrs. McIlvaine, who is 38, was born in Chicago, the daughter of William C. Pullman. She is a grandniece of George Pullman, founder of the railroad car company, and a granddaughter of William A. Pinkerton.

Her first marriage ended on April 10, last, when she obtained a divorce from John H. McIlvaine of Lake Forest on charges of extreme cruelty. The custody and support of three children of that marriage was settled in an agreement coincident with the divorce, the terms of which were not disclosed.

Mr. Burgess, 42 years old, said he was in the real estate business in Burlington. He is a son of Frederick E. Burgess. His first marriage also ended in divorce in Paris, France, in 1926.

Mrs. Edey Is Re-elected as Girl Scout President

Boston, Mass., Oct. 26.—(AP)—San Francisco was chosen today as the next annual meeting place of the Girl Scouts, now in their 20th annual convention in Boston. Mrs. Frederick Edey of New York City was elected to her fourth term as president.

Rockford College Alumnae Will Entertain President

The Chicago Rockford College association will give a reception and dinner next Friday for Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, the new president of Rockford college, and Mrs. Chalmers, at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street, at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Andrew MacLeish, president of Rockford seminary 1884-'88, will be toastmistress, and will introduce Dr. Chalmers, the ninth president, on the fiftieth anniversary of her installation as president. Mrs. MacLeish was the second president of Rockford seminary, succeeding the founder, Miss Anna Sill.

Mary E. Reid Is First Deb to Be Engaged

Nancy Traylor to Be Bride of Nathan Swift.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE first debutante of this season to become officially engaged to be married is Miss Mary Elizabeth Reid, the sparkling, vivacious brunette daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Seaborne Reid, who today are announcing her engagement to Ralph Frederick Chatillon Jr. of Syracuse, N. Y.

The announcement does not come as a complete surprise to the friends of the very youthful couple, for ever since Mr. Chatillon moved here last May he has been "Tudy's" most devoted beau.

Neither is the other engagement of social interest that was announced yesterday a surprise, for Nathan Swift has been Miss Nancy Traylor's shadow for months and their engagement has been rumored for several weeks. Mrs. Melvin A. Traylor just made the formal announcement yesterday, however.

The friends of both couples will have a chance to wish them well tonight, for all four are to be at the Halloween party that the Robert J. Thornes and Miss Laura Thorne are giving at their Lake Forest residence for five buds of the season, Miss Reid, Miss Ethel Johnston, Miss Gwendolyn Bowen, Miss Caryl Ely, and Miss Martha Borland.

Preceding the party, which will be a supper dance, Mr. and Mrs. Reid are giving a dinner for their daughter at the Shoreacres club. The Howard Linns will entertain at dinner at their residence in Lake Bluff for Miss Bowen before the dance.

Miss Traylor and her fiancé, who is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Alden B. Swift, will dine before the Thorne party at the dinner dance the junior Sidney S. Gorhams are giving at the Saddle and Cycle club for Mrs. Gorham's sister, Miss Jean McVoy, and William Fellowes, who are to be married next Saturday.

Mr. Chatillon Has Many Relatives Here.

Miss Reid attended the University School for Girls here, and Westover, and then spent a year at Miss Nixon's school in Florence, Italy. Last year she was at Miss Weaver's school in Munich. Mr. Chatillon has many relatives in Chicago, including his grandmother, Mrs. Theis J. Lefens, an aunt and cousin, Mrs. Frank S. Porter and Lefens Porter, and an aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Lefens, at whose home on State parkway he has been living since he came to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid will not give the dinner dance they had planned for Miss Reid's debut during the Christmas holidays.

Miss Traylor, the only daughter of the late Melvin A. Traylor and Mrs. Traylor, made her debut two years ago and immediately became one of the most fêted belles of that winter. Small and blonde and very pretty, she is one of society's outstanding postdebs. She went to school at Miss Walker's in Simsbury, Conn., and then traveled abroad a year before being presented to society.

Her fiancé prepared for Yale at the Hill school and he now is associated with the meat packing business founded by his great-grandfather, Gustavus Franklin Swift. He is a grandson of Louis F. Swift and of Mrs. William C. Niblack.

The Traylor-Swift wedding will take place around Christmas time in the Traylor home on Barry avenue and it will be a very small and quiet one because of the recent death of Mr. Traylor. The Reid-Chatillon nuptials are scheduled for January.

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT was solicitous that all his audience be able to hear him when he made an address in the book section of a loop store.

Woollcott—Fan—Notes—Names.

"If any of you can't hear me, just raise your hand," he told them, then added roguishly, "I won't misunderstand."

After his talk he autographed books steadily for several hours. He started out writing in copies of James Hilton's "Lost Horizon," which he has helped make a best seller, "I did not write this book." Then he switched to "I wish I had written this book." After autographing a few more hundred copies he began writing "Read but not dictated." Toward the latter part of the afternoon the big man, humped at his desk on a little raised platform in a roped-off square, was writing busily and briefly, "Sold by Alexander Woollcott."

* *

THE strength of Woollcott's following is again indicated by the number of copies of Hilton's book he is selling. After he plugged it over the air it went into the best seller ranks. Since leaving New York on his book tour west he has sold some 1,800 copies of "Lost Horizon," 2,000 copies of his own "While Rome Burns." He also is credited with practically having put over "The Thin Man."

* *

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY arrives in town today to lecture and autograph books, and were he and Woollcott to match fan stories I feel sure Morley would win. The last time Morley autographed books in Chicago a young girl asked Marcella Burns Hahner if she would be so kind as to introduce her to the great man. The introduction was made and Mrs. Hahner left the girl chatting with him. A quarter of an hour later the girl hunted her up to thank her.

"Was it exciting?" Mrs. Hahner asked, noting the girl's animation.

"O, yes, Mrs. Hahner, just look at this," said the girl, and pulling down the neck of her dress an inch or two she showed a chest broken into a rash.

SATURDAY Notes from the Friday Cuff. One of the amusing hats of the season is a Tyrolean model—brought from the Bavarian Tyrol, adorned with edelweiss as well as a feather. . . . Tonio Selwart, the "Pursuit of Happiness" star, took his Bavarian jacket and gay braces and lederhosen when he visited Katharine Cornell, knowing her affection for Bavarian dress, and found Miss Cornell wearing a Bavarian costume. . . . Conductor von Hoogstraten spent Wednesday in Chicago on his way to Portland, where he conducts the symphony, visiting A Century of Progress and dining with friends. And as soon as I've read "Phantom Crown," the story of Maximilian and Carlotta of Mexico, I shall read the book he recommended, "Kasper Hauser," the Nuremberg mystery lad, by Wasserman. . . . Dan Rich's lecture at the Arts club this week won all the superlatives. . . . A Chicago matron wore Angna Enters' "Boy Cardinal" costume to the symphony Thursday evening . . .

THE sporting goods department in a Chicago mail order house has some candidates for the "names" department. Mr. Falcon is the buyer for the gun department; Mr. Goff buys the golf supplies; Mr. Miller buys, directly from the mill, the canvas material for tents; Mr. Bates is the fishing tackle buyer, and, boats being sold in the department, there is a Kru—first name Rachel.

'Have a Heart' Is Too Sweet for Some Fans

"HAVE A HEART."
Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.
Directed by David Butler.
Presented at the Oriental theater.
THE CAST.

Sally	Jean Parker
Jimmie	James Dunn
Joan	Una Merkel
Gus	Stuart Erwin
Schauber	Willard Robertson
Dr. Spear	Samuel S. Hinds
Joe	Paul Page
Helen	Muriel Evans
Mrs. Kelly	Kate Price
Mrs. Abrahams	Pepi Sinoff

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

If you take yours with ten lumps of sugar you'll like "Have a Heart," because it is awfully, awfully sweet.

It is about dear little Sally, the dancing teacher, and her boy friend, Jimmie, who peddles some sort of an ice cream confection known as "Have a Heart." [Of course he's been made district manager by the time the story ends—but that's just looking too far ahead from me to you.]

Sally, on the eve of her intended marriage to Joe, a youth later aptly described by Sally's girl friend, Joan, as "just three smells lower than a polecat," has an accident.

Upon learning his fiancée will probably be permanently crippled Joe allows her to insist upon giving him up. . . .

You've heard about necessity being the mother of invention? Well—Sally discovers that she has a talent for making dolls. So he turns out toys called the "Sally Ann" doll, and thus—with the assistance of Joan, who puts her manicure tips into the house fund—keeps the wolf from huffing and puffing at the door.

Enters Mr. James Dunn yodeling of his wares beneath her window. . . .

The eyes of Sally and Jim meet. . . . And so starts a romance fraught with diversified thisses, thatses, and thoses.

H. E. Of course!

Able, likable cast, and strict cleanliness of story material are all that save this stretch of hokum from being too utterly utter.

See you tomorrow.

MOVIE CLOSEUP

The third film and theater relief dinner-dance will be given at the Medinah club next Friday evening. The affair, which will be informal, promises to be well attended. Stage, screen, and radio talent will entertain and Klieg lights, music, and bizarre decorations are promised. Tickets are available at $5 a person and may be purchased at any motion picture exchange along Chicago's "film row," at the relief committee headquarters, Suite 411, 910 South Michigan avenue, or the publicity committee office, Suite 1610, Medinah club.

Physician Who Revived Dog to Take Film Role

Learn Laboratory Tests Were Recorded.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Dr. Robert E. Cornish, the University of California scientist who restored life to a clinically dead dog last April, will appear in the motion picture "Life Returns." Some of Dr. Cornish's experiments are to be embodied in the film shortly to be produced at Universal studio. Dr. Cornish never did any acting before and agreed to his part in the film in the interest of popularizing science work, it is explained.

His film appearance is to provide the dramatic climax for the story. Unknown to the world, cameras and sound equipment were set up in the Cornish laboratory at Oakland, Cal., where his experiment was performed upon the dog. The first movement of the reborn dog and it's first bark of its second life are recorded.

The other principals who carry the story thread of "Life Returns" are Lois Wilson, Onslow Stevens, the 11 year old actor, George Breakston, and Valerie Hobson. The fact that Dr. Cornish made his science experiments available to the movies is said to be one of the reasons for the termination of his connection with the University of California biology and medical departments.

Mervyn Leroy, motion picture producer, and Mrs. Leroy, who formerly was Doris Warner, heiress of the family of movie producers, expect the stork during the winter.

After two days spent in shooting scenes of "David Copperfield" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Charles Laughton requested his release, saying: "I do not feel I can do justice to the part of Mr. Micawber." Producer David Selznick reluctantly released him and either Guy Kibbee or Walter Connolly will take the vacated part.

Chick Chandler, comedian and dancer, has taken out insurance against twins. His wife is Jean Fontaine [formerly known as Jean Fontani].

Director William Seiter and his wife, Marian Nixon, have established living quarters on his yacht El Cleto. It's anchored off Santa Monica.

It's operetta time in Hollywood, following success of Grace Moore in "One Night of Love" and Jeanette Mac Donald's "Merry Widow. . . . M.-G.-M. is to do "Naughty Marietta."

Charles Boyer, French actor, will return by fast steamer and plane from New York to start "Private Worlds" for Producer Walter Wanger. This again defers Boyer's church wedding in France to Pat Paterson, English actress, whom he wed by a civil ceremony here this summer. The two families desired a church ceremony they would be able to attend.

June Knight, whose two operations slowed her up while she was with Universal Studio, has been signed to a new seven year contract with M-G-M, which has evidently much interest in good looking girls who can sing. June will sing in "Broadway Melodies of 1935." Any plans for her marriage to Paul Ames, wealthy New Yorker, remain in the indefinite stage.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

It's a new lipstick that spreads on smoothly, holds its color and stays on all day.

The lipstick lovers around these parts had a field day recently when five smartsie ones in platinum finished sheaths came in for inspection. Trim tailored cases and five shades that looked good at the first glance.

But we know that you can't be casual about lipsticks. An elegant case can be just as deceptive as the tall, dark and handsome gent who turns out to be a wife beater. You have to learn all their tricks. So five lipsticks moved into five lives and here is the story:

These spread on beautifully. They're much creamier in texture than they look—and that's all to the good in this climate, where chapped lips are a major ill to which our flesh falls heir in winter.

The color coat is smooth, too. You don't start off with the red you want and then find it blending into some mysterious mixture you didn't bargain for. And the color doesn't change. What was poppy when you put it on is poppy when you take it off—no illegitimate tinge of purple or blue.

Indelible? You bet. Stay on all the livelong day by actual test. We never could turn handsprings over this virtue in lipsticks, but fifty million women can't be wrong.

These have a nice fragrance, too. Not strong enough to clash with the attar of roses or whatever that scents your powder, but distinctly pleasant.

One shade, nothing startling, but almost universally becoming, is called natural. Just a nice blush. The girls who want something more dramatic have poppy, medium, "vivid" and cherry from which to choose. The medium is pretty soulful.

They're on almost every cosmetic counter in town.

Wreckers Start to Raze Centenary M. E. Church

Wreckers yesterday began dismantling Centenary Methodist Episcopal church, a famous landmark at Monroe and Morgan streets. The structure has been used for many years by the Good Will Industries, a social service project of the Chicago Home Missionary society, which holds title to the structure. The church was erected in 1876, the centennial year of the Declaration of Independence.

WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Albert T. Graham of Highland Park announce the approaching marriage of their niece, Miss Beulah Grace Smith, to Stanley Raymond Anderson of Boston, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Anderson of Boston and New York, which will take place at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday at Christ church, Winnetka. The Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard will read the ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends and an equally small reception will follow at the Graham residence.

The Forgotten Honeymoon

BY ROY VICKERS

SYNOPSIS.

Rhoda Cornboise becomes engaged to Maj. Ralph Stornack, nearly twice her age, due to the management of her ambitious mother. Rhoda is in love with Colin Briarley, who is serving a life sentence for the murder of a Canadian solicitor in a London night club. Colin was alone at the table with the Canadian when the lights went out and he was struck in the throat by a table knife. Chief witness against Colin was Maj. Stornack, who was the solicitor's host. Jack Caermaen, an old pal of Colin's, is his prison warder. Rhoda met Maj. Stornack when he called to express his regret for the testimony he had to give at her lover's trial. Rhoda writes Colin of her engagement. Jack Caermaen plots Colin's escape and elopement. He takes Colin's place as prisoner, allowing Colin to use his week's vacation. Nobody looks closely at prisoners, he explains, and warders are frequently changed. Rhoda elopes with Colin on the eve of her marriage to Maj Stornack.

INSTALMENT VI.

GOLDEN HOURS TOGETHER.

Mrs. Cornboise was better than her word. She talked and bluffed and lied until the guests began to arrive. As the majority were coming from a long distance they were to proceed from the house to the church.

She waited until fifty or more had assembled and then tried the boldest bluff of all.

"Isn't it absurd!" she drawled. "Rhoda has gone off on a jaunt somewhere—no one seems to know where. She's cutting it awfully fine—she'll have to scramble into her wedding dress. One simply doesn't know what these young people will do next nowadays."

It did not go down very well because it was not in the least her style. People looked embarrassed so she rushed to the telephone, rang up Stornack and told him.

"I don't know what to suggest, Ralph," she said desperately. "I almost think you had better come here. It's getting rather awkward with people arriving every minute."

It was quite a long time before he answered.

"If I turn up, Mrs. Cornboise, and—er—Rhoda doesn't, I shall—er—look rather a fool, shan't I?"

"You're quite right, Maj. Stornack," Mrs. Cornboise spoke now with the dignity of an abdicating queen. "I am extremely sorry, but I am afraid the wedding cannot take place. I will tell our guests."

With almost those words she turned and faced them.

"I am sorry to have to tell you that the wedding will not take place. The presents you have so kindly sent will be returned as soon as they can be packed. . . . Daphne, run to the lodge, there's a dear, and tell them to turn the cars back. And we shall have to let the rector know."

There were strenuous mornings in the mountains, lazy afternoons bathing.

She turned to her husband.

"William, telephone the police. It is possible that Rhoda may have been murdered."

"Yes, my dear!" He spoke breathlessly, for Mr. Cornboise had seen in his wife's eyes that she positively hoped that her daughter had been murdered. It would save her face.

. . . . . .

Rhoda Cornboise was married at 12:30 to Colin Briarley at St. Seiriol's church, Manchester, with a pew opener as witness.

It was a perfectly legal ceremony down to the most minute detail. Caermaen had seen to that.

"As to your address. I have worked it out that if this prison had a number it would be 157 High road, Mardlehurst, so I have given you that."

The address meant as little to the vicar as Briarley's name. It was over six months since his name had appeared in the papers and in that time the busy vicar had married quite literally hundreds of people.

"And now may I be the first to address you as 'Mrs. Briarley'," said the vicar, as he shook hands. He had made that little joke at all the hundreds of weddings at which he had officiated and he had never known it to fall flat. They left the church in silence, got into the car and drove away.

"Well, Mrs. Briarley," said Colin, like all the other newly made husbands, "as we have been married quite five minutes it is high time I laid down the law. Listen to the voice of your lord and master. . . . No newspapers on the honeymoon, darling. Don't even look at the posters."

"I'd thought of that," she said quietly. "I meant to suggest it to you. We mustn't talk or think about anything but—just ourselves.

He nodded, and threaded his way through the trafic of Manchester.

"Where are we going for our honeymoon?" she asked.

"I don't know. Does it matter?"

"Not in the least. Let's just drive on and see what happens."

Eventually the coast of North Wales "happened." In the early evening they stopped without premeditation in a seaside village nestling amongst the hills, with wooded slopes running to the sands—and knew they need go no farther. Everything in the village was right for a honeymoon—even to the proprietor of the old world inn, who successfully pretended he did not know they were honeymooners. The inn itself was just right.

There were strenuous mornings in the mountains, lazy afternoons bathing and sun basking.

A generation ago, in the days of the great war, young people loved each other and went on strange honeymoons of feverish joy just like these two. In those days, for tens of thousands, doom waited at the end of the honeymoon—a few days would be all that either would ever know of happiness.

Now and again their laughter would be a little unnatural as the shadow of realization would fall upon them. But, strangely, these moments were rare. Some deep hidden, merciful instinct came to the rescue and they were able to live in the present.

By not letting themselves think of time they enjoyed the illusion of timelessness. To an outsider they might have seemed an unenterprising couple. They did not want to tour the country—they seemed to like going for the same walks again and again. The truth was that they knew they had no time to waste with maps. They did not want to drive to the nearest town for entertainment. They were content to watch the sun sink and the stars come out. They just wanted to be—together.

Not that either of them really forgot the time. Each kept a notch of the days—secretely—thinking the other had forgotten. Time was a forbidden topic.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday. Cruelly the notches mounted. Their brief tale of happiness was very nearly told.

On the Monday evening they strolled out after dinner and sat on the beach. Their last night together.

He felt that he must break the rule then and speak to her about their plans for the morrow. He was groping for words when she suddenly burst into tears and clung to him.

"We can't pretend any longer, Colin."

"No, dear, we can't. We——" His voice quavered away into nothing. Presently he tried again. "It's been worth it?"

"Yes, Colin." She braced herself with sudden strength. "It's been so much worth it that now I can think about paying for it. Can you?"

"Yes, I believe I can." He was surprised, for he had just discovered a truth. "I believe now that I can keep sane—keep myself—for—twenty years."

"Why twenty years?" she demanded. "You didn't do it, Colin. And don't you think that sooner or later the truth always comes out?"

"Sooner—or later." A mirthless laugh broke from him. "Of course, the truth might come out—in the end. But there's nothing to work on. It was all so desperately simple. There must have been two men in it. One must have turned off the light just when Simpson and I were talking to each other. And the other one must have dashed forward and committed the murder. And then he must have slipped away and mixed with the others. The way the furniture was fixed he must have jumped over the table. And very close to me, mind you. And he must have done it all so silently that I didn't hear him. . . . We can't talk about it. Tomorrow will you let me drive you to Oldham? I get on dear old Jack's bike there. You can go on by train."

"Yes. And we must start in good time. We mustn't take any risk at Jack's expense. . . . Think what he has done for us, Colin."

"Yes—there are very few things I wouldn't do for Jack Caermaen. Let's go in, dearest."

Parents Must Control Urge to Dominate

Too Much 'Managing' Kills Child's Initiative.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Have you a dominating—or worse, a domineering—nature?

If you have and you're a father or a mother, beware. If you don't you may do great harm to your children. You may crush their initiative and make them dependent. If they're sensitive and not ruthless enough to buck you, they may devise ways and means to escape from your rule. Or if they have enough of your own spirit, they may give you a taste of your own medicine, rebelling openly, or they may become alienated, especially as they grow old enough for love and marriage.

All this may sound to you like a list of exaggerated horrors, made out of whole cloth. It is not in the least. I know, at first hand, of instances of each result. And in my correspondence I have confessions of many others.

I have seen an imperious mother left flat by her sons as soon as they were old enough to be on their own—alienated even after their marriages.

I have seen the loving but extremely "managing" woman drive her daughters into hasty and ill-considered marriages to escape her minute-by-minute domination in the home.

I have seen the parent with cleverness and executive ability stage-manage her children at every turn—direct them even in their play and household chores—and make decisions for them so that there was little left with which they could develop their own powers, to be needed so badly later on.

So heed this warning. If you're bursting with energy and clever, executive, and of the dominating, managing type—don't focus all that skill and force on your children. Get rid of it or express it in some other way, and let them alone. Clean the house—paint the furniture—give a big dinner party—organize a club—lead in church work—but don't allow yourself to become the dictator of your child's every thought and action.

"When Spooks and Witches Dine—A Halloween Special," a booklet of party menus and recipes, is on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower, for 2 cents. By mail, 3 cents, stamps or coin. Address requests to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

BY MARY MEADE.

A picture to bring tears to the eyes of a jelly roll maker is the dismal sight of the delectable spirals lazily uncurling themselves on the plates just as they are being presented to the bridge club for afternoon tea. But don't blame the jelly roll. It simply didn't have a fair chance. To put an end to this jinx always avoid serving such a roll as soon as it is made. Let it lie, tightly wrapped, on a cake rack until completely cooled. What's more, place it on that rack seam down. This discourages any tendency it may have to open up with a smile when cut off in slices and served.

Then another tip, while we're thinking in terms of sponge rolls. You've noticed that we always direct that the rolling of sponge cake with jelly be performed while the cake is hot. But this does not hold for all fillings. If a cooked filling containing whipped cream is used, cool the cake slightly before spreading on the filling and rolling it. If whipped cream alone makes up the filling the cake must be completely cold. This does increase the risk of cracking, but if the cake is turned onto a dampened towel and this placed on a cake rack the dampness will keep the cake moist enough to roll successfully after it is cold.

Are you discovering that some of those linens which were lying away during the humid days of August and early September, or were soiled and left in a clothes hamper for several days during warm weather, are turning up now with mildew spots? This distressing stain is really a fungus growth which, if allowed to remain for any length of time, eventually will grow deep enough into the cloth to ruin the fabric. These spots should be removed as soon as they are discovered. Simply rub them with soap, then place the linens in the sun. For especially stubborn cases saturate the stains with lemon juice and place them in the sun. If this does not do the job apply Javelle if the material is white linen or cotton.

Do you ever groan at the sight of batter running roguishly out into the oven because the loose bottom of your angel cake pan has been bent or warped? The boys who understand those mechanical problems must have heard about the disaster, for now we're finding on the market aluminum angel food pans with the same useful loose bottom, but equipped with a neat seal at the edge which forbids the batter to wander.

Modern Girls View Necking as Out of Date

BY DORIS BLAKE.

You'd better snap into a new line, boys!

An evening spent necking and petting was yesterday's idea of a good time. Today, things are different. Girls are different. If you called one of them a "flapper" she'd quickly tell you you were dating yourself away back. The flapper era is dead, and so is the girl who went with it.

Naturally, we do not mean to insinuate that girls do not kiss. We are talking of providing a young woman with a whole evening's enjoyment, of bringing more to the evening occasions than a mushy line and a still mushier pair of lips. Even if you haven't any money to spend on the girl, she still would just as soon you didn't feel impelled to spend the entire evening mushing. There are things to talk about, bridge to play, and other games.

So there, boys, you get it straight from one of your own contemporaries.

Pretty square shooting sisters you'll find in this new group of girls. Smart, fairly wise, and exacting. Exacting not in the money sense, which you should appreciate, but in companionships for their idle hours.

It is pretty cheap behavior, when you get down to it, brothers, pawing and mauling a girl. Well, she's raised the ante. You can't come in if you can't bid higher for her favors.

Mary E. Reid Is First Deb to Be Engaged

Nancy Traylor to Be Bride of Nathan Swift.

Charlotte, to Charles J. Whalen Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles J. Whalen of Kenmore avenue. Miss Reynolds is a graduate of St. Mary's of Notre Dame and is known as a poet. She is a niece of Congressman Fred A. Britten. Mr. Whalen is a graduate of the University of Chicago.

Thorne Party Annual Affair.

The Thornes' Halloween party is an annual affair and one that is anticipated by the younger set with much pleasure every year. The 150 guests, who will be dressed as babies or little children, will assemble first in the basement of the house at White Oaks to play Halloween games and to find their way out of a maze that Mrs. Thorne has had constructed for the affair.

Miss Bowen probably won't stay as late at the party as will the other young guests, for she is to ride tomorrow in the hunter trials that the Mill Creek Hunt is staging in Millburn, and late hours and jumping do not go well together. For that reason the Mill Creek Hunt decided to postpone its annual hunt ball that had been planned for tonight.

The trials will start at 11 o'clock and at 12 a barbecue luncheon will be served, with the farmers over whose lands the hunt rides as especial guests. After the trials are finished there will be a combination tea and supper party for members of the hunt and their friends in the clubhouse.

Bonnie-Jean Clark Will Bow Today.

Most of the debutante crowd will be driving to Barrington this afternoon to attend the debut tea of Miss Bonnie-Jean Clark, the charming brunette daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Clark, at the Clarks' home in Barrington's hills.

The debutante and her mother will receive in the huge living room, filled with flowers for the occasion, and seven of the season's buds will be pouring at the tea tables. They include Miss Margaret Talbot, with whom Miss Clark will share the honors at a dinner dance in town on Nov. 8; Miss Frances Jeffery, Miss Martha Borland, Miss Ethel Johnston, Miss Mary Harrington, Miss Betty Babson, and Margery Garvey. Miss Beth Coleman, one of last year's debutantes, also will assist.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark are hoping that their son, Carrington, and his bride, the former Carol Crocker of Boston, will be here for the tea, but Mr. Clark's business may keep him in Kansas City.

Longmeadow Hunt to Hold Long Run.

Members of the Longmeadow Hunt are going in for hunting in a strenuous way today, for they are to have an all day run . . . the first they have ever had . . . interrupted only by a picnic luncheon. With Clark Lawrence, master of the hounds, in the lead they will set out at 10:30 this morning from the Brandt farm on Willow road west of Winnetka and ride in the direction of the Des Plaines river.

At noon they will stable their horses at a farm on the river and settle down for a real old-fashioned picnic. In the afternoon they will retrace their course, making a total run of 20 miles.

The Saddle and Cycle club will be festive with jack-o'-lanterns, corn stalks, and ghosts tonight, for the club is having its annual Halloween dance for members and guests. The Sidney S. Gorham party will be the largest, for they will entertain 50 guests.

Start Parties for Priscilla Sims.

As the time for the wedding of Miss Priscilla Sims, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Sims, to John Ford Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Wallace Evans, draws nearer . . . the ceremony will be read Nov. 17. . . . parties are beginning to fill the calendar of the busy bride-to-be.

Charles Newhall, one of the ushers, has planned a dinner dance for Miss Sims and Mr. Evans and the bridal party tonight at the South Shore Country club. Tomorrow evening Miss Dorothy Schaeffer and Miss Louise Cretors will give a buffet supper surprise shower at Miss Cretors' home on Sheridan road.

A great log fire will be burning again this afternoon in the fireplace in the Walter Dill Scotts' Evanston drawing room, for President and Mrs. Scott are entertaining at their second post-game tea following the Northwestern and Ohio meeting on the Northwestern gridiron.

There are two concerts tomorrow that offer interest musically and at the same time benefit two important charities. Marie Morrissey, in private life Mrs. Roy J. Keith, is joining forces with Georgia Kober and Theodora Sturkow Ryder, duo pianists, to give a program at 3:30 at the Studebaker theater to help the Protestant Woman's Protectorate and Father Ralph Rohr's Camp for Boys at Powers Lake, Wis. Mrs. Americus F. Callahan, Mrs. Hayden B. Harris, Mrs. James A. Patten, and Mrs. Frederic Upham are a few of those who have taken boxes.

The Council of Catholic Women will be the beneficiary of the second concert which is to be given by John McCormack at 3:30 in the Chicago Stadium. Occupying boxes at this program will be, among others, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy, Mr. and Mrs. Cushman B. Bissell, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bremner, and Mr. and Mrs. Denis F. Kelly.

Simple Chic for Classroom

GIRL'S DRESS.

Isn't this a pretty dress for classroom wear? And a gay wool challis, with bright red background printed in navy blue, will make up well. Use blue grosgrain ribbon for the belt and shoulder bow. There is a simple, collarless bodice with sleeves that are cut in one with the shoulders. The skirt has a front and back section to be seamed, and this is joined to the bodice. Wool crêpe, angora woolen, and any of the printed or plain cottons will be suitable.

The pattern, No. 3447, comes in sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14 years.

Gray Hair No Longer Ranks as Sign of Age

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

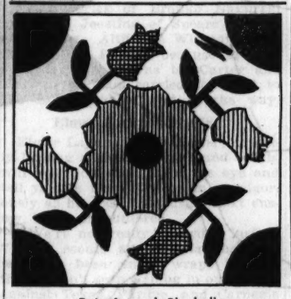
Vanity carries us to strange lengths, as an incident related to me recently reminds. A curious assemblance of graying hairs in one spot on a young woman's head led to a bald spot the size of a fifty cent piece. The bald spot, which proved not to be a permanent affliction, was created by the young woman, who actually plucked out every gray hair one by one. Such heroics were worthy of a better cause, you'll agree. It's painful enough, says one who knows the silver thread that stands out alarmingly, to yank them out one at a time and here and there. The young woman thought it better to pluck them out and comb other hair over the denuded spot than to have a silver thread show.

Well, each to her own pet vanity! And who's to criticize? Only plucking them out doesn't help much, since it won't be long before a little sister gray hair is toddling around in the identical spot. Incidentally, did you know that youth is not the time when hair grows fastest? It's between the ages of thirty-five and sixty, just the time when the graying develops.

I wish I did know some magic property that would stop graying of hair, something you could rub into the scalp and presto, in the a. m., find you back in all your old hirsut glory. I wouldn't be worrying about sweepstakes winnings again ever if I did. But there isn't such magic product. There are products and measures [massage chiefly] that will keep the circulation booming so that graying may be delayed. There are measures of clearing up such scalp ailments as dandruff and excessive dryness and serious scalp diseases that, neglected, hasten on the graying. Generally speaking, however, to prevent graying it is the individual's health from toe to scalp that matters, which would automatically include a glowing, healthy scalp.

I seem to hear more women of the graying age committing themselves to the silver locks these days than was so for a time back, seeing a greater asset in the natural turning of hair than in artificial coloring. Also, hair can be beautifully kept these days that one just need not be committed to a disheartening age formerly associated with gray hair.

Colors Run Wild in Floral Quilt Made in Indiana



Petunia and Bluebell.

BY NANCY CABOT.

This "Petunia and Bluebell" block gives quilt makers a grand opportunity to allow their love of color to run rampant. Purple, lavender, blue, violet, red, gold, and green all help to make this applique block most attractive and realistic. It was pieced in the Hoosier state fifty-two years ago—1882.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

NO TRUMP BIDDING.

I have concluded my systematic explanation of the opening no trump bid and of the ensuing responding and rebidding procedure. I found it necessary to treat this at great length because no feature of my system is more distinctive in its variance from the methods advised by the proponents of obsolete systems, and at the same time, I know that proper no trump bidding will garner more points for my readers than any other department of the game. Other systems handle their suit bidding less ineffectively than the no trump bidding; I believe that my readers will find that I have been able to help them most in this division of the game, and this is my justification for devoting so many articles to it.

Necessary Limitations.

No trump bidding cannot be as flexible in the higher ranges as suit bidding because we cannot make any no trump bid absolutely forcing beyond the game level. The sign off has to be a pass, where as in suit bidding the sign off is in the same number of no trumps; you can sign off without increasing the number of tricks contracted for and without preventing your partner from making another move when the bidding is, say, one spade or one no trump, three clubs, three no trumps. You have signed off at a safe level, but your partner can still bid if strong enough to override the sign off. However, if the bidding is one no trump, three no trumps, now you can only sign off by passing, which ends the bidding. We have done what we could to overcome this limitation, which is inherent in the mechanics of the game, by the procedure which I have detailed at such length.

Locating the Aces.

For similar reasons aces must be located by inference, and not by naming them as we can in certain lines of suit bidding. The safeguards and stipulations in connection with slam tries in no trumps may have seemed to be unnecessarily exacting or pedantic at the time, but I believe that you now realize that they are a necessary factor in preventing us from bidding six no trumps with two aces against us, where we have everything else in the deck and could not lose any other tricks. Again, where we have an ace against us, but can gather in the other twelve tricks, we should get to our slams with consistent regularity. The foundation of this accurate bidding lies in the soundness of the opening no trump bid, backed by the soundness of all other than minimum responses or rebids. Refrain from shading your bids when no trumps are the medium of communication, because the sign off is arbitrary in that it puts an end to the bidding instead of providing a warning, without necessarily terminating the bidding.

No Trump Psychics.

This is the reason why no trump psychics are so unwieldly and so dangerous. If you make a no trump psychic bid, and your partner has a giant hand, he has to put you on the spot because, if he is unable to bid a suit, he can offer you only two alternatives, both at a high level—either to accept a slam try or to pass. That level is already too high if you have bid a psychic. The leeway facilities can be provided in only a limited form, in a narrow range. For this reason the players in my circle are increasingly averse to any tampering with no trump standards. Some of them insist that there be no shading whatever in any position; and they lose nothing by it as far as scores and season's averages show. On the other hand, when your no trumps are known for their regularity and soundness, you can inflict a complete surprise maneuver by bidding on rare occasions a psychic no trump. No one, least of all your partner, will suspect it at that moment; and there are two opponents to fool as against one partner. If you cannot afford to take an average score on any hand, I do not wish to cramp your initiative; desperation obeys no laws. Remember, however, that, even if you win a hand here and there by fooling your opponents where your partner's hand is too weak for him to take action by virtue of your bid, your partner may be giving you timid or unconvincing bidding on other hands because he is always afraid that you may be psyching, and thus many losses may accumulate to blot out the occasional successes. Partnership confidence should take precedence of every other consideration. You can "psych" in a suit without disrupting your partnership, because the sign offs are early, easy, flexible. In no trumps the sign offs are at a higher level and clumsy in comparison. They may keep you out of games as well as get you into penalties. I advise you to leave them alone; even the finest championship partnerships do not handle them well, if at all. I have merely tried to explain why they are sometimes used by players whom we must all respect. They are not part of my system; quite the contrary. They can never pay the dividends which you can earn by taking your no trump bidding very seriously and looking to it to score plenty of games and slams, instead of misusing it as a bogey to score the opponents when you fear they have the hand on you.

New Glee Club Is Effective in Good Concert

BY EDWARD MOORE.

The Railway Express Glee club appeared in a concert at Orchestra hall last night under the direction of Louis M. Gregsamer.

It has been organized comparatively recently. Mr. Gregsamer has drilled them into a well balanced ensemble that has every indication of being a better one as time and its accompanying experience proceed.

The organization was ready last night to sing some of the earnest and technically unyielding works of the church, and to become both musically and dramatically effective in pieces such as Moussorgsky's "Song of the Flea." Here there was fine tone on the part of the choristers, pointed and emphasized by an unnamed soloist who managed to sound greatly like Chaliapin in a sardonic moment.

The soloist was Ambrose J. Wyrick, tenor of opera, radio, and the concert stage. He was heard in what was the best of his Chicago performances, "Vesti la giubba," from Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci." It had a thrill in its tone and definite and legitimate projection in its interpretation.

Jean Tennyson, Grace Moore, and others have gone from musical shows into opera. Now opera is looking toward musical shows. Twelve of the most attractive footlight beauties in Chicago will be hired to help decorate the stage in some of the more spectacular performances of the coming season of the Chicago Grand Opera company.

There will be a public tryout on the stage of the Civic Opera house next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Sweater $6.95

Skirt $8.95

The matching skirt and sweater are big news in the sports world. And they come in the most alluring colors—copper dust, peon blue, desert brown. The skirt of monotone tweed buttons down the front. 24 to 32. $8.95. The sweater is a high necked angora slipover. $6.95.

Skirts and Knit Apparel, Fourth Floor.

$19.75

This frock "wraps around" for a youthful, slender line—a style that Fashion is getting more enthusiastic about every day. The cascading collar of white faille, hand-finished, and cuffs are detachable. Black, navy, green, brown crepe. 36 to 44, 35½ to 43½.

Moderate Price Frocks, Fourth Floor.

$10.95

One of the smart hairy woolens fashions this gay frock—which we are able to present at a price far below that at which it has proven a success. Football colors—rust, green, red or brown, with good looking square wooden buttons. 12 to 20.

Moderate Price Frocks, Fourth Floor.

$17.75

The blanket-lined coat has a heavy football schedule. On milder days, and for less sporting occasions, it detaches its colorful plaid lining—and still is completely lined and interlined. It's of herringbone tweed in rust, brown, green. Sizes 14 to 20.

Moderate Price Coats, Fourth Floor.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Ohio State's husky football men invaded Chicago yesterday morning, drilled in secret at Loyola university in the afternoon, and this afternoon confidently advance on Dyche stadium, Evanston, where they expect to whip Northwestern's hapless Wildcats. This program, if concluded successfully, not only will mar Northwestern's celebration of the day dedicated to the university's dads but it will place the Buckeyes in proper position to take advantage of any slip by the undefeated conference leaders.

DICK HANLEY.

Ohio State has defeated Indiana and lost to Illinois by a one point margin. Northwestern has been beaten by Iowa. If Ohio State wins, it may continue in reasonable belief that it can triumph over Chicago, Michigan, and Iowa. Northwestern, whose remaining opponents are Wisconsin, Illinois, and Michigan, would find scant hope for the future.

That Would Be an Upset.

Victory for the Wildcats, unexpected as it will be, not only will send Ohio State home in confusion, probably destined for a second division berth in Coach Francis Schmidt's first season as director-general of football at Columbus, but it will lift the Purple to that gridiron elevation attained by Nevada and Iowa State, gained by remarkable upsets in this season's play.

So much for possibilities. Ohio State has every reason to believe in its superiority over Northwestern as measured by material and results. The Buckeyes are heavier. They have shown better than average defense against running plays and in replacements, particularly in the backfield, they hold aces which will top any Northwestern substitutions.

Ohio Has Edge in Series.

Ohio State also can point to the 12 years of rivalry between the universities, a rivalry in which Ohio State has won eight games and lost four and in all piled up 200 points as compared to 75 for Northwestern. However, since the advent of Coach Dick Hanley at Northwestern in the fall of 1927, Northwestern has won four games from Ohio and lost three. The record of Hanley coached teams against Ohio State follows:

1927—Northwestern, 19; Ohio State, 13.
1928—Ohio State, 10; Northwestern, 0.
1929—Northwestern, 18; Ohio State, 6.
1930—Northwestern, 19; Ohio State, 2.
1931—Northwestern, 10; Ohio State, 0.
1932—Ohio State, 20; Northwestern, 6.
1933—Ohio State, 12; Northwestern, 0.

Most bitter defeat of all for Ohio State was Northwestern's 10 to 0 triumph in 1931. Northwestern was undefeated in its regular schedule that fall and gave the Buckeyes their only conference reverse until the post-season charity contests, when Minnesota ran over the Bucks at Minneapolis while Purdue was whipping the Wildcats at Soldiers' field and engineering the three way tie for Big Ten honors between Northwestern, Purdue, and Michigan. Michigan previously had lost to Ohio State, which still remembers that Northwestern, on the following Saturday, delivered the stroke which eventually relegated the Bucks to also rans.

Buckeyes Jinx Purple.

If Northwestern were to single out one defeat which rankles the most, it probably would be last year's licking at Columbus, 12 to 0. That defeat began a series of five consecutive games in which Northwestern failed to score. Moreover, Ohio won primarily because of Northwestern's costly fumbles which before the season ended had developed into a weekly epidemic of misplays.

Last year's Wildcat licking was the last of the series between the double wing back systems of offense as taught by Hanley and by Sam Willaman, then Ohio's coach. Northwestern now remains the only conference eleven which depends solely on this particular style of play.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 26.—Michigan's football eleven, defeated by Michigan State and Chicago, victorious over Georgia Tech in this year of mishaps, stands with its back to the wall in opposing Illinois before an anticipated homecoming crowd of 50,000 spectators at Michigan stadium tomorrow afternoon.

Yet in this back to the wall business there is not the desperation, the now or never spirit, one might expect of Wolverines, off to a bad start, who have not lost two conference games in any one season since 1928. Instead we note more conservative, perhaps more healthful confidence, that Michigan ultimately will find itself and play better than it has yet this year.

No Collapse Expected.

So if Illinois' adept ball carriers and ball handlers prove superior before a disappointed homecoming gathering, there will not be collapse. Instead the Wolverines will continue their efforts to regain prestige against Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ohio State, and Northwestern, still to be played. That's the impression gathered by a visitor. Michigan partisans themselves do not concede success to the invading Illini, who motored from their quarters at Dearborn inn, on the outskirts of Detroit, for signal practice on the scene of tomorrow's conflict. These Wolverine partisans feel their eleven has much better than an outside chance to upset the Illini.

In futherance of that purpose, laudable from a home viewpoint, Michigan's back field has been shifted until only John Regeczi, punting ace of 1933, remains of the quartet which opposed Michigan State in the opening defeat. At full back will be Cedric Sweet, a 194 pound sophomore from Fremont, who has the physical qualifications of a great plunger. At quarter back will be Farris Jennings, an Ann Arbor product of only 128 pounds who turned the tide against Georgia Tech by returning a punt 64 yards.

Expect Much of Ward.

In this revamped back field, however, it is Willis Ward from whom most is expected by the coaching staf. Ward, in his third year of varsity experience, is transferred from end for two reasons. One is his height and experience to meet Illinois' expected shower of passes. Another is his ability to run 100 yards in 10 seconds as shown in track competition.

Michigan thinks its line now has improved enough to stop plunging by the lighter Illini. There is nearly 15 pounds average difference in the forward wall. It fears only mildly a running attack with Savage and Patanelli protecting the flanks. It does fear intricate pass formations.

To Illinois the result is even more important than to Michigan. Ohio State already has been defeated. In the offing are Army a week later at Champaign, not a conference contest, then Northwestern, Wisconsin, and Chicago. If this Michigan barrier is hurdled, Illinois rooters give their team a great chance to go through their chart undefeated for at least a tie with any other eleven, such as Minnesota or Purdue, which might remain undefeated. Illinois has not had a title team since 1928.

Moreover these Illini are on the way up, say their admirers. From the depths of 1931 when Illinois for the first time in its gridiron history lost to six conference opponents, it rallied last season to within two points of a tie for the conference title.

50,000 to Watch Minnesota Eleven Battle Iowa Today

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 26.—The largest crowd that ever saw a football game in the state of Iowa, possibly 55,000 and certainly 50,000, will attend tomorrow's homecoming spectacle here, the twenty-eighth Iowa-Minnesota gridiron meeting.

DICK CRAYNE.

Much noise is attending the preliminaries throughout the town and on the campus, but all has been quiet and secret behind the portals of the practice field. The word is out, however, that Coach Ossie Solem, less communicative than he ever has been in his relations with the public, is up to some sly business designed to surprise and upset the chesty Gophers who contemplate the game as merely an incident in the grabbing of not only the Big Ten but the national title.

Practice Throwing Passes.

There is no way of telling with certainty just what Mr. Solem is up to, but aviators who have flown over the practice acreage this week say they have seen a lot of footballs thrown through the air, many of them being caught by Frank Jakoubek, who catches passes better than he does anything else. This 172 pound sophomore, in fact, is reputed to be a better pass receiver than any one on the Hawkeye squad.

The passes have been thrown by several gents, but a dusky lad, suspected by the aviators as being Ozzie Simmons, has been throwing more passes than Ozzie threw in practicing for Northwestern, Nebraska, or Iowa State.

Incidentally Simmons, who was more or less of a national topic after his flashy work against Northwestern only to go into eclipse after a mediocre performance against Iowa State, has been going at peak form during the practice sessions and is being counted upon to startle the Gophers.

Fisher May Play.

Dick Crayne, the Hawkeyes' great full back, is in tiptop shape, perfectly keyed, 'tis said, for a great showing against the enemy from up north.

No definite announcement has been made but it is rumored that Capt. Russ Fisher, wearing a specially constructed knee brace, will start at quarter back. In this event Dwight Hoover will be switched from quarter to left half back, though some of the guessers think Fisher may call signals from the left half back position, with Hoover remaining at quarter. If Fisher does not start, Johnny Hild probably will be at left half.

Practically all starting positions are problematical, however, as they might well be expected to be the week following a 31 to 6 tanning such as the Hawkeyes suffered last Saturday. The only certain bets seem to be that Crayne will start at full back and Simmons at right half.

The outlook is for a fast turf, a condition which Hawkeye hopefuls believe will be more to the advantage of Crayne and Simmons, and the Iowa plan of attack generally, than it will be to Capt. Pug Lund, Stan Kostka, Julius Alfonse, Glen Seidel, and other Gopher speedsters. Perfect weather is foreseen as an aid to the performers.

Gophers Are Confident.

The Minnesota team, billeted at Cedar Rapids, 26 miles north of here, is reported to be reeking with confidence of a large score. A party of Iowans drove up to chat with some of the Gopher players and returned here this afternoon with the report that one player told them that if the Gopher first team was slow in starting the scoring the second team certainly could run up four or five touchdowns. This spokesman further was quoted as saying that if Coach Bierman could be persuaded to use his third team throughout it would be a much more interesting game for the record crowd of customers.

WISCONSIN WILL FIND OUT WHAT NOTRE DAME HAS

Layden Says It's Nothing, but He May Be Fooling.

BY ARCH WARD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 26.—Frost on the pumpkin and a twangling bite in the air tonight prepared fans for a football game between Wisconsin and Notre Dame tomorrow afternoon that promises to develop into a heart thumper.

Ticket officials predict there will be not less than 25,000 in the stands, and if today's climatic conditions last until game time the crowd will exceed 30,000. This is the first time a Wisconsin eleven has appeared in South Bend and alumni and other supporters are planning to whoop it up for the Badgers with considerable numerical strength.

New Chance for Spears.

For Coach Spears of Wisconsin tomorrow's contest presents interesting historical possibilities. This will be his fourth effort to whip a Notre Dame eleven. He was unsuccessful in three previous attempts, although he escaped with a 7 to 7 tie in his last encounter. Spears was at Minnesota at that time, however, and tomorrow is another day and another team.

According to Notre Dame scouts Spears is bringing to South Bend a squad similar to the Gophers who held one of Rockne's strong elevens to a tie in 1927. The Badgers have a line that is heavy, wily, and fast, and a hard running full back in Ed Jankowski, Milwaukee sophomore, who recalls memories of Bronko Nagurski and Herb Joesting of Spears' Minnesota teams. Although Wisconsin was defeated by Purdue because of long runs for touchdowns by Carter and Purvis, the team carried the fight to the Boilermakers most of the way.

Elmer May Be Fooling.

Elmer Layden, Notre Dame's priestly looking athletic director and coach, will look you straight in the eye and tell you he fears Wisconsin as vigorously as he does Pittsburgh, next enemy to be encountered.

"We're not ready," Layden insists. "Rival scouts are complaining that we have been under wraps because they haven't seen a thing in our games against Texas, Purdue, and Carnegie Tech. The joke is on them because we haven't anything to show."

From this nook of observation, however, it seems Notre Dame has showed plenty. It is one of those sudden death teams that made Rockne coached elevens famous. It may stutter and lumber around for ten or twenty minutes and then comes one perfect play and the ball game is over. It was that way against Purdue and again last week against Carnegie Tech. In the old days there always were one or two plays in every game when every man did his job and usually that was enough. Layden hasn't equipped his players with intricate and fancy maneuvers because he realizes a simple play perfectly executed will accomplish the same result.

They Have Reserves.

Notre Dame's starting lineup is not studded with stars, but it at least is rich in replacements. Seldom have we seen complete units so evenly matched as Layden has developed this fall. There are twelve teams cavorting around Cartier field every afternoon, six under the immediate supervision of the head coach and the other six under Bill Cerney, a full back of a decade ago. Helping Layden are Joe Boland, Tom Conley, and Chet Grant. Frequently a player in Cerney's group who shows particularly well is elevated to the first flight and when one of Layden's protégés lets down he is dropped back to Cerney's squad.

Joe Cronin Goes to Red Sox for Lyn Lary and $150,000

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Joe Cronin today was sold by his father-in-law, Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, to the Boston Red Sox for a price reported to be $150,000. Cronin, the ranking shortstop of the American league, will go to Boston under a five year player-manager contract.

JOE CRONIN.

There were many factors involved in the deal, but essentially it all boiled down to this: Griffith, with a seventh place ball club and a shakeup in prospect, anyway, gave up a manager of considerable value to his club in order to give that manager a chance with a big money ball club.

Griffith is a low paying baseball man. Tom Yawkey, owner of the Red Sox, splashes his money freely. And Cronin recently was married to June Robertson, Griffith's adopted daughter.

In addition to the reported $150,000 the Red Sox will send Lyn Lary, shortstop, to take Cronin's place in the Washington infield.

Griffith said Yawkey was paying Cronin an astounding price, and made it clear that he wanted to keep Joe, but did it all for the benefit of his son-in-law and daughter.

Bucky Harris, present Red Sox manager, will be in the market for a new job.

Harris May Go to Washington.

The deal probably opens the way for a winter of exceptional trading in the baseball business. Yawkey, out to use his millions to get a championship ball club, has now paid about $500,000 for new talent, but still has quite a distance to go.

Whoever becomes the new manager—and it is not impossible that Bucky Harris might go back to the city where he first managed a ball club—the Washington Senators will be almost rebuilt. Their drop from a world series team in 1933 to seventh in 1934 made a reorganization certain.

"It was not the tremendous cash which prompted the deal," Griffith said. "The deal was practically Cronin's own choice. All negotiations were conducted with his full knowledge.

"When Mr. Yawkey first made me the offer at the world series I refused to consider selling him at all, and reconsidered only for the reason that Mr. Yawkey came up with an astounding offer of a five year contract for Cronin.

"This offer was so much in excess of what I ever could hope to pay Cronin that I considered it my duty to give him the opportunity to accept. I am happy to give him the chance."

Cronin, who is in San Francisco showing his bride his home territory, said he knew nothing about the deal until a phone call from Griffith last night enlightened him. He said he was sorry to leave Washington, but happy to join the Red Sox.

News to Babe

S. S. EMPRESS OF JAPAN, En Route to Japan, Oct. 26, —(AP)—Sailing across the Pacific for a barnstorming baseball tour of the orient, Babe Ruth tonight said he "knew nothing about" reports current in the United States that he would succeed Connie Mack as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics next season.

Earlier Mack had said it was his own ambition "to continue as manager of the Athletics until I have passed my eightieth birthday." He now is 71.

WON'T BLOCK RUTH

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—If Connie Mack of the Athletics, or any other major league club official desires the services of Babe Ruth as manager for next year, Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, stands ready to release his famous but aging home run slugger with no price tag attached.

This was the statement with which Ed Barrow, Yankee business manager, today greeted renewed inquiries on the report that Ruth was slated to replace Connie Mack as manager of the Athletics for 1935.

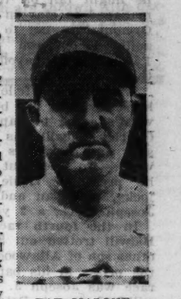
"The colonel," said Barrow, "has repeatedly told the Babe that no barriers will ever be raised if an opportunity comes to Ruth to manage a major league club. The Yankees, of course, would not let the Babe go to another club for nothing merely as a player, but if Connie Mack or any one else wants him as manager, the Babe can have his release."

CUBS GET O'DEA; ST. LOUIS ALSO IS GIVEN CASH

Raise Grimm to Vice President.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Pat Malone, who late during the recent season became persona non grata with Charley Grimm, the Cubs' manager, will do his baseball chores next year in the uniform of a St. Louis Cardinal. The veteran right hander was turned over to the world championship team yesterday and the Cub officials, by the terms they accepted, proved they did not think much of Pat as an employé. They threw in some cash, sum unannounced, and received in return only a minor league catcher named James Kenneth O'Dea.



PAT MALONE.

The transaction was consummated by long distance phone shortly after Manager Grimm, at a meeting of the club stockholders, had his title enlarged by the addition of vice president. At the same meeting Charles [Boots] Weber was named business manager as well as treasurer. Charles F. Drake was named assistant to the new president, Philip K. Wrigley, who controled the election by virtue of his ownership of 75 per cent of the club stock.

O'Dea Big and Fast.

O'Dea is a 21 year old called in from the Columbus, O., team this fall after serving time in various spots of the St. Louis Cardinals' chain store system. He enroled in the chain gang in 1931 at Greensboro, N. C., and was moved in turn from there to Elmira, N. Y., to Keokuk, Ia., to Columbus, to Houston, Tex. and then back to Columbus for 1934. He's a big fellow who is fast on his feet, and speed is what Grimm wants not only behind the bat, but also for his own first base job. The drawback to O'Dea is that he still must develop as a hitter. His average last season in the American association was only .265.

The deal, according to Grimm, probably will be the only one completed between now and the annual league meeting in December. Thus far he has sent out various feelers, only to learn that the other clubs are willing to give a little in return for much. However, he has hopes that before Christmas he may be able to deliver to the Cub followers a pitcher of renown and a first baseman able to hit as well as run.

Grimm to Move His Home.

Grimm, naturally surprised over his promotion which he hadn't known about for more than a week, is going to move his home from St. Louis to Chicago. This will make it simpler for Manager Grimm to talk to Vice President Grimm and for Vice President Grimm to talk to President Wrigley. It also will simplify communication with other members of the club's extensive official family. The latter now is so bulky that a roster of officials, similar to the player roster, will be printed so that the newspaper men will not get confused in identities or titles.

Another item touched on by Manager Grimm and Vice President Grimm was the training trip. The entire squad will start for the Catalina Island conditioning camp on or about Feb. 25. This is a bit earlier than last spring, but Grimm wants to have at least two weeks on the island before moving to Los Angeles to open the barnstorming schedule.

Seven Years with Cubs.

Removing Malone from the roster put a halt to his seven seasons as a Cub. Under the management of Joe McCarthy he was purchased from the Minneapolis American association club before the start of the 1928 campaign. Last season Malone, despite a late start, won fourteen games while losing seven. He was withdrawn as a starting pitcher early in September after his refusal to pitch out of turn. Pat claimed he wasn't in condition to pitch that afternoon and Grimm didn't think much of the excuse.

Malone's record with the Cubs is:

1928—Won, 18; lost, 13.
1929—Won, 22; lost, 10.
1930—Won, 20; lost, 9.
1931—Won, 16; lost, 9.
1932—Won, 15; lost, 17.
1933—Won, 10; lost, 14.
1934—Won, 14; lost, 7.

The Cubs' official family now reads as follows:

Officers—Philip K. Wrigley, president; Charles F. Drake, assistant to the president; John O. Seys, vice president; Charles J. Grimm, vice president and team manager; Charles A. Weber, treasurer and business manager; Miss Margaret Donahue, secretary.

Directors—Philip K. Wrigley, George Marcy, R. A. Cavenaugh, Charles McCulloch, Mrs. Ada E. Wrigley, A. D. Lasker, John O. Seys, and Paul Harper.

Executive committee—Philip K. Wrigley, John O. Seys, Paul Harper, Mrs. Ada E. Wrigley, and A. D. Lasker.

Maroons to Try Experiment on Missouri Team

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The University of Chicago, whereat research work in the arts and sciences is on a lofty plane, plans to conduct a laboratory session of a new type this afternoon upon Stagg field, where its football team, thus far the most astounding organization in the Big Ten, meets the University of Missouri in its last nonconference chore of the season.

In the football clinics of recent years at Stagg field, the Maroon team too often has found itself to be the guinea pig of the day's experiment and too seldom has it wielded the researcher's scalpel. Coach Clark Shaughnessy, who holds as many degrees in worrying as any other of his brethren, is perfectly willing to assume the rôle of professor for this afternoon's class.

Yet neither he nor his staf has come out with any forthright statement to the effect that the Missouri Tiger is a supine tabby which will hold still while the Maroons test themselves for the four remaining games with Purdue, Ohio State, Minnesota, and Illinois.

Ideal Choice for Experiment.

On the other hand, Maroon alumni and undergraduates, imbued with a high confidence by the current renaissance of their team, are convinced that Missouri is an ideal choice for the experiment, seeing how it has won two games out of the last twenty played. What is more, its coach, Frank Carideo, quite naturally employs the Notre Dame system, which to them strengthens the laboratory theme, for they will encounter that same mechanism next Saturday against Purdue.

Add to that the fact that the Maroons have scored 106 points in their last four games [counting the 39 to 0 massacre of Dartmouth in the 1933

Good Time Huey Has Too Much Brass; Calls for a Banjo

Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Senator Huey P. Long, surrounded by 200 Louisiana State university cadets, steamed out of Baton Rouge at 5:10 p. m. today for Nashville, Tenn., after an entrainment that Long enjoyed as much as a 6 year old youngster. It was a strange combination of horseplay and mass efficiency.

Two 12-car trains, one designated the red and the other the white train—the latter bearing Huey in as near to luxury as a specially fitted day coach could be made to approximate—left the university spur track below Baton Rouge on the dot, with the Kingfish shouting orders.

Four other special trains bearing thousands of nonmilitary students and supporters were given orders to follow the cadet specials, and the mass invasion of Tennessee for the Louisiana State university-Vanderbilt football game tomorrow was under way.

Captain Bristles Up.

Company after company of gray clad cadets marched down to the switch and piled into the cars at Long's direction.

The university commandant of cadets, Maj. Troy H. Middleton, was in charge, but Long was in command.

"Here you, hurry up! get along there!" or "wait a minute, let's take some pictures here! get along! hey, you big stiff, get outta the way!"

The last remark was addressed to an army captain who had gotten between a camera and a row of marching cadets. The captain stiffened angrily and his face reddened. Long strode over and put his arms around his neck and apparently apologized. The captain seemed mollified. The red train left.

"Bring that next train along—let's get going!" Long shouted.

The next train was moved up. He clambered into his own car, newly painted and equipped with comfortable leanback seats.

Long was accompanied by Mrs. Long and their son, Russell. A number of legislators joined his party. The senator's train left and the trip was officially under way.

The senator was in good spirits and was having more fun than any of the students. As his train sped through the smaller towns he would run to the rear platform and wave to crowds.

At 6 o'clock he called for his personal orchestra, composed of specially picked members of the university band. Seven young musicians responded. He tried them out and then sent an order forward to the band master to reënforce the orchestra with a piccolo player and two clarinet players.

"We need more wood," he shouted. "There is too much brass. The notes are too deep. What we really need is a banjo."

He then ordered the trainmaster to telegraph the mayor of Vicksburg to put a banjo aboard. "I would sort of like a pair of fiddlers too," he added.

Finally the band was organized to his liking and he ordered "River, Stay Away from My Door."

The Ol' Maestro, Eh?

So he rolled along in his private day coach, leading the band and launching into lusty singing. Then he sent for a singer. A young man in a jersey appeared.

"You say you sing for a living?" asked the senator. "Well it depends on how you sing how long you will live."

Asked what he thought of the score of the football game would be, Senator Long said:

"By George, I haven't even thought of that. I've been too busy organizing this trip. I had to get the railroad to come down from $22 a head to $6 and even had to get the code authorities to extend the working hours of the garment manufacturers to get the boys' uniforms in time before we would make this trip."

Duquesne Football Team Defeats Detroit, 20 to 6

OLD JIM ORMONT GOES TO TOWN AT A PRICE OF $17.54

Veteran Scores Handily at Sportsman's.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The machinery in the racing legs of Jim Ormont, a noted old campaigner, has been somewhat rusty lately. In 38 starts this year he had won eight races. In fifteen starts last season he accounted for but three purses.

Old Jim was a different horse in the Lake Forest purse at a mile and seventy yards at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon. He ran like a stake performer, rallied in the stretch like a genuine route runner and, after finishing like a comet, won the race by a length. Sweet Man finished second and Para Four was third. Such stoutly backed horses as Miss Flip, Hildur Prince, and Semester all landed far back and out of the money.

Rider Nearly Falls.

The ancient Jim was ridden by Jocky R. Tilden, and Tilden was no help in the drive down the stretch. When Jim ran past horses and over horses at the head of the stretch Tilden's left foot slipped out of the stirrup. For an instant it looked like he might fall off the horse, but he managed to stay in the saddle. Jim Ormont was not to be stopped. He galloped on and won handily in 1:50 3-5. The payoff was $17.54 in the mutuels.

Whenever a fellow gives a race horse away he had better look out for what's going to happen. Last spring Charley Bidwill was overstocked with sons and daughters of the sire Altawood. To weed out his stable a bit he presented Louie Peters, former jocky, politician and horseman, with Joseph J. G., a 2 year old.

In the fourth race yesterday Mr. Bidwill trotted out Shady Wood, another son of Altawood which is among the prizes in his barn. In the same race was Joseph J. G., the colt Bidwill had given to Peters.

Kwamudi is Favorite.

Bidwill was highly confident his Shady Wood would win, despite the presence in the race of Kwamudi, a 3 to 2 favorite which was out to win his third straight victory. Kwamudi finished third. The Bidwill color bearer, Shady Wood, was second, and romping along out in front was Joseph J. G.

Peters, who isn't much bigger than the middleweights in the midget village, did a clog dance out in the center of the track after Joseph J. G. had crossed the finish line. He must have made a good sized wager, and if he did, he got $11.32 for each two dollar ticket purchased.

Diaquri Comes Home at $4.92.

The old half mile champion, Diaquri, found her racing legs in the third event and won by two and one-half lengths from Ultimate Vote and Ogee. Diaquri stumbled heading into the stretch, but quickly recovered and lost little ground. She was the short priced favorite at $4.92 for two dollar ticket.

Szabo Defeats Martinkes in C.Y.O.Boxing

Thirty-two class A bouts concluded south section preliminary competition in the fourth annual Catholic Youth organization amateur boxing tournament last night at the White City arena.

The winners of last night's contests will join west section winners in the tournament quarter-finals at the C Y O center gymnasium Nov. 6, 7 and 8. The north section will hold its preliminaries next Tuesday and Wednesday nights at Loyola university gymnasium. The Joliet district will climax all section preliminary activity at Catholic High gymnasium Nov. 9 and 12.

Featuring last night's card at White City was the middleweight fight between Julius Szabo, St. Patrick's, and George Martinkes, St. George's. After three furious rounds Szabo was awarded the decision. One of the best fights of the evening brought together Johnny Waszak, St. Michael's, and Eddie Rybinski, St. Salomea's, featherweights. Waszak won the decision. Results:

TONELLI KNOCKS OUT FRITZ ZIVIC IN SECOND ROUND

Salvatore, Eddie Zivic Draw at Coliseum.

Laddie Tonelli, Geno Salvatore, Bus Breese and Tony Cancela, all Chicago favorites showed impressively against out of town foes in four bouts at eight rounds at the Coliseum last night.

Tonelli, Marseilles, Ill., welterweight, knocked out Fritz Zivic, Pittsburgh, Pa., in the second round, and Salvatore, La Salle, Ill., lightweight, held Eddie Zivic to a draw.

Breese, Manhattan, Kas., junior lightweight, also fought a draw against Orville

CARNEGIE TECH AND PURDUE TO BATTLE TODAY

Doloway, Tartan Tackle, May Not Start.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Purdue's Boilermakers and the Carnegie Tech Tartans, both of whom have been beaten twice this year, will clash tomorrow in the big Pitt stadium. A forward passing battle is in prospect.

The Tartans, playing their first major home game of the year, have been conditioned to a formidable peak, but most of the experts rate the Boilermakers favorite.

Coach Noble Kizer unloaded his squad, including Jim Carter and Duane Purvis, this morning, and the boys put up headquarters at Shadyside academy where they went through a lengthy drill today by Coach tans, hoping for a dry field, were put through lengthy drill today by Coach Howard Harpster. After the session in which he stressed the team's attack, it remained uncertain whether Cliff Doloway, right tackle, would start. He received a severe ankle injury against Notre Dame.

Original plans were for Kizer's men to work out today at Pitt stadium, but these were called off after Pitt authorities informed him the field was covered.

Probable starting lineup:

CARNEGIE TECH.		PURDUE.
Burns	L. E.	Hass
Croft [C.]	L. T.	Burmeister
Henrion	L. G.	Dennis
Trbovich	C.	Skoronski

Deans Write Own Act, Shun Girls, Makeup

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—The dazzling Deans, Dizzy and Daffy, went Thespian today at the Roxy theater and convinced the audience that, as Paul [Daffy] avowed from the stage, they're pretty fair ball players.

Both the Deans objected to the script that had been prepared for them. The script made Dizzy say "holt" for hold and Daffy say "Ah" for I. That was too hillbillyish for the cosmopolitan Deans, and they worked practically all night perfecting their own lines. A sample of the wit they wrote for themselves follows:

Announcer—Well, boys, how do you feel after your big stage act?

Dizzy—I feel like a load o' wood.

Daffy—What you mean, like a load o' wood?

Dizzy—All broke up.

No Girls, No Paint.

The Dean act opens with a radio announcer backstage talking and the Deans standing in front of a set meant to look like a big league dugout. Dizzy and Daffy are tossing the ball around. The radio announcer says he'll come down and interview them, and he does.

To the suggestion that girls help out in the act, both Deans turn deaf ears. Mrs. Dizzy Dean, general financial manager of the pitching wizards, stands backstage while the six and a half minute act is on.

Neither would the Deans stand for any dancing or singing on the ground that such antics would make them look silly, and as for makeup——

"Paint is meant for the sides of barns, not for the faces of pitchers like me and Diz," Daffy snorted.

They Get $5,000.

Speaking of the famous Joe Medwick affair in the last world series game when Detroit fans pelted the Cardinal outfielder with fruit and other missiles Dizzy contributes this one:

"Well, if an apple a day keeps the doctor away, Joe Medwick ain't gonna be sick for the next twenty years."

WRESTLERS VIE FOR WORLD'S FAIR TITLES TONIGHT

Wrestlers from four Western conference universities, the South Chicago Y. M. C. A., and the south parks will compete tonight in the semi-finals and finals of A Century of Progress championship tournament in the Court of States at the World's Fair. More than 4,000 watched 150 wrestlers in the preliminary matches last night.

The tournament is under the auspices of the Central A. A. U. Among the headliners who will compete tonight are the following:

HEAVYWEIGHT CLASS—Kuss, Indiana university, vs. Cook, South Chicago Y. M. C. A.

LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHT—Voliva, Indiana, vs. Brown, Northwestern.

165 POUND—Kaufmann, Northwestern, vs. Gillum, Indiana.

135 POUND—Finnwall, Chicago, vs. Goings, McKinley park.

IOWA STATE TO FACE NEBRASKA THIS AFTERNOON

Ames, Ia., Oct. 26.—[Special.—With students yelling "Beat Nebraska!" and "We Want the Rose Bowl!" Iowa State college's football team departed today for Lincoln, Neb., where it will meet Nebraska tomorrow. More than 3,000 students watched the players leave after abandoning books and holding a pep meeting on the campus.

It was one of the wildest demonstrations ever staged here. The students disrupted afternoon classes and began marching through college buildings. The parade ended in the fieldhouse.

Spec Goldman Wins $812 in Dallas Daily Double

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 26.—(AP)—The luck David [Spec] Goldman of Dallas needed but didn't have playing against Lawson Little in the finals of the national amateur golf tournament this year appeared today when he cashed a $2 daily double ticket for $812.40 at the Fair Park race track here.

Talking It Over

[Copyright: 1934: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 26.—Benny Oosterbaan and Walter Weber of the Michigan coaching staf still are taken for players. . . . After scouting the Illinois-Ohio State game they stopped over in a Chicago hotel. . . . An Ohio State rooter who had seen the game walked up to Oosterbaan and asked him how he felt. . . . Benny said: "Boy, it was a tough one to lose," and, pointing to Weber, added: "Ask Heekin over there." . . . Weber impersonated the Ohio half back for nearly half an hour before hauling out a big, black cigar and admitting the deception. . . . The Detroit Red Wings, Stanley cup finalists last year, are the only National Hocky league club to train at home. . . . They spend their conditioning period on the ice at the Detroit Olympia and across the river in Windsor. . . . Charles Gelbert, father of the former St. Louis Cardinal shortstop, was an All-America end at the University of Pennsylvania in 1894. . . .

Ray Doan, manager of the not so dizzy Deans, took 50 per cent of their earnings on the exhibition tour. . . . However, he had to pay all expenses out of his half. . . . Ducky Pond rates Al Barabas of Columbia the best back ever to play in Yale bowl. . . . Stars may come and stars may go, but in the opinion of many loyal Northwestern rooters Jesse Van Doozer and James Potter, wonder men of the '90s, were the greatest of them all. . . . The late Walter Eckersall acclaimed Van Doozer the best Northwestern player of all time. . . . They were coached by A. H. Culver, whose son, Al, later gained national recognition as a tackle at Notre Dame. . . . Duquesne university is planning a reception for Elmer Layden, who directed the team for seven years, on the night of Nov. 2, when the Dukes play West Virginia Wesleyan. . . . The following day Notre Dame meets Pittsburgh. . . .

Tommy Flinn, University of Chicago quarter back, is a B. M. O. C. (Big Man on Campus). . . . In addition to his gridiron work he is captain of the basketball team and head man of Blackfriars, the men's musical comedy organization at the Midway. . . . When Lew Ritchie and Heinie Zimmerman were members of the west side Cubs they owned a motorcycle. . . . Ritchie was the driver and Zimmerman rode the rear seat. . . . One night they were pinched for speeding, but were released from the station after they had identified themselves. . . . Ten minutes later they were back at the same station on the same charge. . . . August Church, guard on the Notre Dame football team, was chased back to the bench by the referee when he attempted to enter a game as a substitute his freshman year in high school. . . . He was so small the referee thought he was the mascot. . . .

Prof. Frank Dickinson of Illinois, who rates the country's football teams by a percentage system, ought to have an easy job this fall. . . . It doesn't look as if there will be a national champion. . . . Nick Scialaba, 1931 Golden Gloves bantamweight champion, who incidentally was one of the best 118 pounders the tournament has developed, will marry Miss Theresa Mariano, a Chicago west side girl, next month. . . . George De Bray, who served as trainer for Jack Johnson when the Negro whipped Jim Jeffries twenty-four years ago, is sponsoring amateur shows at Jefferson Park Physical Training school. . . . Vern Oech, sophomore left guard on the Minnesota eleven, is playing the same position his father held thirty years ago. . . .

A delegation of 30 Sioux Indians welcomed Pop Warner to Wisconsin and Milwaukee when he arrived with his Temple university football squad for tomorrow's game with Marquette. . . . The committee was headed by Chief White Feather, who played end at Carlisle in the days of Jim Thorpe and Warner's coaching régime at the Indian school.

Ten Years Ago Today—Percy Haughton, football coach at Columbia university, died in New York. . . . President W. L. Veeck of the Chicago Cubs announced that Vic Aldridge, George Grantham, and a rookie infielder were traded to the Pirates for Charlie Grimm, Rabbit Maranville, and Wilbur [Lefty] Cooper. . . . Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion, knocked out Harry Foley in one round at Memphis. . . . Coach A. A. Stagg told his Chicago football team that he feared Purdue. . . . Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite gave his Northwestern players a day off after their victory over Michigan Aggies.

22,000 WATCH CENTRAL DEFEAT MISHAWAKA, 7-0

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Central of South Bend defeated Mishawaka, 7 to 0, before 22,000 fans in the Notre Dame stadium today as the teams met in the 22d game of their 32 year old rivalry.

A 15 yard forward pass from Marion Kaczmerak to Johnny Krizmanick, quarter back, late in the second period, with Capt. Marty Lentsch place kicking the extra point, provided Central's margin of victory. Central had marched from its 32 yard line to Mishawaka's two yard line with two downs to go when the game ended. Mishawaka never once penetrated deeply into Central's territory.

The victory enabled Central to tie Riley of South Bend for first place in the eastern division of the Northern Indiana High School conference. Each has three victories. Central and Riley meet next week. It was Mishawaka's first conference defeat and Central's fourth consecutive victory in the series.

MRS. JONES OF CHICAGO LOSES IN WESTERN GOLF

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Melvin Jones of Chicago was eliminated in the semi-final round of the Western women's golf tournament today, losing to Miss Dorothy Traung, San Francisco, 5 and 4. The victory of Mrs. L. D. Cheney, San Gabriel, over Mrs. W. E. Shepherd, Los Angeles, by the same score leaves two Californians to battle it out for the title in the 36 hole final tomorrow.

Miss Traung, runner-up to Miss Virginia Van Wie in the National women's tournament, was 2 up at the turn against Mrs. Jones, who won the Western championship 18 years ago. Mrs. Cheney displayed great golf in defeating Mrs. Shepherd, shooting 36, two under par, for the first nine.

Michigan City Football Team Ties La Porte, 6-6

La Porte, Ind., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—La Porte and Michigan City High schools, traditional rivals, battled to a 6 to 6 tie tonight before a crowd of 4,000. Michigan City scored on a pass, Vergane to Berry, in the second quarter, but Stevens missed the try for point. Jankaruk scored for La Porte after penalties had put the ball in scoring territory. Orcutt's place kick was wide.

North Central and Augustana to Meet Today

The North Central college eleven, with two conference victories and one defeat this season, will meet Augustana of Rock Island this afternoon in the Cardinals' annual homecoming battle on the Naperville field.

Coach Fisher spent the week developing a defense with which he hopes to stop the Augustana running attack, and will rely on Cardinal speed and deception for scoring. Dittman, half back, who was injured in the Lake Forest game, will be ready, and is expected to lead North Central.

Augustana has a formidable aggregation, and the back field, led by Bobby Marack, is fast and aggressive. Marack led the conference scoring last year and was third in the national rating. Rehr, another triple threat man, will pair with Marack.

WHEATON VS. ELMHURST.

Elmhurst college will meet Wheaton this afternoon in the eleventh annual homecoming at Elmhurst. It will be the first conference game of the season.

The homecoming game will be the continuation of an old feud between the two schools, Elmhurst holding a strong Wheaton team to a 6 to 6 tie last year.

Coach Vic Gustafson of Wheaton will have the services of four varsity men who have been out of the last two games, including Capt. Bob Glover, quarter back.

LAKE FOREST VS. CARROLL.

The Lake Forest college football squad of 27, accompanied by the entire student body, will leave this morning on a special train for Waukesha, Wis., where Lake Forest plays Carroll college this afternoon. Lake Forest will be in quest of its fourth victory of the season.

Carroll made an impressive showing against the University of Chicago, although losing, 19 to 0, and came closer to scoring on the Maroons than any of their Big Ten conference opponents.

Lindblom and Hyde Park to Battle Today

A crippled Hyde Park football team will attempt to gain its fourth consecutive victory and assurance of at least a tie for the central section championship against Lindblom at White City stadium, 63d street and South Parkway, this afternoon. The game features the Chicago Public High School league's schedule.

Hyde Park will enter the game with four of its regulars on the sidelines because of injuries suffered in practice. The players who will be among those missing are Capt. Lou Hamity, hard plunging full back; Al Fox, 240 pound sophomore tackle; Mason Sager and Herby Bessinger, guards.

Lane Seeks Third Victory.

In the north section Lane Tech, undefeated but tied leader, seeks its third victory against Amundsen at Lane field, Western avenue and Addison street. Amundsen has divided its first four sectional games.

Proviso and Evanston, undefeated in the Suburban league, battle for the undisputed possession of first place at Maywood. Each has scored two victories and a triumph today will assure the victor of a tie for the title, since only one game remains on their schedules. Evanston defeated its traditional rival, Oak Park, last week, 3 to 0.

Schurz Beats Foreman.

Schurz went into a tie for third place in the north section by overwhelming Foreman, 25 to 0, at Logan Square park yesterday. Devine, Primak and Houff scored for the victors. It was Foreman's fourth defeat. Lineups:

Maroons to Try Experiment on Missouri Team

farewell game and the information that Missouri has accumulated none in its three games thus far. What could be simpler, contend the cheer leaders who already are scenting a conference championship, if somewhat coyly.

Point to Ten Years Ago.

The lugubrious ones on the Midway campus, however, are of another mind, and bring to light many a disturbing fact to which they plan to point this evening in the event of a Maroon catastrophe. The I-Told-You-So club, calling on the records of the past performance bureau, will hark back to the last and only time the Maroons met Missouri, in 1924. That would be when the Tigers dropped by to hand the Maroons a 3 to 0 defeat, their only loss of the year, after which Chicago went on to win the Big Ten championship.

If that seems antedated by now, the present reveals that the Tigers are on the verge of becoming their old snarling selves. Carideo's sophomores, for all their three failures, have been making slow but sure progress all season. They tied Colorado, 0 to 0, in the high Denver altitude; they restrained Iowa State, which later trounced Iowa, to two touchdowns, and held St. Louis U., with a 206 pound line and a 195 pound back field, to seven points.

In other words, Missouri, defensively speaking, does not look like the subject of a Saturday afternoon experiment, despite the 10,000 who will come to Stagg field today to examine it as such.

Will Have to Be Shown.

Mr. Carideo and his company of 32 arrived last night, which they spent at the Wndermere hotel, with no other statement than that, like true Missourians, they will have to be shown.

Maroon interest will center, of course, on Jay Berwanger, who already stands out as one of the great backs of the country, and his occasional associate, the speedy Ned Bartlett. In the line Chicago will have not only a swell football player in its captain, Ell Patterson, but an excellent leader as well.

HOLD CHESS TOURNAMENT.

A chess tournament with a time limit of ten seconds for each move will be held at the Metropolitan Chess and Bridge club, 183 West Madison street, this evening.

New Defense Player Joins Blackhawks

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Ernie Kenny, leading defense player of the Northwestern Canada Hocky league, arrived at the University of Illinois rink this morning and took his first practice with the Chicago Blackhawks.

In the three exhibition games to be played here, one of which is scheduled for tomorrow night, and in the regular season's games, Kenny, if he earns a regular position with the Blackhawks, will play defense alongside Art Coulter with whom he teamed in today's workout.

Standing 6 feet 2 inches in height and weighing 195 pounds, Kenny comes to the Hawks with the reputation of being one of the most aggressive hocky players developed in Canada in recent years.

Kenny gained the opportunity to try for a position on the Blackhawks team because of Taffy Abel's failure to come to terms and the accident to Tom Coulter, who had his leg broken in last Saturday's exhibition contest.

The Black team for tomorrow's game will consist of Starke, goal; Burke and Wiebe, defense, and Morenz, Gottselig and Couture on the first forward line with Kendall, Bostrum, and McAdam making up a second. McAdam is an eastern minor league player who stopped over for a few days of practice.

DE PAUL SEEKS FOURTH STRAIGHT TRIUMPH TODAY

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—De Paul university of Chicago, undefeated in three games, and a strong Western State football team will meet here tomorrow afternoon in a homecoming battle.

Western State's record includes victories over Carroll college and the Iowa State Teachers. De Paul has rushed through Ripon, St. Ambrose and Dayton, displaying a brilliant aerial attack in all three triumphs.

De Paul Players Injured.

The De Paul line will be composed of Capt. Phil Krause and Joe Sullivan at ends, Harold Carlson and Maurice Washburne at tackles; Norman Mertes and John Reid at guards, and Gene Cowhey at center. Marvin Casey, regular center who has been on the sidelines most of the week with illness, will be used only in the case of emergency. Butch Scanlon, tackle, who has also been suffering injuries, is available for relief action.

Ray Durkin, quarter, Walt Loess and Bill Oldani, half backs, and Julius Heim, full back, are slated to appear in De Paul's starting back field. Walt Hern, regular full back, has been hurt.

Stopping Passes a Problem.

Western State may succeed in bottling up the Demons' running attack but its big problem lies in smothering the passes which are thrown with dexterity by Walt Loess. De Paul has a number of talented receivers in Capt. Krause, Sullivan, Durkin, and Oldani. The latter is a powerful driving back.

RETAIL BUSINESS WINS FIGHT WITH MURRAY HILLERS

Old New York City Area Will Be Invaded.

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Old Murray hill, which has held out against the inroads of business since 1847 when the Murray hill covenant bound landowners to preserve the district for residential purposes, gave ground in the board of estimate today.

By a unanimous vote, the board voted to allow retail business to enter both sides of Lexington avenue to depths of 100 feet from a line 100 feet south of East 41st street to a line 100 feet north of East 38th street.

The fight has been a long, bitter one and the old families on the hill—some of them tracing their lineage back to that old Mrs. Robert Murray who wined and dined British officers the while Gen. Putnam and his 4,000 ragged continentals escaped capture—have maintained a stout resistance.

Rallied Three Years Ago.

Once, in 1931, it seemed as if the Murray Hill Association, Inc., of which J. Pierpont Morgan, is president, was badly beaten. By the rules of the board of estimate an unanimous vote was necessary to change the zoning requirements. Glib Jimmy Walker, boyish Joe McKee and their cohorts all voted "yes." It appeared to be a victory for business.

The stout hearted Murray hill contingents turned away, apparently beaten. But a sharp eared reporter lunched with several members of the association.

"We're beaten," they said. "It was unanimous."

"Why, no, it wasn't," said the reporter. "I distinctly heard Borough President Harvey of Queens say a faint 'no.'"

That gave hope to the Murray hill contingent and they went into court and were victorious. The tide of business was halted. But the halt was temporary.

The proponents of business rallied again and put in new petitions.

Many Have Moved Away.

"The old residents of the district have died or moved away," said the business men in support of their contention that the district should be used for retail purposes. "There is nobody to take their places because the section no longer is desirable for private dwellings. With but three or four exceptions none of the old-time homes built during the brown stone era and not now used for business purposes has been modernized.

"They are fit for nothing but the cheapest kind of rooming house," said these outspoken business organizations, "some of them not even for that."

That aroused the Murray Hill association again and they returned to the fight today in full force. But they lost.

Borough President Harvey, who saved the district on the previous occasion, voted "aye" today and the fusion board of estimate, with an eye to the increased taxes which the entrance of retail business into the district would bring, voted a unanimous "aye."

Taxicab Intrudes in Loop Office; Damage Is $200

When Norman Harris, 7716 North Marshfield avenue, a Yellow cab driver, cranked the car while it was in reverse gear yesterday it backed through a plate glass window in the front of the Western Union office at 112 South Dearborn street. Damage was estimated at $200. No one was hurt.

MANUEL QUEZON OF PHILIPPINES IN OPERATION

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Manuel Quezon took the fortitude of his early campaigns for Philippine independence into the surgical room of the Johns Hopkins hospital today.

The wiry little 55 year old president of the insular senate successfully underwent a major surgical operation without a general anesthetic. He has fought for the freedom of the islands on the battlefield as well as in legislative halls, and he displayed his Spartanlike qualities on the operating table.

Conscious all the time under a spinal anesthesia, he chatted with physicians in the room during the operation.

Dr. Hugh H. Young, who performed the operation, described the patient as in "excellent condition." An official bulletin of the hospital read:

"The operation . . . was entirely successful. Dr. Young removed a stone which had originated in the left kidney and slipped down into the ureter."

Quezon was expected to be well enough to leave the hospital within two weeks.

Youth Found Guilty of Violence in Bus Strike

James Lyons, 18 years old, 4328 West Harrison street, was found guilty of malicious mischief yesterday by Municipal Judge Cecil B. Smith in the fourth of 33 cases in which violence in connection with the bus strike is charged. Lyons faced a term of a year in the House of Correction. He was accused of hurling a piece of concrete through a bus window at Jackson boulevard and Kildare avenue on Aug. 27.

Girl Dies of Poison; Note Says "Did It Just for That"

Wilma Bolz, 23 years old, 19 South Springfield avenue, died at the county hospital yesterday from the effects of poison tablets she swallowed in her apartment Thursday. She left a note saying "I did it just for that." Her aunt, Mrs. Anna Terrese, 3565 Ogden avenue, told police Miss Bolz had called her to the apartment after taking the poison. Mrs. Terrese denied, however, that the girl had taken poison deliberately.

Boy Strangles to Death After Swallowing Top

Gerald Bearan, 4 years old, 11834 South State street, strangled to death yesterday afternoon after he had swallowed a spinning top with which he had been playing. When the boy choked on the top his mother, Mrs. Alvina Bearan, hurried him to the Roseland community hospital, where he died before anything could be done to save him.

Jury at Blast Inquest Suggests Safety Walls

Although holding the death of two men in an ammonia tank blast at the Central Cold Storage company Oct. 12 to be accidental, a coroner's jury yesterday recommended that concrete walls be built to separate moving machinery from pressure tanks. The men killed were John H. Kilgore, Sioux City, Ia., and John Gunis, 1418 Superior street. They were killed when an engine flywheel flew apart and fragments pierced an ammonia refrigerating tank, causing an explosion, in the plant, which is at 350 North Dearborn street.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A three hour sponsored program—the first on the air—is to make its appearance on NBC around Thanksgiving time. Actually the program will extend over six hours on Saturday night, though it will outlet for only three hours in any time zone. The program is to be a dancing party running from 10 p. m. until 1 a. m. from coast to coast. Since it is only 7 o'clock on the west coast when it's 10 in New York, the program will require a sliding broadcasting schedule. Both studio and remote control dance orchestras are to be used, though they have not been chosen. A biscuit company is to pay the bills.

Two of radio's favorite singers arrived yesterday to give concerts tomorrow. They are John McCormack, the Irish tenor, who will appear at Chicago stadium in a benefit for the Council of Catholic Women, and Lawrence Tibbett who will make his appearance at Orchestra hall. Tibbett will stay over for his Tuesday night NBC show.

Graham McNamee paused at NBC studios yesterday on his way to Iowa City to report the Iowa-Minnesota game today. . . . Salary differences are likely to keep Richard Gordon out of his old rôle as Sherlock Holmes when that serial returns to the air. . . . WJJD will observe its 10th anniversary on the air today. . . . University of Iowa has introduced a course in conducting radio orchestras. The university station, WSUI, is used as a laboratory.

Capt. William H. Killeen, speaking at the Central police station, will open a new WBBM-CBS feature entitled "Your Police Department," at 10:15 o'clock this morning. Capt. Killeen, commanding officer of the division of criminal information and statistics, has been appointed by Commissioner Allman to organize the series of broadcasts, designed to explain the work of the police department.

Queena Mario, Metropolitan Opera lyric soprano heard on NBC Sunday evenings, is the author of a new mystery novel, "Murder at the Opera House," to be published next week. It's a thriller centering around the murder of the prima donna during a presentation of "Pagliacci." Miss Mario is the wife of Wilfred Pelletier, who conducts the orchestra on Lawrence Tibbett's program.

Frank Parker will sing the leading rôle in "The Bohemian Girl," next Tuesday evening on the Beauty Box theater. . . . Pearl Buck, Pulitzer prize winner, will be guest speaker on NBC's "American Fireside" hour tomorrow evening. . . . Earl Burtnett and his orchestra, heard nightly over W-G-N, will make an appearance at the Tower theater tomorrow.

Funeral to Be Tomorrow for Dr. Merwin R. Bibb

Funeral services for Dr. Merwin R. Bibb, 57 years old, colored, who died Wednesday at his home, 423 East 60th street, will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Metropolitan Community Center church, 41st street and South Park way. He was one of the founders and a trustee of the church. Dr. Bibb was active in colored Knights of Pythias and Elks lodges, which will have charge of the funeral. Surviving him are his widow, Georgette, and his mother, Mrs. Melissa McClure, 4561 South Michigan avenue.

Mrs. Emma De Grand Dies; Church and Charity Worker

Mrs. Emma Elizabeth McFarland De Grand, 1615 Hyde Park boulevard, wife of Dr. Alexander J. De Grand, long active as a church and charity worker, died at her home yesterday after a long illness. She is survived by her husband, by two brothers, Lieut. Thomas F. McFarland of the Chicago detective bureau, and John J. McFarland, and by two sisters, Mrs. William J. Galligan and Helen T. McFarland. Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Monday from the residence to St. Ambrose church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet cemetery.

FREED OF WEAPON CHARGE.

James O'Brien, 34 years old, 5402 South Halsted street, was freed of charges of carrying concealed weapons and assault in the South State street court yesterday when his sister, Mrs. Anastasia Sullivan, 1404 West 71st street, declined to prosecute after he had apologized for shooting at her.

DRIVER GETS ONE TO 14 YEARS IN WOMAN'S DEATH

Lester Herling, 32 years old, 3221 North Central Park avenue, a truck driver, was sentenced yesterday by Judge John C. Lewe in the Criminal court to serve one to 14 years in the penitentiary for manslaughter. Herling's motion for a new trial following his conviction by a jury last week was overruled.

Herling, father of two children, was the driver of the car which struck and killed Mrs. Mamie Jones, 45 years old, 4520 Nevada avenue, as she stood on a safety island at Kilbourne and Fullerton avenues Oct. 6. Witnesses testified Herling was intoxicated.

A coroner's jury yesterday held Kenneth Hart, 21 years old, 8059 South Marshfield avenue, to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter. Hart was the driver of an automobile which fatally injured Mrs. Lelia Campbell, 54 years old, 7043 Eberhardt avenue, at 70th street on Oct. 17.

Two deaths yesterday raised the 1934 Cook county traffic fatality toll to 1,004. The victim:

Michael Spiopta, 46 years old, 7043 South Paulina street, a steel laborer. Died in the County hospital yesterday of a skull fracture incurred Thursday when he fell from the running board of an automobile.

Joseph Slaidza, 42 years old, 2440 South Francisco avenue, a machinist. Killed when he was run over by hit and run motorist in the street in front of 2939 West 25th street just before midnight.

Chicagoan Named Head of Royal Arch Masons

William C. Rapp of Chicago was elected grand high priest of the Grand Royal Arch chapter of Illinois, a Masonic order, yesterday at the end of the order's two day convention in the Great Northern hotel. Mr. Rapp succeeded O. H. Woodworth of Arcola. Edward Kuehnstaedt of Wilmette was elected grand master of the first veil. About 1,200 delegates attended the convention.

Runaway Horse Seized as It Races Toward Children

A runaway horse was overtaken by a truck driver and halted yesterday as it bore down on three small children playing near 18th street and St. Louis avenue. The animal, a delivery horse used by the United Milk company, was seized by David M. Pollyea, 4105 West 15th street, a driver for the Case-Moody Pie company.

BANK REPORTS REVEAL GAIN IN TOTAL DEPOSITS

Loans and Discounts Little Changed.

A call for statement of condition of national banks yesterday revealed that Chicago institutions improved their financial status since June 30, the date of the last call. Betterment also was shown since Sept. 29, the date of the last state bank call, when nationalized institutions here issued voluntary statements of condition.

Yesterday's call, as of Oct. 17, revealed total deposits of $1,737,828,000 for the city's 18 national institutions. On Sept. 29 this figure stood at $1,705,262,000, and on June 30 the total was $1,621,081,000.

Savings Deposits Higher.

Savings deposits of $255,396,000 compared with $252,610,000 and $243,933,000, respectively.

Total loans and discounts stood at $513,194,000 on Oct. 17, against $513,373,000 Sept. 29 and $497,856,000 June 30. Cash resources aggregated $626,652,000, compared with $620,532,000 and $626,820,000.

One new bank, the Milwaukee Avenue National, has been added to the city's list since last June. It reported deposits of $659,000, including savings deposits of $364,000.

Two state banks, the Harris Trust and Savings bank and the Northern Trust company, issued voluntary statements yesterday. Harris Trust showed loans and discounts of $40,485,929, against the Sept. 29 figure of $39,944,235. Cash resources were $46,749,820, against $48,878,214; total deposits, $155,895,399, against $152,307,797, and savings deposits, $18,022,311, against $17,826,598.

Northern Trust Figures.

Northern Trust reported loans and discounts of $34,133,905, against $35,548,000; total deposits of $245,083,860, against $242,343,000; cash resources of $78,511,160, against $84,919,000 and savings deposits of $57,384,888, against $56,679,000.

Some quarters estimated national bank deposits for the country as a whole would show a gain between 500 million and a billion dollars from June 30. On that date deposits totaled $19,932,660,000 with 5,422 banks reporting, compared with $18,790,487,000 on March 5, when 5,293 reported. On Oct. 25, 1933, deposits of 5,057 banks were $17,055,208,000.

The controler of the currency is required by law to call for condition statements of all national banks at least three times yearly, but four are usually requested, one each quarter.

May Select Any Date.

He may select any date he desires and sometimes the call, such as yesterday's, is placed in the middle of the month to minimize the possibilities of "window dressing" bank assets. The institutions have ten days in which to prepare sworn statements, but this time may be extended on request.

Under the banking act of 1933 the call also includes private banking firms, not subject to state examination, which elect to be examined by the controler. The statute provides they must subject themselves to examination by the controler or the federal reserve board.

Autumn calls have been issued since 1914 with the exceptions of 1918 and 1926. Spring calls were omitted in 1932 and 1933.

Jesse H. Jones, head of the RFC, said a few days ago that bank calls would be made less frequently hereafter. This was in connection with his appeal to bankers to be more liberal in their loans.

AAA Seeking New Power to Enforce Pacts

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—Legislative props to bolster the crumbling enforcement of marketing agreements and licensing provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment administration are being drafted by worried New Dealers. Chester Davis, AAA chieftain, announced today he expects to present a three-point program to the next congress.

While Administrator Davis characterized the changes under consideration as minor, he said they were necessary to correct "inconsistencies and weaknesses," developed in the eighteen months' operation of the AAA. He added hastily that the general policy of crop control is here to stay.

One of Trouble Spots.

The policing of marketing agreements and licenses has been recognized by administration planners as one of the most trouble festered features of the New Deal crop program. Under implied powers of the act attempt at enforcement was made through provision for hearings before an AAA counsel with fellow members of the legal staf as prosecutors.

This system resulted in a flood of lawsuits in federal courts against the AAA. Defendants refused to swallow punishment meted out at the quasi-judicial hearings and appeared in federal courts to challenge the validity of the enforcement procedure. The enforcement program received several body blows in adverse court rulings.

Powers He Seeks.

Under the plan outlined by Davis the AAA will seek congressional sanction of powers assumed by New Dealers by implication from the agricultural administration act. He said he will ask congress to give definite police powers on:

1. Enjoin handlers of farm products and others regulated by federal licenses from violating licenses.
2. Examine books and records of distributors, processors, shippers, middle men, and other licensees.
3. Probate production quotas and shipping allotments.

FOX WINS POINT IN SUIT OVER THEATER DEALS

New York, Oct. 26.—(AP)—The defense of William Fox, motion picture magnate, won a point today in the suit for $1,000,000 brought by the Chicago Title and Trust company, present owners of the guarantee which was assigned it by Herbert Lubin, builder of New York's Roxy theater.

Fox won the right to examine William E. Atkinson, president of Fox Theaters corporation, as to whether there was a conspiracy with the Chase National bank and others fraudulently to force Fox to pay $1,000,000 on a personal guarantee of the purchase price of the theater. Fox acquired the theater from Lubin and then sold his controlling stock in the Fox Theaters corporation to General Equipment company.

The corporation then came under the control of a group including the Chase National bank, Fox declared. He charges the corporation consented to go into receivership and that the final three payments on the theater, totaling $1,000,000, were not settled in a conspiracy to force him to make good his guarantee.

AAA TO REDUCE CORN CROP LESS IN NEXT YEAR

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—(AP)—The farm administration prepared today to increase corn production under its 1935 contract which will ask farmers to hold production at 10 to 15 per cent less than 1933 instead of the 20 to 30 per cent slash required this year.

The move was an effort of the AAA to compensate partially for the effect of last summer's drouth which cut the corn supply for the coming year to 1,742,450,000 bushels, about 750,550,000 bushels under normal domestic requirements.

Officials sought in a series of conferences with field advisors during the last ten days to arrive at a balance between over production on one hand, with resulting lower prices and stimulated hog production, and scarcity, with the adverse political and economic effects which would result.

They believe the 10 to 15 per cent cut under the base period figure of 105,550,000 acres will accomplish this. If the number of contract signers in 1935 exceeds this year's figure they predict that acreage will be reduced to between 90,000,000 and 94,000,000 acres and production to between 2,340,000,000 and 2,210,000,000 bushels.

U. S. WILL CARRY RAIL PENSION TO SUPREME COURT

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Intention of the department of justice to seek a decision by the Supreme court on the railway retirement act was announced today by Attorney General Cummings, who said a direct appeal probably would be made.

The act was held unconstitutional by the District of Columbia Supreme court, principally on the grounds that it affected wages of men not in interstate commerce and that certain provisions were retroactive.

In discussing the case the attorney general said: "It is important that the Supreme court pass on this act as soon as possible not only for the particular purpose of deciding on the railway retirement act but also to determine the scope to which any such acts can go."

LABOR BOARD BLOCKS DEAL ON CLOSED SHOP FOR THEATER CHAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—A closed shop agreement which the American Federation of Labor negotiated with a chain of New Jersey moving picture houses was thrown out as illegal today by the national labor relations board.

At the same time the board uncovered a quirk in section 7a of the NIRA, which appears to open up a minor loophole in the law. The board held that, since the law requires "collective" bargaining with employés, an employer with one employé is exempt. One employé cannot bargain "collectively," the board held.

In throwing out the A. F. of L. closed shop agreement the board stated specifically that it was not passing on the status of all closed shop agreements. The New Jersey agreement was ruled out on technical grounds. The Hildinger-Bishop chain of movies in Trenton made a closed shop agreement with a local branch of the International Alliance of Stage Employés, an A. F. of L. union, despite the fact that in some of its theaters none of the workers were members of the union.

The board pointed out that by refusing to negotiate with its nonunion employés and by making an agreement with a union which in some theaters represented none of the employés, the company had violated section 7a and "majority rule" in so far as those theaters were concerned. It ordered the company to rehire two nonunion employés fired from a theater where the union had no members.

STEEL INDUSTRY SHOWS DECLINE IN EMPLOYMENT

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Employment in the steel industry was 6 per cent lower last month than in August and nearly 10 per cent less than September, 1933, it was announced today by the American Iron and Steel institute. Employés on hourly, piece work or tonnage wages during September totaled 343,064, compared with 364,583 in August and 380,271 in September, 1933. The total number of all employés in the steel industry was 381,828, against 404,793 in August and 417,020 in September, 1933.

The peak of employment in the industry this year was established in the week ended June 15, while the low point came in the week ended Sept. 8, when the total number of men working was 321,463. The total increased more than 20,000 from that date to the end of last month.

The industry's total pay roll for September was $29,142,892, compared with $34,362,208 in August and $37,322,250 in September, 1933. Average number of hours worked each week by employés was 24.2, compared with 26.5 in August and 32.8 a year ago. Average earnings per hour increased in September to 73.8 cents from 72.2 cents in August and 63.6 cents in September, 1933.

The Industry operated at 22.74 per cent of capacity last month, compared with 22.93 per cent in August, 1934, and 40.40 per cent in September, 1933.

ASSOCIATED GAS REORGANIZATION CONTEST BEGUN

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Federal Judge Julian W. Mack ruled today that the petition of a group of security holders for reorganization of the Associated Gas and Electric company under section 77B of the bankruptcy act was filed in "good faith," as required by law.

The decision opens the way for protracted litigation in the federal court as to whether the company is insolvent. Recognizing that the argument as to the solvency of the $700,000,000 holding company would probably require months, Judge Mack virtually invited the utility company to come to some agreement with the petitioners and to file a voluntary petition for reorganization.

Counsel for the company, however, indicated that Judge Mack's ruling would be appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals. The company has already indicated through counsel that it would fight the allegation that it is insolvent. Judge Mack ruled that both the original and the new petitions were filed in good faith. The petitioners will therefore have to prove insolvency and acts of bankruptcy, he pointed out.

SINCLAIR HAS PLAN TO REVAMP RICHFIELD OIL

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 26.—(AP)—Harry F. Sinclair, oil executive, here to battle for control of the Richfield Oil company's eastern assets, said today he will offer a plan to reorganize Richfield of California.

"If my offer is accepted," he said, "the Richfield company will continue to operate as a separate entity under its present name. Details of the plan will be revealed at the proper time."

It was indicated the offer would be submitted next week following federal court hearings Monday on Sinclair's $4,000,000,000 bid for Richfield of New York.

DOLLAR RISES AGAIN; FRANC, BELGA AROUND GOLD EXPORT POINTS

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Further declines in the gold bloc currencies, carrying the Belgian belga below the price at which gold can be shipped to this country and the French franc to within negligible fraction of the gold import point, constituted the outstanding development in the foreign exchange market today. The franc declined .00⅛ of a cent to 6.60 cents in New York. The belga lost 0.02 of a cent at 23.38 cents.

Renewed apprehension over the ability of the gold bloc countries to continue on gold, stimulated by the difficult political situation in France and the lingering influence of the recent inconclusive conference in Brussels of representatives of the gold standard currencies, were the only known influences at work in the market.

Bankers here considered it likely that gold would again flow here from France. Although Belgium's currency is below the theoretical gold import point there was no certainty that gold would be imported because that country does not operate a completely automatic gold standard. The Belgian authorities permit exports of gold only as they see fit.

The British pound ended the day at $4.97¼, unchanged from the preceding session, although at one time the rate showed a loss of a cent. German marks also held steady at 40.32 cents. Italian lire sagged 0.01 of a cent to 8.57 cents. The Canadian dollar rose to 2 3-16 cents premium.

U.S. Offering Steel Big Field, Says Hackett

BY AL CHASE.

Federal low cost housing projects offer the steel industry one of its greatest opportunities, Col. Horatio B. Hackett, director of the housing division of the Public Works administration, declared last night in a speech delivered before the American Institute of Steel Construction at the Edgewater Beach hotel. He said that this statement was "more of a challenge than an opportunity, for up to this time the steel industry has not turned out many building products useful in low cost housing."

Col. Hackett quoted from the magazine Steel an article dealing with the opportunities federal housing construction is opening for steel products, in which it was said: "Steel is now practically the only large industry which has not come forward actively to coöperate with the government in its housing and construction work."

Desires Lower Costs.

"I think that puts it rather concisely, even though it may be a bit blunt," he said. "We need cheaper and more durable materials in our low cost housing program. If the steel industry can produce them we will use them, but up to this time we have found little on the market in the way of steel building materials suitable to our need which we can use."

Col. Hackett declared that the housing division was not opposed to innovations; rather it welcomed any new development that would help to reduce costs and provide proper living quarters at low rental.

"However, no industry can expect us to be a laboratory for the testing of untried, unproven products," he said.

"We are exploring a new field. We would like to have help from American industry, but we ask of American industry that it produce something workable, upon which we can depend, and with which we do not have to experiment."

Brands Code a Farce.

How the writing and establishment of "codes of fair competition" developed into a farce during the first year of the National Recovery administration was detailed in graphic manner yesterday morning by Clyde G. Conley, president of the institute and chairman of its code committee.

Carefully explaining that he was not making a political speech in criticism of the administration, Conley said: "While I realize that our industry has been kicked about and mishandled, it was due to the ignorance and lack of policy of those charged with negotiations for the government." Blistering, however, was his charge that the steel fabricators were shoved from one official or board to another, ending up with a code drawn and approved without the knowledge of the industry's representatives who were supposed to have written it.

"Heaven" Not Attained.

"The last year has shown conclusively that the industrial 'heaven' is not attained by attacking everything that had the earmarks of the 'Old Deal.'

"If we are to continue the capitalistic system, under which this country has grown powerful, we must prepare to see restored the classical economic concept of business, and that means the cessation of price fixing and the restoration of competition."

Donald Richberg, in a telegram to the convention, said the new NRA policy board brings "new assurance of careful consideration and deliberative determination of policies and methods of administration which should encourage whole-hearted support."

Federal Judge Enjoins Rail Route Shift; Upholds Eastman

Federal Judge John P. Barnes yesterday issued a temporary injunction restraining the New York Central and the Louisville and Nashville railroads from entering into an agreement which would today stop the interchange of passenger equipment on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad at Evansville, Ind., in violation of orders of Joseph B. Eastman, federal coordinator of transportation.

The proposed plan, which if put into effect, would displace the service of the C. & E. I., which has rendered the Chicago-Florida route for 50 years, with that of a new service of the New York Central railroad, has been regarded with interest as it involves the basic power of the coördinator to prevent duplications of service and wasteful expense over the same railroad systems.

Action Taken by Receiver.

The injunction, which upholds the coördinator's ruling that the C. & E. I. continue to serve the territory, was asked by Charles M. Thomson, receiver for the C. & E. I. lines.

According to Thomson's petition, which was filed in the federal court by Attorney Ernest Ballard, the Louisville and Nashville railroad notified the C. & E. I. line in September of its intention to discontinue the interchange of equipment with them on Oct. 28 for that of the New York Central railroad. The C. & E. I. protested to Coördinator Eastman that if the plan went into effect it would jeopardize their assets and interfere with their direct train service to Florida.

Rules It a Duplication.

Hearings were then held by the coordinator, the petition said, and it was pointed out that the C. & E. I. had carried 70,212 passengers over their southern route in 1933 and in that year the railroad had realized revenues of $1,190,000. It was estimated it would do equally as well this year. Coordinator Eastman ruled that the proposed plan would be a duplication of service.

The injunction, which restrained the New York Central and the Louisville and Nashville lines from executing their agreement, was objected to by Sidney C. Murray, general counsel for the New York Central. Judge Barnes permitted him to file exceptions to the order in case of an appeal.

TO ASK REVIEW OF CASE.

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—The New York Central Railroad will seek a review of the order of Joseph B. Eastman, federal coördinator, that the Louisville and Nashville continue to route certain passenger trains over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, Jacob Aronson, vice president of law and public relations for the New York Central, said today.

EXPORTS BEST IN SEPTEMBER FOR FOUR YEARS

Total 191 Millions; Imports Also Gain.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—[Special.]—American exports during September reached a value of $191,690,000, the highest figure for that month since 1930. They were also $31,571,000 greater than for the corresponding month of 1933 and $19,723,000 higher than for August, 1934, the department of commerce announced today in its monthly report of foreign trade conditions.

At the same time, general imports increased both in quantity and value, contrary to the usual trend, and totaled $131,659,000. During recent years the value of all merchandise arriving from foreign countries during September has averaged about 1 per cent less in value than August. This year there was a rise of more than 10 per cent. The value of imports compared with $119,515,000 in August, 1934, and $146,645,000 in September, 1933.

Favorable Balance $60,000,000.

Thus, the "favorable" export balance totaled $60,031,000 and, as in August, was considered high, taking into account the total value of foreign trade. Exports exceeded imports by 46 per cent, the largest percentage difference since November, 1928.

During the first nine months of 1934 exports were $1,561,366,000 compared with $1,104,030,000 in 1933 and imports were $1,241,732,000 as compared with $1,036,633,000 in 1933. The value of exports exceeded that of imports by $319,634,000, or 26 per cent.

Imports for consumption recorded a much greater increase in value from August to September than did general imports. These were valued at $149,755,000, compared with only $117,262,000 in August. Cane sugar imports from Cuba, largely withdrawals from warehouses, which increased $18,836,000 in value, accounted for the large difference between general imports and imports for consumption.

Cuba Sugar Imports Rise.

In the first eight months of this year cane sugar imports for consumption from Cuba amounted to only 702,756,000 pounds, compared with 1,722,172,000 pounds in the corresponding period of 1933. During this period, however, considerable quantities of this sugar were sent to the United States for storage in bonded warehouses.

Withdrawal from warehouses was deferred, pending the conclusion of negotiations for a reciprocal tarif with Cuba, in expectation of a lower tarif. Following the reduction in the United States tarif rate on sugar imports from Cuba on Sept. 3, 1934, the effective date of the Cuban agreement, great quantities were withdrawn from warehouses.

Exports of gold during September were $22,255,000, compared with $58,282,000 in September a year ago and imports were $8,585,000, compared with $1,545,000. Exports of silver totaled $1,424,000, against $3,321,000 in September, 1933, and imports were $20,831,000, compared with $3,494,000.

RADIO'S 9 MONTH NET EARNINGS TOTAL $2,177,770

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—The Radio Corporation of America reports, for the nine months ended Sept. 30, a net income of $2,177,770, equal to $4.39 a share on the 7 per cent preferred A stock, on which there was an accumulation of dividends of $7.87½ a share on July 1. This compares with a net loss of $1,793,370 in the same period last year.

Net earnings for the third quarter were $406,189 against a deficit of $525,158 for the same period last year. Total gross income from all sources for the quarter was reported at $16,810,790 against $14,225,112 for the same period of last year.

Borg-Warner Directors Omit October Meeting

The Borg-Warner corporation omitted the regular directors' meeting scheduled for yesterday. The next meeting will be on Nov. 23.

Freight Rises; Still Below Last 2 Years

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Freight loadings last week showed a seasonal gain of 4,641 cars, or .8 per cent over the preceding week, but were 16,725 cars, or 1½ per cent, under the corresponding week of 1933, the American Railway association announced yesterday. The total for the week was 640,280 cars.

Between the corresponding weeks of last year there was a drop of 2.1 per cent. Last week was the second successive week in which loadings have fallen below the corresponding period of 1932. Throughout the remainder of the year up to this time the loadings each week have exceeded those of 1932.

Total loadings for the year to date were 25,216,036 cars, compared with 23,604,738 in 1933 and 22,889,456 in 1932.

Miscellaneous Freight Lower.

Miscellaneous freight loaded during the week of Oct. 20 was 246,757 cars, a decrease of 740 from the preceding week, but 5,322 above the corresponding week in 1933 and 10,439 above 1932.

Less than carlot merchandise was 163,973 cars, an increase of 2,522 above the preceding week but 9,558 below last year and 14,450 below 1932.

Grain and grain products amounted to 31,268 cars, an increase of 667 above the preceding week and 2,678 above last year, but a decrease of 1,778 below 1932. In the western districts loadings totaled 20,515 cars, an increase of 2,046 above last year.

Forest products totaled 23,347 cars, an increase of 1,492 above the preceding week, a decrease of 1,163 below last year and an increase of 4,775 above 1932.

Ore totaled 16,685 cars, a decerase of 1,249 below the preceding week and 11,915 below 1933, but an increase of 10,359 above 1932.

Fuel Loadings Increase.

Coal loaded amounted to 124,977 cars, an increase of 5,578 above the preceding week, but 5,126 below last year and 15,766 below the same week in 1932.

Coke loadings amounted to 5,918 cars, an increase of 449 above the preceding week, a decrease of 602 below 1933 and an increase of 1,087 above 1932.

Live stock totaled 27,355 cars, a decrease of 4,078 below the preceding week, but an increase of 3,639 above 1933 and 3,629 above 1932. In the western districts loadings totaled 22,174 cars, an increase of 2,779 above the same week in 1933.

JOB, PAY ROLL UPTURN IS MORE THAN SEASONAL

A gain of 2.2 per cent in employment and .3 per cent in pay rolls of Illinois during September was reported yesterday by the state department of labor. The report covered 4,326 businesses employing 462,651 workers who received $9,804,274 in wages.

"The September gains compare favorably with the average seasonal upturn in employment for the period," the department's statement said. "Ordinarily employment rises .6 per cent and pay rolls decrease .5 per cent."

Two thousand thirty-six manufacturing firms revealed a gain in employment of 1.8 per cent and a drop in pay rolls of .1 per cent. Gains of 2.8 per cent in employment and 1 per cent in wages were shown by 2,290 nonmanufacturing establishments.

"In manufacturing industries the current employment increase is greator than the average seasonal gain of .5 per cent while the pay roll decline is smaller than the normal seasonal loss of .6 per cent," the department announced.

"Weekly earnings for both sexes combined averaged $21.12—$23.19 for males and $14.63 for females. In the manufacturing group weekly wages were $20.95—$21.097 for males and $13.70 for females.

Weekly wages in the nonmanufacturing group averaged $23.04 for both sexes—$26.22 for men and $15.97 for women."

COULD YOU LET ME HAVE A QUARTER? SAYS BANKER TO REPORTER

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—(AP)—A banker borrowed a quarter from a reporter today and was accused by President Roosevelt of begging from the White House steps.

Francis M. Law, retiring president of the American Bankers' association, found himself without the change to pay a taxicab bill when he arrived at the White House for a call on the President and borrowed the quarter from a White House correspondent. When the story reached Mr. Roosevelt, he smilingly accused Law of begging.

To restore Law's credit, Robert V. Fleming, vice president of the bankers' association, loaned him a quarter in the presence of the President and this was returned to the reporter.

COURT RESTRAINS 7 REFINERIES IN HOT OIL BATTLE

Tyler, Tex., Oct. 26.—(AP)—A 10 day renewable restraining order was issued against seven East Texas oil refineries in an effort to enforce the government's campaign against the illegal production of oil, blamed for a recent collapse in the eastern gasoline market.

The order, prohibiting production of oil in excess of prorated standards, was issued at Beaumont, Tex., by Federal Judge Randolph Bryant. It was announced by L. R. Martineau Jr., special assistant attorney general charged with furthering the National Oil administration's purpose of conservation and price maintenance.

This was the first definite federal court action since Secretary Ickes, oil code administrator, sent Martineau and others to the field to dry up "hot oil."

Judge Bryant ordered the defendants to appear in his court at Beaumont Nov. 2.

The federal tender board's campaign to eliminate interstate shipments of illegal crude oil and its products showed results as reports revealed that rail shipments dropped from 801 cars Wednesday to 14 yesterday.

GASOLINE UNCHANGED HERE.

Chicago's retail gasoline price war front remained quiet again yesterday with neither independent nor major companies posting changes.

PLAN TO LINK TOBACCO AND COTTON BOARDS

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Negotiations looking to linking the New York Cotton exchange and the New York Tobacco exchange are proceeding, it was learned today. It is probable that proposals for uniting the two boards will be drafted in the form of resolutions which will be submitted to the members of the respective institutions soon.

It is said that the plan of union cannot accurately be described as a merger. As now favored the proposal is that each exchange maintain its identity. Benefits of the plan would be mutual, it is contended. The Cotton exchange wishes to add another agricultural commodity to its trading list.

Those who favor tobacco point out that cotton and tobacco have many things in common. They are produced side by side in several states. At least four large cotton states also are major tobacco states. Most cotton houses already have agencies in the tobacco-cotton states and their offices could also handle tobacco business without added expense.

RETAIL SALES REPORTED BEST SINCE SPRING

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—Retail buying throughout the United States continues to improve and wholesale demand also has increased, Bradstreet's review said today. This, in the opinion of observers, indicates that October operations will be the most satisfactory since spring.

Renewed activities of a constructive nature are interpreted as marking the beginning of a resumed forward movement which will gather force to the end of the year.

"The fact that dollar totals of retail sales for the week ranged from 8 to 12 per cent above the 1933 figures," the review said, "reveals the sharpest rise in unit turnover in many months, as the price level now has been brought practically on a par with that of a year ago.

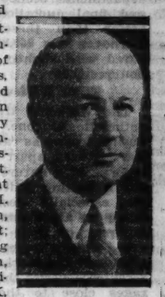
"In the middle west special promotions of clothing and house-furnishings helped to lift volume 3 to 7 per cent above last year's, with the rise over the total of the previous week amounting to 15 to 20 per cent at many centers.

BANK LEADERS PLEDGE AID TO RECOVERY TEAM

A.B.A. Officers Meet with Roosevelt.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—Officers of the American Bankers' association, headed by the newly elected president, Rudolf S. Hecht of New Orleans, today pledged their coöperation in the recovery program in a conference with President Roosevelt. Others present were Francis M. Law of Houston, retiring president; Robert V. Fleming of Washington, first vice president, and Tom K. Smith of St. Louis, second vice president.



TOM K. SMITH. [Strauss Photo.]

"We told the President," Mr. Hecht said, "that all four players wanted to play on his all-American football team," referring to the expression used in the President's speech. Asked what positions they were given by the President, he said: "He did not specify, but he accepted our offers."

Urges Full Coöperation.

In reply to inquiries, Mr. Hecht said: "I do not know why there should not be complete coöperation. We think Jackson Reynolds, in his speech to the bankers, expressed the sentiment of at least the overwhelming majority, if not the unanimous opinion, of the bankers.

"The bankers are going out of their way to let the people understand that we are anxious to extend and make loans. Banks cannot make loans unless people want to borrow."

Mr. Hecht pointed out in this connection that Mr. Law had sent out a letter to clearing houses of the country asking them to ask their member banks to advertise to let the people know that the banks want to lend. We are going to follow through with that.

Asks Banks Show Confidence.

"We have got to play together and the banks have got to show enough confidence in the people so that they can get loans. I think we have made excellent progress. I think it ought to be another step forward in the recovery program."

President Roosevelt later said in reply to inquiries that he had not assigned the bankers to any particular positions on his all-American team. He would not think of sending them clear out to end, he said humorously, nor did he think they should have the position of center and that probably they would not want to be half backs.

Leaders of the American Bankers' association after their White House interview met at luncheon with federal officials to see what banks could do to help stimulate foreign trade. Mr. Hecht headed the group of bankers, and the government was represented by George N. Peek, head of the export-import bank, and others.

Bankers Study Foreign Trade.

Mr. Hecht said that the general subject of foreign trade was being given close consideration by the association's committee on banking studies. Many questions of vital importance to the banks will be scrutinized by this large committee, he said.

The committee, which formerly was headed by Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National bank of Washington, has been given a new chairman, Tom K. Smith, president of the Boatman's bank of St. Louis, because of the elevation of Fleming to the office of first vice president and the election of Smith as second vice president.

New York Area Department Store Sales Above Year Ago

New York, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Sales of reporting department stores in the metropolitan area of New York were about 5½ per cent ahead of last year in the first half of October, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. The expansion over September was slightly more than seasonal.

STOCK TRADERS REMAIN GLOOMY AND PRICES FALL

Many Shares Show 1 to 3 Point Losses.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 26.—An accumulation of unsatisfactory earnings reports from big corporations kept speculative Wall Street looking on the seamy side of things again today. The stock market was under selling pressure all day and the close found many prices 1 to 3 or more points below their previous figures.

Liquidation was fairly heavy during the forenoon but the offerings in most departments tended to dry up later and final quotations were generally better than those around midday. Turnover was 869,850 shares as compared with slightly more than a million yesterday.

Trade Reviews Favorable.

The week-end trade reviews were optimistic in tone, but such "live" business news as came to hand during the day was, apart from the earnings reports, of a nature calculated to justify a waiting attitude, offering nothing especially designed to prompt either an abandonment of hope or an outbreak of fresh bullishness. However, traders were obviously discouraged over the market's failure to hold recent recoveries that had carried averages close to their levels of last August, and the reviews went for naught.

Pessimism was most pronounced in steel stocks, due largely to the Bethlehem report, and in railroad and railway equipment shares, due to the debacle in Baldwin and the inability of the carriers to hold their recent rally. At their worst steels were down 1 to 4 points. Both the common and preferred of Bethlehem sold to new lows for the year.

Steel Issues Weaken.

U. S. Steel common and preferred gave up a point or so each and other issues of the group yielded rather easily. Baldwin preferred yielded another 4 points to record a decline of a dozen in the last two days.

Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific, Delaware and Hudson, Illinois Central, and others suffered losses of 1 to 2 points each.

Early weakness in wheat had a disturbing effect on the farm implement and mail order shares and Case. Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward drifted down together.

Liquidation of the so-called currency metal stocks continued. Homestake dropped $10 a share on a single deal and U. S. Smelting, Noranda and Cerro de Pasco gave up a point or so each.

Among the utilities, Consolidated Gas appeared to be meeting some support, but was unable to muster any substantial rallying power.

Merchandising shares followed the trend despite favorable reports in the trade reviews. The liquors worked moderately lower.

STOCK EXCHANGE TO MAKE REPORT FOR FIRST TIME

New York, Oct. 26.—[Special.]—For the first time in its history, the New York Stock exchange on Monday will issue a public statement of its financial condition. Although the securities exchange act of 1934 requires that this statement be filed with the securities and exchange commission, the exchange had, until this week, opposed the commission making its financial affairs public. It receded from this position, it is authoritatively reported, only after the futility of resistance became apparent.

The New York Curb exchange seems to have been less emphatic in its protests against publication of its balance sheet. The curb merely expressed the hope, it is understood, that since it did not regard its fiscal affairs as a matter of public interest it hoped that they would not be held up for public inspection. The SEC has not indicated whether it will publish the curb report or those of the 35 other securities exchange under its jurisdiction.

COTTON TRADE FLUCTUATES WITHIN RANGE OF 10 POINTS

Cotton fluctuated erratically within a range of around 10 points yesterday, and while rallying somewhat from the inside figure in sympathy with grains the close was 2 points higher to 3 points lower in Chicago and 2 to 6 points lower in other markets. Trade in the aggregate was not large and the markets easily influenced. Spot cotton finished unchanged to 5 points lower with New Orleans, Galveston, and Houston, 12.55 cents and New York, 12.50 cents per pound. Prices follow:

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 26.—Bond prices underwent a complete reversal of trend today as selling offers predominated. Dealings for the most part were light, however, and the decline was considered a logical reaction to the recent steady advance. Volume amounted to $10,233,000.

Treasury issues set the example for the rest of the market, with declines ranging from 1-32 to 10-32 point. Home Owners Loan 3s went below 98.

Second Grades Weakest.

Losses of one to three points were recorded in second grade and speculative bonds, including many of the obligations of the railroads.

Declines in gilt edged railroad, industrial and utility bonds were limited to fractions, just as their recent daily gains were restricted. In view of the fact that this type of bond has been averaging around the best for the year, bond men did not regard today's setback as anything unexpected.

Baldwin Locomotive 5s, due 1940, lost 6¼ points on the day in sympathy with the heavy losses suffered by other obligations of the corporation on the Curb exchange the previous day in response to the news that interest would not be paid on bonds held in the sinking fund.

Finnish Bonds Rise.

In the foreign market an interesting development was the rise in Finnish government 6½s and 6s. In the light of the refunding operation that is being planned to take in the 5½s and 7s, the only two now redeemable, the tendency of the 6s and 6½s to advance was logical.

Other foreign loans were mostly dull and easier. Austrian, Belgian, Italian and British government issues showed fractional variations. German government 5½s were bid up 1½ points.

Tighe Re-elected Head of Steel Workers' Union

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 26. — (AP) — Michael F. Tighe was reëlected president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the union's canvassing board disclosed today.

Voting was light despite the unsuccessful drive of the younger members to upset Tighe. 5,319 ballots were cast.

Republic of Ireland Bonds.

Investors' Guide: I am desirous to find out if the Irish bonds have been disposed of, as several articles in different papers told the depositors the balance on these bonds would be paid off by August, 1934. I have written the New York office, but they make no answer one way or the other. Your paper has helped me on several such occasions. I now take the opportunity to write you for information.—Mrs. N. M.

Answer: We have the following communication from the officer in charge of the Irish Free State repayment office for Dail Eireann external loans:

"The final date for filing claims as fixed by Dail Eireann loans and funds [amendment] act, 1933, expired on Aug. 31, 1934.

"It is estimated that approximately 160,000 persons filed claim for refund with this office. These claims are being scrutinized and listed for payment. It is not intended to make any refunds will be made until the end of the year.

"The Irish Free State government proposes to redeem all outstanding Republic of Ireland bond certificates sold in the United States during 1919, 1920, and 1921 at their face value plus 25 cents for each dollar subscribed. Those persons who received partial payment from the receivers in 1930, of course, will receive the balance due on their bonds plus 25 cents on the dollar interest."

Washington Gas and Electric.

Investors' Guide: Please give me information on Washington Gas and Electric first lien and general 6s, due 1960.—Miss W. G.

Answer: Like many other utility companies, Washington Gas and Electric, a subsidiary of North American Gas and Electric company, has seen an increase in gross revenues dissipated in higher labor costs, increased taxes, higher material costs, and lower rates. In addition, one of its largest customers went into receivership and the receiver will probably attempt to revise its contract. Washington Gas and Electric company's location, in Washington and Oregon, is uncomfortably close to the proposed federally financed Columbia river power project.

Current position at the close of 1933 was fair. Current assets were $736,000 and current liabilities were $437,000.

The company earned only 99 per cent of its fixed charges in 1933. In 1932 charges were covered 1¼ times. Previous years' coverage on a consolidated basis is not available.

The company is rather heavily bonded. The $3,200,000 first lien and general 6s, due 1960, are preceded by $7,071,000 bonds of senior rank. They are quite speculative.

PACKING HOUSE OUTPUT RAISED BY U. S. PROGRAM

Operations in September Above 10 Year Average.

Packing house production in the United States during September increased 8 per cent over August to a level of 4½ per cent above the 1924-'33 average for the month, but 2½ per cent below September, 1933, according to a report issued yesterday by the Chicago Federal Reserve bank.

Total production for the period, including beef, veal and lamb processed by the government, exceeded the 10 year average for the month by 31½ per cent, with a 4½ per cent expansion over August and 14½ per cent above September, 1933.

Despite a downward trend since early in September, prices averaged higher than in the preceding month and continued above a year ago but were considerably below the seasonal level. Sales to domestic and foreign customers rose 2 per cent over August and 23 per cent over a year ago, but were 24 per cent under the 10 year average for the period.

Tonnage Sold Shows Decline.

The tonnage sold, however, was 4½ per cent below the preceding month, 19 per cent under September, 1933, and 9 per cent below the seasonal average.

Commercial inventories fell off less than the usual amount from Sept. 1 and were 101,000,000 pounds heavier than the Oct. 1 average from 1929 to 1933. It is estimated that federal surplus relief holdings were very large and that total inventories of packing house products considerably exceeded those of a year ago and the 1929-'33 average for the month.

Export shipments decreased moderately from August and consisted largely of lard forwarded to the United Kingdom. Germany has not yet permitted resumptions of imports from the United States. The bulk of the meat trade was confined to moderate purchases of hams by British importers, with prices easing somewhat in English markets.

Creamery Butter Decreases.

Creamery butter production in the Seventh federal reserve district dropped 12 per cent from August but was 13 per cent above a year ago and 12½ per cent heavier than the 1924-'33 early autumn average. Sales tonnage was 14½ per cent below August, although 2½ per cent above the seasonal level and 4 per cent larger than a year ago.

For the United States the output of butter was less than seasonally under that of the preceding month but was 7 per cent below a year ago. Prices were 5½ per cent lower than in August. Total inventories of butter rose to a level on Oct. 1 only 2,063,000 pounds under the average for that date.

Manufacture of American cheese in Wisconsin during the four weeks ended Sept. 29 was 10 per cent below that of the preceding period, although it remained 10½ per cent above the 1924-'33 seasonal level and exceeded that of a year ago by 12 per cent.

PRICES OF HOGS REACH NEW LOW FOR TEN WEEKS

Hogs broke 10 to 15 cents yesterday to the lowest price level in ten weeks, due to the heavy receipts of light hogs and slipping prices for fresh pork. A small part of the loss was regained in the later trading. Packers paid up to $7.90, including the processing tax, for prime butchers, and the general average price was $7.50.

Cattle receipts were light and prices held steady. A large part of the supply sold between $5 and $6.50. No top grades were included in the arrivals.

Lambs also were steady with the best natives topping at $6.85. Packers paid $6.75 for their best selections.

[The following figures on hog prices include $2.25 per hundredweight collected by the federal government as processing tax. There is no processing tax on cattle or sheep. The price quotations given below are per 100 pounds of live animal.]

MARINELLO BEAUTY CULTURE SYSTEM

Are You About to Select a School to Train You in the Art of Beauty Culture?

Today thousands and thousands of women are earning good incomes in this field. Those trained by MARINELLO are happy in their work and enjoy the satisfaction of knowing they will always have steady employment without the worries and strain that constantly bother the untrained woman.

If it were possible for you to ask those who own their own business or who hold responsible and highly paid positions in various beauty shops "WHICH SCHOOL LEADS IN THE FIELD OF BEAUTY CULTURE?" we know the answer of most of these successful women would be "MARINELLO."

Visit Our School Today.

MARINELLO'S record of 55,000 graduates in the past 33 years cannot even be approached by any other school in the world!

NOW!—Marinello Offers New Easy Payment Plan

Free student employment service—or we will help you establish your own business. Complete set of instruments, textbooks, and all cosmetics furnished without charge to all students enrolling for day or evening classes now forming. How to Become a BEAUTY EXPERT

What are you ambitious to be? An "ordinary" mediocre beauty operator, trained to work only in the "cheapest" shops at minimum wages? Or—wouldn't you rather be a genuine beauty expert, with sufficient training, practical experience and technical knowledge to qualify you for a good paying position in a high class shop?

Fees Are Lower

Unquestionably you want to be an expert and earn more money. DeLEE trains its students to be real experts. At DeLEE you will receive individual personal instruction, under Madame Louise. You will learn the really fine points of beauty culture and hairdressing, in the shortest possible time.

Come in today and talk with Miss Stevens, the dean. Let her show you through this beautiful, light, clean, colorful school and explain the new low tuition free plan to you.

BURNHAM'S
(for 63 years the world's largest beauty school)
HELPS YOU GET STARTED.

If you are going into Beauty Culture, for the sake of your own future be sure to investigate the EXTRA ADVANTAGES that only Burnham's can give, advantages that will enable you to earn more money from the start. To show you how it pays to enroll at Burnham's, if you will call or write, we will give you as to how these EXTRA ADVANTAGES helped one graduate earn $15,000 a year; how another became manager over 35 operators; how still another was earning $75.00 a week 30 days after graduation; how another became manager of a large shop in six months, etc. These true stories and many others will open your eyes to what Burnham's can do for you.

Confidential Information

You have only to investigate to learn why MORE GIRLS ENROLL AT BURNHAM'S THAN AT ANY OTHER SCHOOL.

Terms Unbelievably Low

—if you act now. Most of your tuition can be paid after graduation. But call at once. We're open every day and on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings until 9:00 P. M. Call, write, or phone Randolph 3355 for Confidential Information Book.
